FRANCE DEMANDS "HONORABLE PEACE" AS CONDITION TO SURRENDER TO THE GERMANS

Churchill Hurls Defiance into Teeth of Nazis

Declares Great Britain Will Continue To Fight Despite Loss of France

Says British Have Become "The Sole Champions in Arms To Defend the World Cause

By The Associated Press

LONDON, June 17—Great Britain flung into Nazi Germany's teeth tonight the defiant decision to fight on alone — "unconquerable" — from the little island seat of world-wide empire.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in a two-minute radio address, said the fight would go on "until the curse of Hitler is lifted from the brows of mankind."

He told his people that they now have become "the sole champions in arms to defend the world cause."

Speaking for the British empire, he declared:

"We shall do our best to be worthy of this high honor."

Shortly after he spoke, the British government announced that in the last dark hours of yesterday, before France asked her Nazi foe for peace, Britain had offered to unite with France as one nation to continue the struggle.

The "indissoluble" union would have been complete, with one government, all-inclusive citizenship and joint organs of defense, foreign, financial and economic policies.

Apparently the French rejected the offer, thus bringing about fall of Premier Paul Reynaud's cabinet and the subsequent French plea for peace with Germany.

This development made it plainer than ever that England herself is menaced by the triple threat of blockade, bombardment and direct invasion from Hitler's legions.

"What has happened in France," Churchill said, "makes no difference" to Britain's "faith and purpose."

Will Defend Island

"We shall defend our island home and with the British empire around us we shall fight on unconquerable until the curse of Hitler is lifted from the brows of mankind.

"We are sure that in the end all will come right.

"The news from France is very bad and I grieve for the gallant French people who have fallen into this terrible misfortune.

"Nothing will alter our feeling toward them or our faith that the genius of France will rise again."

The talk was made at the request

Herbert K. Hyde Made Temporary G.O.P. Chairman

Dewey Supporter Will Open Republican National Convention

By RICHARD L. TURNER

PHILADELPHIA, June 17 (AP)—In an atmosphere heavily clouded by the crisis in the Allied cause abroad, the advance guard of the Republican convention met today to write its 1940 platform.

Unanimously, it elected a Dewey man—Herbert K. Hyde, of Oklahoma—as its temporary chairman, while one of the party's most intense anti-Deweyites — Kenneth Simpson, New York National committeeman — was telling friends that in his opinion the Dewey boom had "collapsed."

War Situation Paramount

The first thought of nearly everyone was for the war situation and what the Republicans as a party should say and do about it.

"We are standing at the crossroads of civilization," Hyde said in accepting the temporary chairmanship. "Half the world is in flames."

He added that "as our distinguished president has said, "in our own country a third of the nation is ill-fed, ill-housed and ill-clothed, and asked "why it is after seven years this vital question has not been solved by this administration."

Unless the United States can solve its domestic problems, he said, "it is unlikely that we can defend ourselves against attack from abroad."

In an interview later he declared:

"I do not believe the United States should undertake to guarantee the political integrity of territorial independence of any nation in Europe or Asia."

Gigantic Naval Program Provides For a New Fleet

Congress Asked To Authorize 84 Additional Warships

COST IS ESTIMATED AT $1,200,000,000

Would Provide Greatest Armada In History of the World

WASHINGTON, June 17, (AP) — The administration added a huge, new naval building program to its defense plans today, asking Congress to authorize construction of eighty-four additional warships in the next four years at an estimated cost of $1,200,000,000.

Coming on the heels of an eleven per cent naval expansion previously authorized, the new program was accepted generally on Capitol Hill as a move toward increasing American sea power to the point where it could meet simultaneous threats in Atlantic and Pacific.

Its completion in 1944 would give the United States a mighty armada of 618 vessels, far greater naval power than this or any other nation ever has had. With completion of the new program and presently authorized construction, the fleet would list:

Twenty-six battleships, fourteen airplane carriers, seventy cruisers, 338 destroyers, and 170 submarines.

This compares with the present fleet of fifteen battleships, five airplane carriers, thirty-five cruisers, 219 destroyers and ninety-five submarines.

The request for the additional naval expansion took the form of simple introduction of administration-sponsored bills by Representative inson (D.-Ga.), and Senator Walsh (D.-Mass.), the chairman of the House and Senate naval committees.

Vinson Asks Speed

"World conditions," Vinson said, "make it absolutely imperative that the navy be built up as rapidly as possible."

He said that about $80,000,000 would be required to finance a start on this program during the fiscal year beginning July 1 and, of this sum, an amount estimated at $50,000,000 would be spent on expansion of shipyards.

The naval construction bill arrived at the capitol while both Senate and House were speeding along other defense measures.

Unanimously, and without debate, the House approved a bill authorizing an increase in the regular army from 280,000 to 400,000 men.

Consider Tax Bill

The Senate, meantime, took up the $1,007,000,000 defense tax bill, expecting to pass it tomorrow or Wednesday.

The army expansion bill now goes to the Senate and on that side of the capitol some sentiment was evidenced for authorizing a still

Senate Votes To Increase Taxes

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP)—The Senate, working swiftly toward a final vote on the $1,007,000,000 defense tax bill, approved a $77,000,000 increase in amusement taxes today in place of $76,000,000 in tobacco taxes which had been included in the bill as it passed the House.

Under the amusement tax schedule, admissions costing ten cents or more would be subject to a ten per cent levy. The House had voted to impose the levy on admissions costing more than thirty cents.

Late in the day a controversy developed over a finance committee recommendation to boost the existing tax of thirty cents a gallon on rectified liquor to forty cents.

The committee's recommendation was approved 47 to 25, after a protest by Senator Minto (D.-Ind.) that "the producers of straight whiskey ought not to be allowed to take advantage of this unusual situation to gain a further economic advantage in this competitive field."

WARNS AGAINST WAR INVOLVEMENT

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is pictured as he warned America over the radio that "some of your representatives in Washington are considering a declaration of war" and that "the U. S. government cannot continue its pro-Allied policy without becoming involved in war with Germany." He called for mass petitions to Congress to "stop this trend towards war."

Mussolini and Hitler Meet Today To Agree On Terms for France

War Lords Expected To Discuss Separate Peace at Munich; Berlin and Rome Celebrating

By The Associated Press

ROME, June 17 —Premier Mussolini left blacked-out Rome tonight on a dimly-lighted train to confer with Adolph Hitler at Munich tomorrow on the joint peace terms they will put before France.

Secrecy surrounded the departure of the private train and few saw the premier leave.

Before taking the train, Mussolini had a long conference with Marshal Pietro Badoglio, chief of the general staff of Italian armed forces.

Such a meeting by the two war lords would come exactly three months after their secret two and one-half hour talk in Brenner pass, on the German-Italian border.

Embattled French Fighting against Tremendous Odds

Exhausted Troops Continue To Oppose Advance of Invaders

Hardest Fighting Is South of Paris on Loire River

By The Associated Press

BORDEAUX, JUNE 17—The armies of France fought on tonight along the whole confused front after their government asked Adolf Hitler for terms of peace and received no immediate reply.

With what strength of men and munitions was left after twelve days of ceaseless retreat against heavy odds, the exhausted French still defiantly demanded "an honorable peace" as the condition of surrender.

The French night communique said the fighting still was violent, that French resistance continued, and that their had been no letup in the fierce Nazi onslaught south and east from the river Loire.

Military spokesmen admitted, however, that the front was disorganized and that the Germans had split the French forces into four sections.

Report Hard Fighting

Hardest fighting was reported in the vicinity of Orleans, along the Loire river, seventy-five miles south of Paris.

(The Germans said they had taken Orleans and crossed the Loire.) The French commique told of desperate resistance all along the middle Loire but said German spearheads still stabbed deeper into France in the region of Dijon and Autun, east of the Loire, 150 to 175 miles southeast of Paris.

The French admitted German mechanized units had pushed into the departments of Doubs and Jura west of the Swiss frontier.

"At all points of contact," the communique said, "our troops still are fighting with the same bravery for the honor of the flag."

"We are ready to lay down arms if we can get an honorable peace," declared the new Foreign Minister Paul Baudoin in a broadcast to the world over the French radio.

"—But we are never ready to accept shameful conditions which mean the end of the spiritual freedom of our people.

"If we are given the choice between resistance and honor, the French army and the whole French people will know what to do."

Baudoin spoke as Adolf Hitler and Italy's Premier Benito Mussolini arranged to meet tomorrow to give the verdict.

British Offer of a "Solemn Act of Union" with France Is Rejected; No Reply from Hitler

BERLIN, June 18, (Tuesday) —(AP)—Germany will act toward France in her hour of defeat "not in a spirit of vengeance," the Lokal Anzeiger said today, but "with the necessary hardness and firmness which our responsibility to our soldiers and a thousand years of political experience demand."

By The Associated Press

France, down but not out, demanded of Germany last night (Monday) an "honorable peace" as a condition to surrender and announced her broken armies "still are fighting with the same bravery for the honor of the flag."

While Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini headed for a rendezvous "somewhere in the west" to draw up the peace terms asked by France, French Foreign Minister Paul Baudoin broadcast to the world:

"We are ready to lay down arms if we can get an honorable peace, but we are never ready to accept shameful conditions which mean the end of the spiritual freedom of our people.

"If we are given the choice between resistance and honor, the French army and the whole French people will know what to do."

Polius Still Fighting

As if there had been no talk of capitulation, the French high command's night communique said the dog-tired Poilus still were fighting with their accustomed bravery against the advancing Germans "at all points of contact."

Britain, who proclaimed her determination to fight it out with Germany and Italy alone, disclosed she had made an eleventh hour move to help her bettered ally by offering to conclude a "solemn act of union" with France.

The British offer was made "with the object of assisting France and supporting her to the utmost in the hours of stress through which she was passing, as also in the hope of encouraging the French government to continue their resistance."

The offer, made Sunday before the fall of the government of Premier Paul Reynaud, "obviously was rejected," London sources said, precipitating the government change in France.

Nazis Take Metz And Advance All Along Wide Front

Mighty French Fortress Falls to Onrushing Invaders

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, June 17—Adolf Hitler and his axis partner, Premier Mussolini, will meet, probably tomorrow somewhere in western Europe, to decide the fate of prostrate France and dictate terms to the republic which lay crushed tonight under the German military machine.

Mussolini was speeding northward from Rome to an unannounced destination for what promised to be a history-making conference with Hitler. Decisions influencing the French destiny possibly for generations were expected.

(Rome dispatches said Mussolini's destination was Munich, scene of the 1938 partitioning of Czecho-Slovakia by the four powers—Britain, Germany, Italy and France — but the reference to "somewhere in western Europe" was taken to mean that the fate of France might be decided at Versailles, where World War victors dictated peace to Germany).

French Resistance Crumbling

Meanwhile, the crumbling of French military resistance went on apace. The mighty French fortress at Metz fell before German onslaughts this afternoon, the German high command reported.

In the east, France virtually was wide open to tremendous blows which Germany's forces were in position to strike.

The position of France seemed dark and from a military point of view there remained only faint glimmers of desperate hope.

Financial Experts See Ray of Hope in the European Situation

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP)—The threat of a Nazi-dominated Europe failed to deliver a serious jolt to America's financial and economic hopes today, if the action of the stock market may be taken as a guide.

Securities and sensitive commodity prices generally dipped on the news of the French capitulation to Germany, but came back before the day was over to recover a fair part of the loss.

Financial authorities did not minimize the gravity of the possible prospect of having most of Europe's 400,000,000 souls, exclusive of Russia, brought under the domination of the German economic machine.

White House Conference

Washington evidently considered such a prospect, for a White House conference of four cabinet members was called to consider "the most effective manner of disposing profitably of export surpluses in the Western Hemisphere."

France, down but not out, demanded of Germany last night (Monday) an "honorable peace" as a condition to surrender and announced her broken armies "still are fighting with the same bravery for the honor of the flag."

While Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini headed for a rendezvous "somewhere in the west" to draw up the peace terms asked by France, French Foreign Minister Paul Baudoin broadcast to the world:

"We are ready to lay down arms if we can get an honorable peace, but we are never ready to accept shameful conditions which mean the end of the spiritual freedom of our people.

"If we are given the choice between resistance and honor, the French army and the whole French people will know what to do."

Polius Still Fighting

As if there had been no talk of capitulation, the French high command's night communique said the dog-tired Poilus still were fighting with their accustomed bravery against the advancing Germans "at all points of contact."

Britain, who proclaimed her determination to fight it out with Germany and Italy alone, disclosed she had made an eleventh hour move to help her bettered ally by offering to conclude a "solemn act of union" with France.

The British offer was made "with the object of assisting France and supporting her to the utmost in the hours of stress through which she was passing, as also in the hope of encouraging the French government to continue their resistance."

The offer, made Sunday before the fall of the government of Premier Paul Reynaud, "obviously was rejected," London sources said, precipitating the government change in France.

Mighty French Fortress Falls to Onrushing Invaders

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, June 17—Adolf Hitler and his axis partner, Premier Mussolini, will meet, probably tomorrow somewhere in western Europe, to decide the fate of prostrate France and dictate terms to the republic which lay crushed tonight under the German military machine.

Mussolini was speeding northward from Rome to an unannounced destination for what promised to be a history-making conference with Hitler. Decisions influencing the French destiny possibly for generations were expected.

(Rome dispatches said Mussolini's destination was Munich, scene of the 1938 partitioning of Czecho-Slovakia by the four powers—Britain, Germany, Italy and France — but the reference to "somewhere in western Europe" was taken to mean that the fate of France might be decided at Versailles, where World War victors dictated peace to Germany).

French Resistance Crumbling

Meanwhile, the crumbling of French military resistance went on apace. The mighty French fortress at Metz fell before German onslaughts this afternoon, the German high command reported.

In the east, France virtually was wide open to tremendous blows which Germany's forces were in position to strike.

Germany Warned U. S. Will Not Allow Invasion of the Americas

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — Legislation warning that the United States would not "acquiesce" in the transfer of Western Hemisphere colonies from one non-American nation to another was hustled through the Senate unanimously today a few hours after word came that France was asking peace with Germany.

The House planned to act on the same legislation tomorrow—the day upon which Hitler and Mussolini set to decide what peace terms will be imposed on France.

The Senate approved the legislation by a 76 to 0 vote after Senator Connally (D-Tex) had insisted such a declaration of policy was imperative and that 'cognizant of our own safety, the United States cannot tolerate the transfer of these possessions either by negotiation or by the sword."

The legislation said:

Financial Experts See Ray of Hope in the European Situation

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP)—The threat of a Nazi-dominated Europe failed to deliver a serious jolt to America's financial and economic hopes today, if the action of the stock market may be taken as a guide.

Securities and sensitive commodity prices generally dipped on the news of the French capitulation to Germany, but came back before the day was over to recover a fair part of the loss.

Financial authorities did not minimize the gravity of the possible prospect of having most of Europe's 400,000,000 souls, exclusive of Russia, brought under the domination of the German economic machine.

White House Conference

Washington evidently considered such a prospect for a White House conference of four cabinet members was called to consider "the most effective manner of disposing profitably of export surpluses in the Western Hemisphere."

Soviet Rushing Troops to New Bases in Baltic

Armies Concentrating in Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

STOCKHOLM, June 17 (AP)—Soviet Russia, which won important military concessions from Finland by war, rushed troops and tanks tonight to new Baltic bases seized from Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania by ultimatum.

The full military occupation of the three little nations made them an armed camp for Soviet troops, gave the Russians unchallenged command of the eastern end of the Baltic Sea, and put Red armies close to German frontiers.

There were reports, too, in the Swedish press that Russian soldiers were being concentrated in Soviet eastern Poland.

Results of the broadening of Russia's armed influence could not be foretold immediately.

Moscow's Reasons

Reasons for the moves were given by the Moscow government in three notes to Lithuania, entered by troops Saturday, and Latvia and Estonia, occupied at dawn today.

The notes demanded that the countries allow free entry of Soviet troops and reorganize their governments.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, said the government's reasons were that Lithuania Latvia and Estonia made a military agreement "directed against the U. S. S. R.," violated pacts with Russia, held secret conferences, and sought to bring Finland into a Baltic alliance.

Nazis Take Metz

Henri Philippe Petain, France's new premier, appeared to be a mere formality and the prospects were that he and France would be obliged to accept whatever decision the axis powers may impose and be resigned to impotence for the duration of the war.

Fuehrer Calls Conference

The conference between Hitler and Mussolini was called by the fuehrer immediately after France appealed today for an armistice and some sources advance the possibility it might be held at Versailles.

Versailles palace, near Paris, was the scene of treaties ending the Franco-Prussian war and the World war—one a German triumph and the other a German humiliation.

The sudden departure of a new group of foreign correspondents for Paris gave weight to the suggestion that Versailles had been chosen.

Mussolini was accompanied by Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and other political and military advisers.

Near Hitler, wherever he might be, were his Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and the military leaders who planned and executed the swift destruction of French military resistance.

The possible terms for France and the effect of a separate peace on axis policy toward England remains questions of unofficial speculation in Berlin.

Some believed that Hitler, having forced the English off the continent, might be satisfied not to risk a frontal attack on the British Isles.

Others recalled repeated German statements that the British empire was the real enemy and must be destroyed.

Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter declared: "The remainder of the Anglo-French troops on the continent will be annihilated. And we also know that then a great squaring of accounts with the main culprit, Britain, will follow."

The Nazi high command announced tonight the capture of the fortress of Metz, one of the strongpoints in the Maginot line, Germany surrendered Metz to the French in the Versailles settlement after the World War.

After Marshal Petain's history-making statement had been digested, the German evening press hailed the French move as "the political collapse of France." Readers were assured that "Petain can not regain what Reynaud lost for France."

The press and Nazi officialdom remained silent on the possible terms likely to be presented France, but both quarters have raised the cry since the start of the swift campaign in the west more than a month ago for "complete destruction" of the French army.

"No separate armistice with France is imaginable except in terms of complete capitulation," authorized sources said today. "We continue to fight."

Before the anouncement of the peace move the Germans reported some 1,000,000 French troops had been surrounded in the Saint Mihiel area, where American doughboys turned the tide of battle for the Allies in September, 1918.

The French peace move came as they were literally fighting with their backs to their own wall.

With the Maginot line in the rear being rapidly folded, the French about-faced as the Germans advanced along the Rhine-Marne canal southeastward.

Epinal, Toul, St. Mihiel, Verdun, all of which conjure up memories of the World War, fell into the hands of the Germans while artillery and bombers pounded the main French line.

Authorities here refused to estimate the extent of the victory over France. They said that uncounted prisoners and inestimable booty had been taken and that the French forces driven to the south were dissolving.

eral counterbalancing factors among them were:

1. The British Empire still controls the seas, and reports from many quarters indicate that not only are vital industri supplies in Central Europ limited, but a bad winter together with the blockade have made the food outlook there extremely serious for next winter.

2. French buying, of American goods, greatly expanded by war purchases, amounted to about twelve percent of our exports in the first four months of this year. This will presumably be shut off, but the British purchasing commission is expected to take over the French war materials now on order here.

3. American industry is already beginning to feel the stimulus of Uncle Sam's $5,000,000,000 arms spending program. Steel production was estimated for this week at 87.7 percent of capacity. Exports to the rest of the world of all American products have lately been running at the rate of $4,000,000,000 annually. That contributes, on the basis of current estimates, only 5.7 percent of our national income.

Wall Street saw a flurry of selling in the stock market in the morning, which depressed shares of many leading corporations $1 to $5 but this was largely regained before the day was over. Wheat at Chicago dropped more than six cents a bushel, but was off only 2½ to 3 cents at the end of the day.

Military Training Course for Civilians Will Start July 5

BALTIMORE, June 17 (AP) — A new thirty-day military training course to acquaint business and professional men with army functions and the preparedness program is scheduled for July 5, Maj. Walter E. Myers, Military Intelligence Reserves, Third Corps Area, announced today.

Tentative arrangements for the course were made today at a conference between Third Corps Area army officials and representatives of the Military Training Camps Association.

Applications must be submitted by June 28. Recruiting activities will begin immediately, Major Myers said.

Plans call for 300 men, between the ages of 25 and 50, to be trained so that they can pass on to their communities accurate information about the problems and needs of national defense, he added.

The business and professional men are to take the course at their own expense. They will be trained in conjunction with the Citizens' Military Training Corps but will be quartered separately.

The training will consist of a modified "basic C.M.T.C. course" suitable for men of more advanced age and experience, Major Myers continued. Candidates are to pay their own transportation expenses, subsistence and other incidentals but will be loaned clothing and equipment.

Mussolini

which preceded Germany's blitzrieg on Scandinavia and western Europe.

The mention of Munich as the meeting place of the dictators recalled that it was there in September, 1938, that Hitler and Mussolini, with Neville Chamberlain, then British Prime Minister, and Edouard Daladier, then French premier, arranged the settlement which eventually doomed Czecho-Slovakia.

Word that the French were suing for peace with Germany caused a flash of jubilation through Italy. Thousands of Italians took it as a sign that the war—which they entered at the call of Mussolini just a week ago—soon would be over.

At the same time, the Italian high command reported aerial assaults on Allied naval bases and flying fields yesterday in Malta, Corsica and Tunisia.

Although Italian forces have been reported active on land especially in pushing beyond the Alpine border into France, Italy has been fighting principally in the air.

New posters which were plastered on the walls of Rome quoting Italian heroes on the Italianism of Nice, now belonging to France, intended to claim that city along with the French region of Savoy. Both once belonged to Italy.

Corsica, the island off western Italy, Tunisia, in Africa, and Jibuti, the French-held port which is the terminus of the only railroad running to Italy's Ethiopian possessions, are the other Italian objectives in the war.

A joint attack on Britain, in which the Germans would strike direct from Europe while the Italians would hammer at bases in the Mediterranean, also is expected to be discussed by the two dictators.

Rumors of secondary action spread in Rome, but on the whole were discredited.

One was that Russia has asked Rumania to send a delegation to Moscow immediately to discuss the return of Bessarabia to Russia. That province in eastern Rumania went to Rumania after the World War.

Another was that Hungary plans to move into the Transylvanian regions of Rumania, which Rumania also gained after the World War.

Still another rumor was that Japan intended taking Indo-China in any break-up of the French empire.

Wounded French Cry for Relief In Switzerland

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, JR.

Porrentruy, June 17 (AP)—Wounded and war-weary, a blind and halt column of men who can fight no more for France crossed tonight to this Franco-Swiss frontier town and raised the feeble cry of relief: "Vive la Suisse."

In the caravan were 150 — some eyeless, legless, armless, shell torn. They cheered when they were told they had come at last to rest. For five days the group of seriously wounded — they once numbered nearer 200 — were shunted from field hospital to field hospital behind the fighting lines. Often they tried to sleep in their trucks, within the sound of battle.

Here they were promised hospitalization. Here they heard that France has asked for terms of surrender.

"So the war is over," said Pierre Denis of Limoges, whose feet were shot from under him in the battle of Flanders. "I cannot say I am sorry, even if we lost. We are all so tired—so weary."

Like the rest he was carried from the battlefields to hospital trucks, to hospitals in the field, then to Paris.

"We spent one night there in a real bed," he recalled. "Even if we did all have to go again on stretchers, it was wonderful."

The wounded were moved seven times. Some died en route.

Behind the critically wounded came others. They had wounds, but could stagger along the roads unaided.

Swiss officers promised them care in military hospitals in the Alps.

Tired as they were, they were hopeful.

"Maybe we'll get well again," said one. He was blind.

Embattled French

the words "they shall not pass" at Verdun in the world war, gave his countrymen today the decision that France must yield.

Explanation by Petain

Petain made the sad explanation that France, on her knees before an overpowering enemy "superior in numbers and arms," had to give up, but both he and Baudoin indicated that France demanded honor as well as peace.

Praising the help of Great Britain, Poland, Norway, Holland, and Belgium, Baudoin said "we all were insufficiently prepared for this war, with its new methods.

"Our Allies were unable to give us aid which the French army, as the vanguard, needed. That is why Premier Petain has asked the enemy today for negotiations to cease fighting."

Fierce fighting has swept deep into France and erased the supposedly impregnable Maginot line, like an ancient myth thrown down by the reality of modern arms.

A French military spokesman admitted France no longer had a front to the enemy and that Nazi motorized columns had cut French armies into four ribbons.

Hitler deferred the sought-for stoppage of war on France in order to confer with his axis partner on the terms they will demand to call off their armies.

Expects To Lose Colonies

France fully expected the price of the hostilities she joined with Great Britain last Sept. 3 will be colonies, long disputed border areas such as Alsace-Lorraine on Germany's frontier and Nice and Savoy on Italy's Corsica in the Mediterranean and probably the French navy, second in Europe only to Britain's.

Petain told his red-eyed countrymen, weary and saddened beyond description, that he already had opened negotiations to stop the fighting.

In a firm voice, the 84-year-old soldier-diplomat said he had asked Hitler last night whether he was willing as one soldier to another to discuss peace—"with honor."

So far as was known at night fall, fighting was still going on but apparently with reduced intensity.

The French armies have been fighting a slow withdrawal through the heart of France for twelve days since the main German attack started along the Somme and Aisne rivers.

The German lines have pushed into a great curve sweeping from the English channel seventy-five miles westward and South of Paris to the Loire river where they cut across to the Swiss frontier in the region of the Doubs river valley.

The defeat of the French army was acknowledged in the statement of a military spokesman who said at the afternoon press conference that there now is no continuous French front. The French, he said, had lost great quantities of artillery and other equipment.

Up to the late afternoon, this spokesman said, there had been no response to France's plea for peace.

It was this German advance which decided Paul Reynaud to resign the premiership last night to make way for the elevation of Petain as the one man he considered able to rally the French behind him for the fateful decision.

The end of French resistance was foreshadowed in this sudden replacement of the Reynaud government by a "peace cabinet" headed by Petain, the last of France's old marshals.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Tiny England, hub of the vast British commonwealth, stands alone in Europe to wage war with Germany and Italy.

The full import of French capitulation awaits clarification in the surrender formula to be dictated jointly by Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini. But British leadership can be certain that those terms will be framed not only to liquidate France; but to nullify British seapower, the only major factor besides British courage still standing between England and the fate that has overtaken France.

Confusion that defies any clear picturing of the scene in France covers the last tragic phases of the lost battle there. When German Armistice terms are made known, however, it is probable that new disasters for Britain will be disclosed.

May Surrender British

Unless there is a desperate attempt to evacuate whatever British troops remain in France, it seems inevitable that they, too, must be surrendered. Their escape without aid of French armies to protect their retreat would be a greater miracle than the escape from Dunkerque. Nor can German terms fail to include a demand on France for right of way for onrushing Nazi armies to blast at the British if they do not surrender.

Yet that is only one item, and perhaps a relatively minor one, of the grim meaning for the British of the French decision to lay down arms. It remains to be seen whether surrender of the French fleet and of French troops in the huge Allied army built up in the near east to guard the Suez canal is not also demanded as the price of cessation of hostilities in France itself.

British Navy Intact

Britain's navy remains substantially intact. London rates it stronger today than at the outbreak of the war. Yet surrender of the French fleet in the Mediterranean or its destruction by its own crews to escape that fate would leave the British forces in that sea in grave jeopardy.

It would bring British naval strength on that eastern front down perilously close to that of Italy. With the Germans masters of the west coast of the continent from the Franco-Spanish border to the Norwegian-Russian sea frontiers in the Arctic, the bulk of Britain's navy must stand guard about England herself.

Heavy British fleet reinforcements in the Mediterranean would seem impossible in the circumstances; yet the end of the fighting in France could release German air armadas to join the already great Italian air fleets in smashing at British sea power.

As for France, she has been eliminated as a factor in European and world affairs for at least a generation to come, unless British bulldog resistance still can balk Germany. Even if the German hosts in France turned about and left her now to her own devices, which they will not, it would be years before she could create new armies and war gear.

French Nazi Regime Likely

What is almost certain to happen in a France defeated, beaten to her knees, is the rise under German sponsorship of a French totalitarian regime on the Nazi model. Hitler's peace formula might provide for that. It would mark a step in a program of Franco-German reapprochment in his eyes, and further sever the traditional ties between England and France.

Admittedly, however, the collapse of France has created situations impossible of accurate forecast, both military and political. Her vast overseas possessions that dot the globe, even in the Western Hemisphere, are now as orphaned as are those of Denmark, of Norway, of Belgium and of Holland. As to none of them has Hitler yet indicated his purposes beyond his oft repeated demand for the return to the Reich of once German territories.

And it is Hitler who will dominate the German-Italian discussion of peace terms to be imposed on France. In Berlin the thought was expressed that Italy had come too late into the war to expect a major share of the spoils.

The German-Italian suggestion that Spain attend the peace conversations may be of great significance. It points toward a demand that France recognize Spanish claims to British-held Gibraltar, just as the peace pact could also undertake to bestow on Italy any French interest in the British-held Suez canal.

With the fall of France, Hitler has an opportunity to place himself before the world as a generous victor seeking only peace in Europe. The terms he lays down will be examined by the world for some hint as to his true purposes.

of the British press that Churchill give a message to the people of Great Britain and of America.

Churchill made no mention of the vital issue forthcoming from France's plea for peace: the disposition of the French navy.

With France's fleet hitched to its own to wage long-range naval and economic war on the axis powers, Britons saw the possibility of a sudden turn back to the conception of "long war."

However, it was considered that the axis powers might demand the French navy as part of their price for peace. This poses the question of whether the French fleet, under British admiralty command in a deal which gave the French control of the Allied land forces, could actually be surrendered by the French even with the axis acceptance of peace dependent upon it.

France's Plea Tragic

France's plea for peace was tragic news for the United Kingdom, but it was neither overwhelming nor wholly a surprise.

The British recalled and published with pride Hitler's own words from "Mein Kampf" that Great Britain is "the most valuable ally in the world" when aroused.

Englishmen quoted to each other the words of Prime Minister Churchill June 4:

"We will defend our island whatever the cost. We will fight on the beaches and landing grounds, in the fields, in the streets, on the hills.

"We will never surrender, and if—which I do not for a moment believe—this island or a large part of it be subjugated and starved, then our empire beyond the seas, armed and guarded by the British fleet, will carry on the struggle."

British "Expectations"

In this hour of considering the worst which might follow a separate peace between France and Germany, these expectations were advanced:

1. An attempt might be made to encircle, blockade and starve the British isles. The British navy, most powerful in the world, is considered equal to the task of preventing such an achievement.

2. Germany might try to bomb Britain into submission. This method was considered most likely to be tried first. The defense is a high-speed aviation production program intended to insure air supremacy over the isles. This program depends on unlimited supplies of war, including oil, from the dominions and the United States.

3. Invasion may be attempted. This has been expected for weeks. Besides the great fleet, the Royal Air Force and ground troops of the amateur army are anxious to demonstrate that a country which has not been successfully invaded since 1066 will make short work of parachute troops or any others arriving by trick devices.

It is plain that much depends on timing. An England worn down by siege and semi-starvation might not be able to resist an invasion as it could today.

Likewise a combination of the blockade and air bombardment might defeat the British eventually. The supply lines must be kept open.

Said a government spokesman in explaining that the French move for an armistice was known in advance:

"In their unshakable determination to achieve victory no matter what the cost, the government and the empire have the united support of their people."

There was little criticism of France.

The news described the French decision as "tragically inevitable." Said the Standard:

"Since the days those first essential bridgeheads on the Meuse were lost, an overpowering weight of metal and manpower has been hurled at her (France). She saw her armies hurled back, her womenfolk and children machine-gunned southward with relentless barbarity.

"All through the weeks of the major war there has been no relief, no pity. Her brave sons stood astride the road as long as the human body could stand the test."

The main uncertainty in British minds was, what will happen to the French fleet? If it is given over to the Germans—and it may be—the blow would be serious.

The French navy is the second strongest in Europe, although it does not begin to compare with the British.

Prime Minister Churchill will speak again in Parliament tomorrow. He is expected to reiterate the British intent to fight until victory has been achieved regardless of the cost or the time.

The Bank of England banned dealings in Canadian and United States stocks and bonds. The order was the latest in a series to conserve foreign exchange.

All Dutch, Norwegian and Polish ships bound for French ports were ordered to proceed instead to British ports.

Sir Nevile Henderson, last British ambassador to Germany, said he expected that Germany would attempt to invade England at once.

Richard Arlen Beaten As Alleged Love Thief

HOLLYWOOD, June 17. (AP)—Film actor Richard Arlen was attacked and severely beaten today at the Wilshire country club golf course by William Taite, 30, of Hollywood, who accused him of stealing Mrs. Taite's love.

Olin Dutra, golf professional, and George Doyle, Arlen's caddy, pulled Taite off the actor. Taite was booked on suspicion of extortion after Arlen told officers he held him prisoner more than an hour ten weeks ago and later came to his home threatening to beat him in efforts to collect $1,000.

Taite told police he had been after Arlen because "he broke up my home and got my wife so she wouldn't even look at me."

Arlen vehemently denied this, saying, "I don't even know his wife."

Italians in U. S. Loyal, LaGuardia Says in Address

Mayor of New York Is Speaker at Meeting in Baltimore

BALTIMORE, June 17 (AP)—Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York said tonight that "no one can tell me that the Italian people x x x were ever made to goosestep in back of any dictator."

Speaking at a meeting of Baltimore Italian-American societies, LaGuardia said that Italians in the United States are undivided in opposition to "the cruel philosophies of totalitarian states."

Assistant Secretary of State A. A. Berle urged that all Americans of Italian ancestry "make it clear to every outside element in the world that Americans are undividedly loyal to the United States."

"Nothing must take place in this country," LaGuardia declared, "that would have even the remotest semblance of division.

"I want to appeal to the whole country that there be not one scintilla of doubt against any citizen of Italian blood."

The mayor referred to the crisis facing France, and said "the territory of a happy country may have been conquered, but the spirit of the French people has not and never will be conquered.

"No one can tell me that the Italian people will forget 'Ave Maria' to say 'Ave Hitler.'

"The blood and sweat of the Italian people helped build this country, and we want everyone to know that we are one family together with our sister republics in this hemisphere, and that we all say hands off to all dictators."

Ready To Lay

there still was no reply from their peace offer made by aged Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, World War hero who succeeded Paul Reynaud to the premiership.

The shadow cast on the Western Hemisphere by events in Europe was projected into sharp relief in Washington with Senate approval of legislation declaring the United States would not acquiesce in any transfer of New World possessions from one non-American nation to another.

France, like Britain, has important outposts on this side of the Atlantic.

The French, forced to bow to overwhelming enemy arms, awaited the verdict calmly hoping for the best but fearful of the worst.

Churchill Challenges Nazis

Across the English channel Prime Minister Churchill defiantly laid down the challenge that Britain "shall fight on unconquerable until the curse of Hitler is lifted from the brow of mankind."

"What has happened in France makes no difference to British faith and purpose," Churchill shouted to the axis partners.

"Britain has become the sole champions now in arms to defend the world cause. We shall do our best to be worthy of this high honor; We are sure that in the end all will come right."

With the hard-pressed French army shattered, the famed Maginot line collapsing and Paris and most of her rich industrial region in German hands, France appealed to Hitler for peace.

The fuehrer immediately called a conference with Mussolini. Il Duce and his son-in-law Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, answered the summons and left Rome last (Monday) night.

There was some speculation that Hitler might dramatically choose the hall of Versailles, seat of the peace treaties after the wars of 1870 and 1918, for his historic conference.

The Hitler-Mussolini conference, which will have a vital bearing on the continued war against Britain, was announced coincidentally with the appeal of French Premier Henri Philippe Petain, 84-year-old World War hero.

"With a broken heart," Petain, who immortalized the words "they shall not pass" at Verdun in the World War, sadly told his people that France had been forced to her knees before an enemy "superior in numbers and arms."

What About French Fleet?

At the beginning of the war last Sept. 3 the French assumed command of allied land forces and the British took over combined Allied naval operations.

With the French fleet, the Germans and Italians would have added sea power against Britain; without it the British would have an overwhelming sea edge.

Even as their venerable French leader appealed for peace, the broken French armies fought bravely with what they had left. But that wasn't enough; the Germans during the day drove to the Swiss border, reported some 1,000,000 Frenchmen trapped in the St. Mihiel area alone and stormed without pause through the Maginot lines, now only a broken shell of France's one-time symbol of security.

Metz, which Germany surrenderd to France after the World War and which subsequently became one of the key fortresses of the Maginot fortifications, fell.

The possible terms Hitler and Mussolini would lay down for France and the effect of a separate peace on axis policy was a question of unofficial speculation in Berlin.

Some Berlin quarters believe that Hitler, having forced the British off the continent, might refrain from a frontal assault on the British Isles.

Others recalled repeated Nazi declarations that Britain was the real enemy; that she "must be destroyed."

The French realized their price for peace would be steep.

Nazis May Take Colonies

They feared they would be called upon to hand over colonies long-coveted by the Germans and Italians; disputed border areas such as Alsace-Lorraine on Germany's frontier, Nice and Savoy on Italy's; the Island of Corsica in the Mediterranean; and the Frech navy—if the Germans could lay hands on it.

In Madrid, usually reliable sources said Spain's Generalissimo Francisco had been invited to act as intermediary in French-German armistice negotiations and to send delegates to any subsequent peace discussions.

Paul Reynaud, who resigned as French premier Sunday to be succeeded by Petain, was reported in a German broadcast to have boarded a clipper plane at Lisbon, Portugal, for the United States.

Italians joined the Germans in jubilant celebrations. The Italians, who entered the war just a week ago, took it as a sign that it soon would be over.

Italian Aviators Active

The Italian high command reported Sunday aerial assaults — practically the only kind of warfare they have waged thus far—on Allied naval bases and flying fields in Malta, Corsica and Tunisia.

Italian and British troops clashed in North Africa but unfavorable weather conditions interferred with earial activity on both sides.

Soviet Russia, on the march again, rushed troops and tanks to new Baltic bases seized by ultimatum from Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania.

The immediate results of Russia's influence could not be foretold, but it gave Moscow unchallenged command of the eastern end of the Baltic and put its armies on new German frontiers.

Russia, which won similar concessions from Finland by fighting, gave as her official explanation a charge that the three little neighbors had entered into a military conspiracy against her.

Russian influence in Turkey was reflected in an Istanbul report that the Turkish foreign minister would leave soon for Moscow, foreshadowing a struggle between Moscow and Berlin for the favor of that Balkan state.

Turkey is bound to the Allies in a mutual asistance pact but is excused under its terms from fighting Russia. Moscow is understood to have told the Turks that their entry into the European conflict at this time is "not desirable."

greater increase in enlisted personnel.

Senator Lodge (R.-Mass.), said it might be advisable to raise the figure to 750,000, a point of view that some others endorsed.

Elsewhere, there were these other defense developments:

The army, reporting in the enlistment campaign already under way, said it had received 8,951 volunteers since June 1 and predicted its goal of 15,000 by July 1 would be easily reached.

President Roosevelt signed two bills authorizing a naval air force of 10,000 planes and 16,000 pilots, and an increase in the fleet by twenty-one warships and twenty-two auxiliary vessels.

members of the Resolutions committee, which is to write the 1940 platform for submission to the full committee next week, were present. They included Alf M. Landon, the party's 1936 presidential nominee.

He told reporters that he favored "all proper aid to the Allies that does not involve" this country in activities which would lead it into the war, "unless the vital interests of America are threatened in a concrete way."

11 Army Fliers Killed in Crash Of Two Bombers

Big Machines Come Together Above Queens Borough, New York

By DEVON FRANCIS

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP)—Two army bombers collided a half mile above a residential section of Queens Borough today, burst into flames and carried eleven army fliers to death in the burning wreckage.

Two homes were fired by flaming gasoline but by what seemed like a miracle no civilians in the thickly populated area were killed. One woman was burned.

All aboard the two bombers were killed. Army officers immediately opened an inquiry.

Two Students Killed

Another mid-air collision, at Tulsa, Okla., cost the lives of two students and an instructor during routine maneuvers. One of the dead was a government cadet. Two persons on the ground were injured.

The crash here, a few miles west of Mitchel Field, Long Island army air post, cost the lives of six pilots, one commissioned officer and five men holding reserve commissions, and five enlisted men. It happened only a few minutes after the ships took off from Mitchel Field.

Lieut. Paul Burlingame, West Point graduate and native of Louisville, Ky., leading a three-plane "V" formation, had radioed the pilots of the two "wing" planes to change positions, he himself intending to drop back to the left wing, when the collision occurred.

"(2) That if such transfer or attempt to transfer should appear likely, the United States shall, in addition to other measures, immediately consult with the other American republics to determine upon the steps which should be taken to safeguard their common interests."

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) cautioned the Senate that the obligation of the United States under the Monroe doctrine "may fall due within sixty days."

The Senate vote on this resolution climaxed a day of developments resulting from the capitulation of France.

Freeze French Credits

President Roosevelt signed documents "freezing" French credits and capital in this country. Officials estimated that France has in excess of $1,000,000,000 of gold, cash and securities here. Similar freezing orders had been applied to assets of other invaded countries to prevent Germany from gaining possession of the wealth.

The United States government was advised that Britain would take over French armament orders in this country.

Behind these developments ran an undertone of worry in official circles over the possibility that Germany might seize the French fleet.

Should Germany get the French navy, the combined Germany-Italian-French fleet would outnumber the British fleet in all categories other than cruiser and aircraft carriers and would have a similar superiority over the United States fleet.

Soviet Rushing Troops to New Bases in Baltic

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

STOCKHOLM, June 17 (AP)—Soviet Russia, which won important military concessions from Finland by war, rushed troops and tanks tonight to new Baltic bases seized from Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania by ultimatum.

The full military occupation of the three little nations made them an armed camp for Soviet troops, gave the Russians unchallenged command of the eastern end of the Baltic Sea, and put Red armies close to German frontiers.

There were reports, too, in the Swedish press that Russian soldiers were being concentrated in Soviet eastern Poland.

Results of the broadening of Russia's armed influence could not be foretold immediately.

Moscow's Reasons

Reasons for the moves were given by the Moscow government in three notes to Lithuania, entered by troops Saturday, and Latvia and Estonia, occupied at dawn today.

The notes demanded that the counties allow free entry of Soviet troops and reorganize their governments.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, said the government's reasons were that Lithuania Latvia and Estonia made a military agreement "directed against the U. S. S. R." violated pacts with Russia, held secret conferences, and sought to bring Finland into a Baltic alliance.

Henri Philippe Petain, France's new premier, appeared to be a mere formality and the prospects were that he and France would be obliged to accept whatever decision the axis powers may impose and be resigned to impotence for the duration of the war.

Fuehrer Calls Conference

The conference between Hitler and Mussolini was called by the fuehrer immediately after France appealed today for an armistice and some sources advance the possibility it might be held at Versailles.

Versailles palace, near Paris, was the scene of treaties ending the Franco-Prussian war and the World war—one a German triumph and the other a German humiliation.

The sudden departure of a new group of foreign correspondents for Paris gave weight to the suggestion that Versailles had been chosen.

Mussolini was accompanied by Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and other political and military advisers.

Near Hitler, wherever he might be, were his Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and the military leaders who planned and executed the swift destruction of French military resistance.

The possible terms for France and the effect of a separate peace on axis policy toward England remains questions of unofficial speculation in Berlin.

Some believed that Hitler, having forced the English off the continent, might be satisfied not to risk a frontal attack on the British Isles.

Others recalled repeated German statements that the British empire was the real enemy and must be destroyed.

Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter declared: "The remainder of the Anglo-French troops on the continent will be annihilated. And we also know that then a great squaring of accounts with the main culprit, Britain, will follow."

The Nazi high command announced tonight the capture of the fortress of Metz, one of the strongpoints in the Maginot line, Germany surrendered Metz to the French in the Versailles settlement after the World War.

After Marshal Petain's history-making statement had been digested, the German evening press hailed the French move as "the political collapse of France." Readers were assured that "Petain can not regain what Reynaud lost for France."

The press and Nazi officialdom remained silent on the possible terms likely to be presented France, but both quarters have raised the cry since the start of the swift campaign in the west more than a month ago for "complete destruction" of the French army.

"No separate armistice with France is imaginable except in terms of complete capitulation," authorized sources said today. "We continue to fight."

Before the anouncement of the peace move the Germans reported some 1,000,000 French troops had been surrounded in the Saint Mihiel area, where American doughboys turned the tide of battle for the Allies in September, 1918.

The French peace move came as they were literally fighting with their backs to their own wall.

With the Maginot line in the rear being rapidly folded, the French about-faced as the Germans advanced along the Rhine-Marne canal southeastward.

Epinal, Toul, St. Mihiel, Verdun, all of which conjure up memories of the World War, fell into the hands of the Germans while artillery and bombers pounded the main French line.

Authorities here refused to estimate the extent of the victory over France. They said that uncounted prisoners and inestimable booty had been taken and that the French forces driven to the south were dissolving.

eral counterbalancing factors among them were:

1. The British Empire still controls the seas, and reports from many quarters indicate that not only are vital industri supplies in Central Europ limited, but a bad winter together with the blockade have made the food outlook there extremely serious for next winter.

2. French buying, of American goods, greatly expanded by war purchases, amounted to about twelve percent of our exports in the first four months of this year. This will presumably be shut off, but the British purchasing commission is expected to take over the French war materials now on order here.

3. American industry is already beginning to feel the stimulus of Uncle Sam's $5,000,000,000 arms spending program. Steel production was estimated for this week at 87.7 percent of capacity. Exports to the rest of the world of all American products have lately been running at the rate of $4,000,000,000 annually. That contributes, on the basis of current estimates, only 5.7 percent of our national income.

Wall Street saw a flurry of selling in the stock market in the morning, which depressed shares of many leading corporations $1 to $5 but this was largely regained before the day was over. Wheat at Chicago dropped more than six cents a bushel, but was off only 2½ to 3 cents at the end of the day.

Military Training Course for Civilians Will Start July 5

BALTIMORE, June 17 (AP) — A new thirty-day military training course to acquaint business and professional men with army functions and the preparedness program is scheduled for July 5, Maj. Walter E. Myers, Military Intelligence Reserves, Third Corps Area, announced today.

Tentative arrangements for the course were made today at a conference between Third Corps Area army officials and representatives of the Military Training Camps Association.

Applications must be submitted by June 28. Recruiting activities will begin immediately, Major Myers said.

Plans call for 300 men, between the ages of 25 and 50, to be trained so that they can pass on to their communities accurate information about the problems and needs of national defense, he added.

The business and professional men are to take the course at their own expense. They will be trained in conjunction with the Citizens Military Training Corps but will be quartered separately.

The training will consist of a modified "basic C.M.T.C. course" suitable for men of more advanced age and experience, Major Myers continued. Candidates are to pay their own transportation expenses, subsistence and other incidentals but will be loaned clothing and equipment.

Mussolini

which preceded Germany's blitzrieg on Scandinavia and western Europe.

The mention of Munich as the meeting place of the dictators recalled that it was there in September, 1938, that Hitler and Mussolini, with Neville Chamberlain, then British Prime Minister, and Edouard Daladier, then French premier, arranged the settlement which eventually doomed Czecho-Slovakia.

Word that the French were suing for peace with Germany caused a flash of jubilation through Italy. Thousands of Italians took it as a sign that the war—which they entered at the call of Mussolini just a week ago—soon would be over.

At the same time, the Italian high command reported aerial assaults on Allied naval bases and flying fields yesterday in Malta, Corsica and Tunisia.

Although Italian forces have been reported active on land especially in pushing beyond the Alpine border into France, Italy has been fighting principally in the air.

New posters which were plastered on the walls of Rome quoting Italian heroes on the Italianism of Nice, now belonging to France, intended to claim that city along with the French region of Savoy. Both once belonged to Italy.

Corsica, the island off western Italy, Tunisia, in Africa, and Jibuti, the French-held port which is the terminus of the only railroad running to Italy's Ethiopian possessions, are the other Italian objectives in the war.

A joint attack on Britain, in which the Germans would strike direct from Europe while the Italians would hammer at bases in the Mediterranean, also is expected to be discussed by the two dictators.

Rumors of secondary action spread in Rome, but on the whole were discredited.

One was that Russia has asked Rumania to send a delegation to Moscow immediately to discuss the return of Bessarabia to Russia. That province in eastern Rumania went to Rumania after the World War.

Another was that Hungary plans to move into the Transylvanian regions of Rumania, which Rumania also gained after the World War.

Still another rumor was that Japan intended taking Indo-China in any break-up of the French empire.

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, JR.

Porrentruy, June 17 (AP)—Wounded and war-weary, a blind and halt column of men who can fight no more for France crossed tonight to this Franco-Swiss frontier town and raised the feeble cry of relief: "Vive la Suisse."

In the caravan were 150 — some eyeless, legless, armless, shell torn.

They cheered when they were told they had come at last to rest. For five days the group of seriously wounded — they once numbered nearer 200 — were shunted from field hospital to field hospital behind the fighting lines. Often they tried to sleep in their trucks, within the sound of battle.

Here they were promised hospitalization. Here they heard that France has asked for terms of surrender.

"So the war is over," said Pierre Denis of Limoges, whose feet were shot from under him in the battle of Flanders. "I cannot say I am sorry, even if we lost. We are all so tired—so weary."

Like the rest he was carried from the battlefields to hospital trucks, to hospitals in the field, then to Paris.

"We spent one night there in a real bed," he recalled. "Even if we did all have to go again on stretchers, it was wonderful."

The wounded were moved seven times. Some died en route.

Behind the critically wounded came others. They had wounds, but could stagger along the roads unaided.

Swiss officers promised them care in military hospitals in the Alps.

Tired as they were, they were hopeful.

"Maybe we'll get well again," said one. He was blind.

Embattled French

the words "they shall not pass" at Verdun in the world war, gave his countrymen today the decision that France must yield.

Explanation by Petain

Petain made the sad explanation that France, on her knees before an overpowering enemy "superior in numbers and arms," had to give up, but both he and Baudoin indicated that France demanded honor as well as peace.

Praising the help of Great Britain, Poland, Norway, Holland, and Belgium, Baudoin said "we all were insufficiently prepared for this war, with its new methods.

"Our Allies were unable to give us aid which the French army, as the vanguard, needed. That is why Premier Petain has asked the enemy today for negotiations to cease fighting."

Fierce fighting has swept deep into France and erased the supposedly impregnable Maginot line, like an ancient myth thrown down by the reality of modern arms.

A French military spokesman admitted France no longer had a front to the enemy and that Nazi motorized columns had cut French armies into four ribbons.

Hitler deferred the sought-for stoppage of war on France in order to confer with his axis partner on the terms they will demand to call off their armies.

Expects To Lose Colonies

France fully expected the price of the hostilities she joined with Great Britain last Sept. 3 will be colonies, long disputed border areas such as Alsace-Lorraine on Germany's frontier and Nice and Savoy on Italy's Corsica in the Mediterranean and probably the French navy, second in Europe only to Britain's.

Petain told his red-eyed countrymen, weary and saddened beyond description, that he already had opened negotiations to stop the fighting.

In a firm voice, the 84-year-old soldier-diplomat said he had asked Hitler last night whether he was willing as one soldier to another to discuss peace—"with honor."

So far as was known at night fall, fighting was still going on but apparently with reduced intensity.

The French armies have been fighting a slow withdrawal through the heart of France for twelve days since the main German attack started along the Somme and Aisne rivers.

The German lines have pushed into a great curve sweeping from the English channel seventy-five miles westward and South of Paris to the Loire river where they cut across to the Swiss frontier in the region of the Doubs river valley.

The defeat of the French army was acknowledged in the statement of a military spokesman who said at the afternoon press conference that there now is no continuous French front. The French, he said, had lost great quantities of artillery and other equipment.

Up to the late afternoon, this spokesman said, there had been no response to France's plea for peace.

It was this German advance which decided Paul Reynaud to resign the premiership last night to make way for the elevation of Petain as the one man he considered able to rally the French behind him for the fateful decision.

The end of French resistance was foreshadowed in this sudden replacement of the Reynaud government by a "peace cabinet" headed by Petain, the last of France's old marshals.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Tiny England, hub of the vast British commonwealth, stands alone in Europe to wage war with Germany and Italy.

The full import of French capitulation awaits clarification in the surrender formula to be dictated jointly by Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini. But British leadership can be certain that those terms will be framed not only to liquidate France; but to nullify British seapower, the only major factor besides British courage still standing between England and the fate that has overtaken France.

Confusion that defies any clear picturing of the scene in France covers the last tragic phases of the lost battle there. When German Armistice terms are made known, however, it is probable that new disasters for Britain will be disclosed.

May Surrender British

Unless there is a desperate attempt to evacuate whatever British troops remain in France, it seems inevitable that they, too, must be surrendered. Their escape without aid of French armies to protect their retreat would be a greater miracle than the escape from Dunkerque. Nor can German terms fail to include a demand on France for right of way for onrushing Nazi armies to blast at the British if they do not surrender.

Yet that is only one item, and perhaps a relatively minor one, of the grim meaning for the British of

of the British press that Churchill give a message to the people of Great Britain and of America.

Churchill made no mention of the vital issue forthcoming from France's plea for peace: the disposition of the French navy.

With France's fleet hitched to its own to wage long-range naval and economic war on the axis powers, Britons saw the possibility of a sudden turn back to the conception of "long war."

However, it was considered that the axis powers might demand the French navy as part of their price for peace. This poses the question of whether the French fleet, under British admiralty command in a deal which gave the French control of the Allied land forces, could actually be surrendered by the French even with the axis acceptance of peace dependent upon it.

France's Plea Tragic

France's plea for peace was tragic news for the United Kingdom, but it was neither overwhelming nor wholly a surprise.

The British recalled and published with pride Hitler's own words from "Mein Kampf" that Great Britain is "the most valuable ally in the world" when aroused.

Englishmen quoted to each other the words of Prime Minister Churchill June 4:

"We will defend our island whatever the cost. We will fight on the beaches and landing grounds, in the fields, in the streets, on the hills.

"We will never surrender, and if—which I do not for a moment believe—this island or a large part of it be subjugated and starved, then our empire beyond the seas, armed and guarded by the British fleet, will carry on the struggle."

British "Expectations"

In this hour of considering the worst which might follow a separate peace between France and Germany, these expectations were advanced:

1. An attempt might be made to encircle, blockade and starve the British isles. The British navy, most powerful in the world, is considered equal to the task of preventing such an achievement.

2. Germany might try to bomb Britain into submission. This method was considered most likely to be tried first. The defense is a high-speed aviation production program intended to insure air supremacy over the isles. This program depends on unlimited supplies of war, including oil, from the dominions and the United States.

3. Invasion may be attempted. This has been expected for weeks. Besides the great fleet, the Royal Air Force and ground troops of the amateur army are anxious to demonstrate that a country which has not been successfully invaded since 1066 will make short work of parachute troops or any others arriving by trick devices.

It is plain that much depends on timing. An England worn down by siege and semi-starvation might not be able to resist an invasion as it could today.

Likewise a combination of the blockade and air bombardment might defeat the British eventually. The supply lines must be kept open.

Said a government spokesman in explaining that the French move for an armistice was known in advance:

"In their unshakable determination to achieve victory no matter what the cost, the government and the empire have the united support of their people."

There was little criticism of France.

The news described the French decision as "tragically inevitable." Said the Standard:

"Since the days those first essential bridgeheads on the Meuse were lost, an overpowering weight of metal and manpower has been hurled at her (France). She saw her armies hurled back, her womenfolk and children machine-gunned southward with relentless barbarity.

"All through the weeks of the major war there has been no relief, no pity. Her brave sons stood astride the road as long as the human body could stand the test."

The main uncertainty in British minds was, what will happen to the French fleet? If it is given over to the Germans—and it may be—the blow would be serious.

The French navy is the second strongest in Europe, although it does not begin to compare with the British.

Prime Minister Churchill will speak again in Parliament tomorrow. He is expected to reiterate the British intent to fight until victory has been achieved regardless of the cost or the time.

The Bank of England banned dealings in Canadian and United States stocks and bonds. The order was the latest in a series to conserve foreign exchange.

All Dutch, Norwegian and Polish ships bound for French ports were ordered to proceed instead to British ports.

Sir Nevile Henderson, last British ambassador to Germany, said he expected that Germany would attempt to invade England at once, Hitler, having forced the British off the continent, might refrain from a frontal assault on the British Isles.

Others recalled repeated Nazi declarations that Britain was the real enemy; that she "must be destroyed."

The French realized their price for peace would be steep.

Nazis May Take Colonies

They feared they would be called upon to hand over colonies long-coveted by the Germans and Italians; disputed border areas such as Alsace-Lorraine on Germany's frontier, Nice and Savoy on Italy's; the Island of Corsica in the Mediterranean; and the Frech navy—if the Germans could lay hands on it.

In Madrid, usually reliable sources said Spain's Generalissimo Francisco had been invited to act as intermediary in French-German armistice negotiations and to send delegates to any subsequent peace discussions.

Paul Reynaud, who resigned as French premier Sunday to be succeeded by Petain, was reported in a German broadcast to have boarded a clipper plane at Lisbon, Portugal, for the United States.

Italians joined the Germans in jubilant celebrations. The Italians, who entered the war just a week ago, took it as a sign that it soon would be over.

Italian Aviators Active

The Italian high command reported Sunday aerial assaults — practically the only kind of warfare they have waged thus far—on Allied naval bases and flying fields in Malta, Corsica and Tunisia.

Italian and British troops clashed in North Africa but unfavorable weather conditions interferred with earial activity on both sides.

Soviet Russia, on the march again, rushed troops and tanks to new Baltic bases seized by ultimatum from Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania.

The immediate results of Russia's influence could not be foretold, but it gave Moscow unchallenged command of the eastern end of the Baltic and put its armies on new German frontiers.

Russia, which won similar concessions from Finland by fighting, gave as her official explanation a charge that the three little neighbors had entered into a military conspiracy against her.

Russian influence in Turkey was reflected in an Istanbul report that the Turkish foreign minister would leave soon for Moscow, foreshadowing a struggle between Moscow and Berlin for the favor of that Balkan state.

Turkey is bound to the Allies in a mutual asistance pact but is excused under its terms from fighting Russia. Moscow is understood to have told the Turks that their entry into the European conflict at this time is "not desirable."

Richard Arlen Beaten As Alleged Love Thief

HOLLYWOOD, June 17. (AP)—Film actor Richard Arlen was attacked and severely beaten today at the Wilshire country club golf course by William Taite, 30, of Hollywood, who accused him of stealing Mrs. Taite's love.

Olin Dutra, golf professional, and George Doyle, Arlen's caddy, pulled Taite off the actor. Taite was booked on suspicion of extortion after Arlen told officers he held him prisoner more than an hour ten weeks ago and later came to his home threatening to beat him in efforts to collect $1,000.

Taite told police he had been after Arlen because "he broke up my home and got my wife so she wouldn't even look at me."

Arlen vehemently denied this, saying, "I don't even know his wife."

Mayor of New York Is Speaker at Meeting in Baltimore

BALTIMORE, June 17 (AP)—Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York said tonight that "no one can tell me that the Italian people x x x were ever made to goosestep in back of any dictator."

Speaking at a meeting of Baltimore Italian-American societies, LaGuardia said that Italians in the United States are undivided in opposition to "the cruel philosophies of totalitarian states."

Assistant Secretary of State A. A. Berle urged that all Americans of Italian ancestry "make it clear to every outside element in the world that Americans are undividedly loyal to the United States."

"Nothing must take place in this country," LaGuardia declared, "that would have even the remotest semblance of division.

"I want to appeal to the whole country that there be not one scintilla of doubt against any citizen of Italian blood."

The mayor referred to the crisis facing France, and said "the territory of a happy country may have been conquered, but the spirit of the French people has not and never will be conquered.

"No one can tell me that the Italian people will forget 'Ave Maria' to say 'Ave Hitler.'

"The blood and sweat of the Italian people helped build this country, and we want everyone to know that we are one family together with our sister republics in this hemisphere, and that we all say hands off to all dictators."

Ready To Lay

there still was no reply from their peace offer made by aged Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, World War hero who succeeded Paul Reynaud to the premiership.

The shadow cast on the Western Hemisphere by events in Europe was projected into sharp relief in Washington with Senate approval of legislation declaring the United States would not acquiesce in any transfer of New World possessions from one non-American nation to another.

France, like Britain, has important outposts on this side of the Atlantic.

The French, forced to bow to overwhelming enemy arms, awaited the verdict calmly hoping for the best but fearful of the worst.

Churchill Challenges Nazis

Across the English channel Prime Minister Churchill defiantly laid down the challenge that Britain "shall fight on unconquerable until the curse of Hitler is lifted from the brow of mankind."

"What has happened in France makes no difference to British faith and purpose," Churchill shouted to the axis partners.

"Britain has become the sole champions now in arms to defend the world cause. We shall do our best to be worthy of this high honor; We are sure that in the end all will come right."

With the hard-pressed French army shattered, the famed Maginot line collapsing and Paris and most of her rich industrial region in German hands, France appealed to Hitler for peace.

The fuehrer immediately called a conference with Mussolini. Il Duce and his son-in-law Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, answered the summons and left Rome last (Monday) night.

There was some speculation that Hitler might dramatically choose the hall of Versailles, seat of the peace treaties after the wars of 1870 and 1918, for his historic conference.

The Hitler-Mussolini conference, which will have a vital bearing on the continued war against Britain, was announced coincidentally with the appeal of French Premier Henri Philippe Petain, 84-year-old World War hero.

"With a broken heart," Petain, who immortalized the words "they shall not pass" at Verdun in the World War, sadly told his people that France had been forced to her knees before an enemy "superior in numbers and arms."

What About French Fleet?

At the beginning of the war last Sept. 3 the French assumed command of allied land forces and the British took over combined Allied naval operations.

With the French fleet, the Germans and Italians would have added sea power against Britain; without it the British would have an overwhelming sea edge.

Even as their venerable French leader appealed for peace, the broken French armies fought bravely with what they had left. But that wasn't enough; the Germans during the day drove to the Swiss border, reported some 1,000,000 Frenchmen trapped in the St. Mihiel area alone and stormed without pause through the Maginot lines, now only a broken shell of France's one-time symbol of security.

Metz, which Germany surrenderd to France after the World War and which subsequently became one of the key fortresses of the Maginot fortifications, fell.

The possible terms Hitler and Mussolini would lay down for France and the effect of a separate peace on axis policy was a question of unofficial speculation in Berlin.

Some Berlin quarters believe that greater increase in enlisted personnel.

Senator Lodge (R.-Mass.), said it might be advisable to raise the figure to 750,000, a point of view that some others endorsed.

Elsewhere, there were these other defense developments:

The army, reporting in the enlistment campaign already under way, said it had received 8,951 volunteers since June 1 and predicted its goal of 15,000 by July 1 would be easily reached.

President Roosevelt signed two bills authorizing a naval air force of 10,000 planes and 16,000 pilots, and an increase in the fleet by twenty-one warships and twenty-two auxiliary vessels.

He told reporters that he favored "all proper aid to the Allies that does not involve" this country in activities which would lead it into the war, "unless the vital interests of America are threatened in a concrete way."

Big Machines Come Together Above Queens Borough, New York

By DEVON FRANCIS

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP)—Two army bombers collided a half mile above a residential section of Queens Borough today, burst into flames and carried eleven army fliers to death in the burning wreckage.

Two homes were fired by flaming gasoline but by what seemed like a miracle no civilians in the thickly populated area were killed. One woman was burned.

All aboard the two bombers were killed. Army officers immediately opened an inquiry.

Two Students Killed

Another mid-air collision, at Tulsa, Okla., cost the lives of two students and an instructor during routine maneuvers. One of the dead was a government cadet. Two persons on the ground were injured.

The crash here, a few miles west of Mitchel Field, Long Island army air post, cost the lives of six pilots, one commissioned officer and five men holding reserve commissions, and five enlisted men. It happened only a few minutes after the ships took off from Mitchel Field.

Lieut. Paul Burlingame, West Point graduate and native of Louisville, Ky., leading a three-plane "V" formation, had radioed the pilots of the two "wing" planes to change positions, he himself intending to drop back to the left wing, when the collision occurred.

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) cautioned the Senate that the obligation of the United States under the Monroe doctrine "may fall due within sixty days."

The Senate vote on this resolution climaxed a day of developments resulting from the capitulation of France.

Freeze French Credits

President Roosevelt signed documents "freezing" French credits and capital in this country. Officials estimated that France has in excess of $1,000,000,000 of gold, cash and securities here. Similar freezing orders had been applied to assets of other invaded countries to prevent Germany from gaining possession of the wealth.

The United States government was advised that Britain would take over French armament orders in this country.

Behind these developments ran an undertone of worry in official circles over the possibility that Germany might seize the French fleet.

Should Germany get the French navy, the combined Germany-Italian-French fleet would outnumber the British fleet in all categories other than cruiser and aircraft carriers and would have a similar superiority over the United States fleet.

Congress Speeds Defense Moves

More Than $5,000,000,000 Voted for Preparedness

In the month since President Roosevelt advised Congress to put aside other considerations for an emergency reinforcement of national defense, the United States has acted with wartime speed to prepare for any grim possibility from a world aflame.

The voting of billions for the army and navy, the steps taken to mobile industry and other moves are paralleled in history only by those of April, 1917, when war was an actuality rather than a threat.

This country, by one official estimate, is just now in much the same relative position as was Great Britain in 1936 when rearmament was started belatedly to keep step with the rising menace of Nazi Germany. If so, the American about face has been much more abrupt and the attack on defense problems more vigorous than was Britain's.

The preparedness strides taken since Mr. Roosevelt in his May 16 special message asked the first extra billion for defense necessarily have been of a fiscal and planning nature, but they are nonetheless vital. The month shows this progress in outline:

$5,000,000,000 Voted

For the army, navy and allied agencies Congress has actually voted the better part of $5,000,000,000 and has clearly indicated intention to make remainder available without delay.

As members of a national defense advisory commission, outstanding industrial leaders have been put in charge of the vast undertaking of turning industry to armament tasks.

With little dissent, an air force of 50,000 warplanes supported by capacity to duplicate the number annually, appears to have been adopted as a practicable objective.

The army has been given funds to acquire weapons for a million men, while increasing the number of regular troops to 375,000.

The world's mightiest sea force is contemplated in the additional funds supplied the navy for new warships and planes and by legislation to expand the fleet's tonnage.

Two 35,000-ton battleships have been launched in rapid succession, orders placed for twenty-two other ships costing $350,000,000, and preparations made to start work on a larger number of new craft and thousands of additional naval planes.

The Atlantic squadron has been reinforced and cruisers dispatched to "show the flag" at trouble spots in South America.

Speed up orders have gone to arsenals and shipyards, which soon are to be operating twenty-four hours a day.

Aircraft production has been so accelerated that the army air corps expects now to attain by next April 30 a goal of more than 100 squadrons with new planes altered in accord with European war lessons.

The army already has stepped up the training of pilots, and is making ready to school more than 10,000 fliers a year. The navy, with a similar goal, has contracted for a second great training center in Texas to cost nearly $25,000,000.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority has undertaken to provide a reservoir by instructing 45,000 fledgling fliers annually.

Nevertheless, to men with first hand familiarity with the staggering cost of arms and the wastage of war the preparedness steps thus far appear a mere beginning.

For the time being, the White House has indicated, there will be no more billion dollar requests, but eventual far heavier outlays for airplanes and munitions appear in prospect.

The war department already has presented a tentative estimate that a billion will be required for government-financed powder plants and the like, though only $200,000,000 has been asked.

Teachers Will Tour Country

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 17 (AP)—Leaving from Charleston June 22, West Virginia teachers will make a "conducted credit tour" covering 7,500 miles on a thirty-four-day bus swing around the country.

Scenic spots of the west, Old Mexico and the Golden Gate Exposition at San Francisco will be included in the trip, completion of which will give the teachers six hours credit on the renewal of five-year certificates.

Stops also will be made at numerous universities and colleges.

The tour will be directed by Mrs. Daisy Chapman Dorsey, South Charleston teacher, and will be open to persons other than teachers who like conducted travel.

Mrs. Dorsey who conducted similar tours last summer and at Christmas, said that travel affords "one of the greatest single methods for broadening experience and should accordingly be included in the education of every teacher."

This one will cost approximately $190 per person, excluding meals.

Efficient Technical Workshop Planned

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., June 17 (AP)—Architects designing West Virginia University's new mineral arts building envision it as "an efficient technical workshop rather than an architectural monument."

The $500,000 building, construction of which recently was authorized by the state board of public works, will be a six-story structure, 310 by 70 feet.

It will face Willey street, extending from the alley beside the Willey street Methodist church to University avenue, making a quadrangle of three buildings.

Coal laboratory, chemical laboratory, lecture rooms, classrooms and library will have space in the building. The exterior will be of brick with a limestone trim.

All undergraduate study for the mineral arts scholastic programs will be developed in the structure. Space will be given the school of mines, department of chemical engineering and department of geology.

Congress Speeds Defense Moves

More Than $5,000,000,000 Voted for Preparedness

In the month since President Roosevelt advised Congress to put aside other considerations for an emergency reinforcement of national defense, the United States has acted with wartime speed to prepare for any grim possibility from a world aflame.

The voting of billions for the army and navy, the steps taken to mobile industry and other moves are paralleled in history only by those of April, 1917, when war was an actuality rather than a threat.

This country, by one official estimate, is just now in much the same relative position as was Great Britain in 1936 when rearmament was started belatedly to keep step with the rising menace of Nazi Germany. If so, the American about face has been much more abrupt and the attack on defense problems more vigorous than was Britain's.

The preparedness strides taken since Mr. Roosevelt in his May 16 special message asked the first extra billion for defense necessarily have been of a fiscal and planning nature, but they are nonetheless vital. The month shows this progress in outline:

More Help Too Late Now; Defense Imperative

SWIFTLY MOVING TRAGIC EVENTS OVERSEAS prove that what Col. Lindbergh warned about getting into the war now is sheer fact shorn of emotional wishfulness. And President Roosevelt's reply to the pathetic appeal for help from France, based upon the cold facts of our situation, which should have long since been noted by him, has served to clear the air of self-made committments for which he had no authority and to avert false hopes.

The United States could not possibly give aid to the Allies further than it has been giving under law in time to do any good. The plain fact is that even if we should enter the war now it would be at least twenty months before we could send any substantial aid abroad. Meanwhile the paramount question of our own safety comes uppermost. We geared our industrial machine into high to make airplanes, and other munitions, in great quantities for the World war but, despite all our feverish effort, at the end of eighteen months, when the war ended, not a single one of our planes arrived at the front, and other munitions were similarly in the making. War effort is a tremendous undertaking, involving so many changes, that when it comes in a state of unpreparedness it requires time for essential production.

Hence, all we can do now, in the face of the terrible turn of events abroad, which we have no power of averting aside from what help we can now lawfully give, is to proceed with our defense activities, which are made all the more imperative by the Allied reverses in France. By remaining out now, repairing our defenses and stimulating our production of war machinery, we shall, as Gen. Johnson says elsewhere on this page, become all the stronger.

Democracy Must and Will Survive

WHEN and if democracy in Europe appears to be crushed by totalitarian arms, the voices of the wavering here will begin to be heard, about as follows:

That maybe democracy is on the way out, has seen its day in the evolution of society; that it is outworn, and worn out, without the strength or the will to survive against a conception of the state with a single authority, a single force and a single purpose. This is what the Duce has bawled from the balconies; it is implicit in all Hitler has done and plans to do. And there is the evidence of events of the past year to support them both.

Actually, they prove nothing of the sort. The most they can possibly prove is that a nation willing to devote ten years to putting all its energy into preparation for a war, lavishing all its resources and abundant ingenuity on the construction of the latest in death-dealing devices, sacrificing every value in life that can not be impressed into war use, denying millions any access to world opinion and to the truth as it is seen in the outer world, can presumably overwhelm with arms a society which tries to put any considerable part of its thought and energy into a peaceful order of living.

Well—there are any number of small, tough "football colleges" that can score rings around Chicago. Does it signify that they are better institutions, that they contribute more to any scheme of society that can be called a civilization?

Yet the wavering will have to accept that thesis. And among them may be some of the bigger shots, beguiled by hopes that they will be in command in the new order, as was Thyssen, the angel of the infant Nazi party, who is now a man without a country and—what is worse, no doubt, from his point of view—a capitalist with no capital.

Maintaining a democracy is a difficult art. It must be mastered. It must be taught to its young and its converts, one by one. It is susceptible to abuses, which, however, can usually be cured by more democracy. By its nature, it is often indecisive and looks bad in issues with an authoritarian adversary speaking singly and boldly. And this indecision may well be the destruction of its physical evidences.

But the spirit that informs it will live in the hearts of men. It can move them to miracles of exertion transcending even those of the god-state and its serfs. For the weak and doubting now, and those inclined to ride with what seems to be a tide, a look through history, in which this year will be just another hour, is urged if they are measuring the totalitarian way of life beside the one Americans know.

Enlistments Will Suffice For the Time Being

AMERICANS are so nimble-minded that they can jump in a few weeks from an isolationist policy which frowned on any increase in national defense to contemplation of some form of compulsory military service for young men, in the United States.

If it was a big step to sanctioning sale of old planes and guns to the Allies, and another to authorizing building up the standing army to 400,000 men, the suggestion of requiring every boy to spend a year, more or less, in military training is nothing short of revolutionary.

Americans have looked with disapproval and a certain condescension on nations which have adopted compulsory service. In ordinary times, the whole idea is repellent to a nation that asks only the right to live at peace with itself and with its neighbors.

But now that most Americans think they understand the evil nature of the force that has been let loose in the world, this project appeals to the streak of Yankee common sense in them. This nation is unlikely to become so enamored with its military might that it shall want to use it either aggressively or futilely.

The project is still in the discussion stage, and not too serious discussion; but the fact that it is being discussed at all is significant of the change that has taken place, in American habits of thinking. If the worst fears for Europe are realized, not only a compulsory training period but also universal service under a draft law may become necessary.

For the time being, however, it is generally believed that volunteer enlistments will strengthen the army, navy and air services sufficiently to meet the emergency.

Undue Perterbation, Perhaps, But Check-Up Would Help

MAYBE Premier Mitchell Hepburn, of Ontario, is unduly perturbed about Nazi and Fascist sympathizers in the United States, "who are organized, armed and waiting only for orders from across the Atlantic to invade Canada."

Most Americans do not think totalitarian sympathizers—the rats—could get to first base in an invasion of Canada. In the first place, the police on this side wouldn't let them get started; and, if a few should trickle across the border, Canada certainly would know how to handle them. Indeed, there might be few whole Nazi or Fascist heads on either side of the frontier a few hours after the beginning of the invasion.

But Mr. Hepburn's fears cannot be laughed off too lightly. Many can remember World war days when Von Papen and his fellow-conspirators, German and pseudo-American, were plotting the bombing of the Welland canal—which didn't come off—and similar acts of war against Canada. And recently published revelations of a professed counter-spy contain purported evidence of Von Papen's preparations to arm thousands of German sympathizers in the United States for invasion of Canada.

The Nazis are as impudent and lawless as Von Papen in their anti-Canadian—and anti-American activities on United States soil. So perhaps it would be well for the authorities to do a bit of checking up on this side of the border to make sure that those "invaders" never get started. It isn't easy to start an invasion from a jail.

Protecting Airplanes From Airplanes

REPEATED REFERENCES in Berlin reports to the bombing of Allied airdromes and of enemy aircraft on the ground give an accumulating weight to the case for protected hangars and airplane factories in any air defense system on which the nation is to rely.

It is noted that since the invasion of the west, RAF communiques speak of bombing airdromes in the Low Countries where the Germans have had no opportunity to conceal or disguise their presence. Nothing has been said of raids of this nature on German soil, for planes there are constructed under ground, and when placed in service are housed in subterranean hangars.

The cost of moving airplane construction and parking under ground in the United States would no doubt be large, but the difference between an air establishment thus protected and one as exposed to enemy craft as many a squadron and hangar abroad has been, beginning with Poland, is not to be reckoned in money. The Senate has expressed itself on the dubious wisdom of providing less than full protection to material as indispensable to national safety as aircraft.

The Germans, who appear to have done most of the realistic planning that has gone into the present war, have made no secret of the protection given their factories and planes. Certainly Americans can be as intelligent as the Puddingheads.

Johnny Paychek, quitting the ring after being knocked out by a 19-year-old Negro boy in Chicago, said that since Joe Louis knocked him out with four punches nine weeks ago his coordination has been impaired. Most of the sports writers seem to think his mind was impaired when he signed up to fight Joe.

Why do cartoonists depict war as a skeleton? It's civilization that looks like a skeleton when war gets through with it.

A traffic cop's nightmare: Two 100-ton tanks arriving simultaneously at the same intersection.

That Trojan horse, like many a race nag, sneaks up on the inside.

Strength of Free The More Potent, Edwin Hill Says

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

Professor D. B. Dill, a distinguished research scientist, is in charge of the unique Fatigue Laboratory at Harvard University. After extended research, he suggests negro tank troops and negro submarine crews, as his experiments have convinced him they can endure such hot, humid and quite generally hellish interiors better than white men. This, he thinks, is due to the negro's racial conditioning in the tropics and sub-tropics. Their energies are maintained better than those of white men when there is great physical effort at high temperature.

The professor worked this out by walking negroes and Alabama share croppers for long stretches on a treadmill in jungle heat. At the end of a long grind he found the mean heart beat of the negroes to be one hundred fifty-two and that of the white men one hundred seventy-three.

"Oh gallant was our galley, from her carven steering wheel
"To the figurehead of silver and her beak of hammered steel;
"The leg-bar chafed the ankle, and we gasped for cooler air,
"But no galley in the water with our galley could compare."

But that was in a poem called "The Galley-Slave." Now there would be no welt of the whips on black men's backs, no leg irons, if they should be chosen to man the tanks and the submarines. They would have much to suffer and fight for compared with those of whom Kipling wrote:

"When the skies are black above them, and the decks ablaze beneath,

German Experiment Out

So far as I know, there have been no profound studies of the comparative staying power of free men and slaves, which would seem to be somewhat tangnet to the main argument in the world today. Professor Dill's experiments seem to be somewhat reminiscent of the characteristically German experiments toward the close of the World war when they hopped up their troops with chemicals, claiming amazing enhancement of their resistance to fatigue and fighting prowess.

This chemical formula found some scientific sanction in this country and there were reports that several universities had used it to energize their football teams. But that all faded out and there were no all-American ratings chemically induced. The comparison with Professor Dill's findings lies in the suggestion that valor can be stated in terms of bodily metabolisms, either chemically or racially determined.

Blakes Reminder

We're no bio-chemist, but we sometimes rush in where even Roger Babson or Walter Pitkin would fear to tread. Oddly enough, it was that strange English mystic, William Blake, who wrote, "Beware of a rabbit in a rage." The aptness of the quotation would be clearer if it had been "Beware of even a rabbit in a rage." There is an eight-word statement of the devastating possibilities of the real fighting mood in any living creature—the latent and lurking reinforcement of the fighting life force when the issue becomes supremely, desperately, emotionally important to an individual rather to a species or a state.

We'll pick a free man against a robot when it comes to the stimulating shot of adrenalin, or the possession of his own soul or whatever it is—chemical or mystical—that calls the turn of combat. We have an idea that there's one thing the devil doesn't understand. He can blueprint murder from Hell to Harlem; he can calibrate ruin to a gnat's heel, and the strength of a free man's arm will be forever loose and left over in his calculus.

The Greater Issue

But what of the issue of a slave state against a free state, rather than a free man against a slave; what of the deadly instrumentality of modern technology in the hands of slave drivers? There is even greater reassurance here and we can give you chapter and verse. Consider the searching inquiry of the International Labor Office of the League of Nations, in which it was found that the index of productivity in free countries, man for man, has been and is much higher than in the ball-and-chain dominions. And this, too, is something that has nothing to do with chemistry. Freedom can defend itself.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

ANOTHER CROP THAT WAS PLOWED UNDER

Legislators, Stumped by Tax Clamor, Fear That Resentment Is in Store

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Benito Mussolini

For the first time in American history (probably in the history of any country on earth) voters are clamoring to be more highly taxed.

Photographs have been broadcast throughout the land showing great throngs of them yowling for higher levies on their own income, to enable Uncle Sam the better to prepare for war.

Legislators are completely stumped. It always has been axiomatic among them that taxes positively mustn't be boosted in an election year. Boosts not only have never been demanded by the taxpaying public before; if decreed by the lawmakers the latter have taken it for granted that the reaction against them would be overwhelming at the polls.

Politicians are not altogether confident that the taxpayers are sure of themselves even yet. Political old hands are suspicious that, while the multitude is favorable to stiffer levies, provided for right now, they will resent them when collection day arrives. The preceding election following the tax increases, by then will be water over the dam. However, there are senators and representatives far-sighted enough to look ahead to a succeeding election.

From the administrations viewpoint it is highly gratifying to have its defense recommendations popularly so ardently endorsed, with an accompanying endorsement of the financial allowances necessary to foot the bill.

Nevertheless, if there is a pronounced economy revulsion a little later on it will not be so pleasant for the later part of the incoming administration's term.

Future mass sentiment inevitably must depend largely upon the war's progress.

As To The Future

If the totalitarian nations continue their sweep, it generally will be agreed that no amount, voted for Uncle Sam's defense, was too much.

On the other hand, let the Allies develop a streak of luck, and the complaint is quite likely to be made that they were in a position to take care of themselves and that we overdid ourselves providing to help them.

Italy's entrance into the struggle no doubt will weigh considerably with American ideas of what the Allies need.

The fact remains that expert Yankee militarists do not take Signor Mussolini and his followers very seriously.

His navy is pretty good, but no match for British and French sea strength. His aviation service is well spoken of, but the authoritative consensus is that in his position he needs a formidable army to back up his submarines, particularly, and planes.

And an army is precisely what all qualified critics say he hasn't got worth speaking of.

In short, it seems to be widely accepted that he will be little if any more use to Herr Hitler as an active military ally than he has been in recent weeks just as a potential partner.

Injudicious? Extravagant?

As to the Yankee electorate there appears to be less prospect of a howl that we have spent too much as that Uncle Sam may be accused of doing his spending injudiciously and extravagantly.

Not only are experts unable to see how the Fascists can be of much help to the Nazi's; they don't readily see how the Nazis can support the Fascists very effectively.

It's taken for granted that Benito will launch his blitzkrieg simultaneously against the Suez and Gibraltar as a means of breaking out at both ends of the Mediterranean. It doesn't appear that Adolf has the right kind of fighting strength to support such a campaign; presumably the Allies can stand it off indefinitely. It isn't obvious that it will interfere a particle with their warfare against Hitler. It simply will be totally a different, side issue.

A Plan To Cut Down Divorce

From the Huntington, W. Va., Advertiser

Superior Judge Joseph Sabath of Chicago, who probably has heard and passed on more divorce pleas than any other jurist in the United States, which is to say the world, since we are the divorcingest country on earth, believes much of the divorce problem could be solved by the setting up of courts of reconciliation.

Today Judge Sabath celebrates his completion of thirty years on the bench. During that period he has handled upward of 50,000 divorce petitions. His proposal of reconciliation courts is his own contribution to the anniversary celebration.

His plan contemplates a court presided over by a judge who would bend every effort to restoring harmony between entranged couples from the moment their differences came to his official notice. No bill of divorce would be filed by a wife or husband merely to fit statutory requirements. Instead a petition, carefully and truthfully prepared, would be presented after all efforts toward reconciliation on the part of the judicial intermediary had failed.

"Thus," says the Chicago jurist in behalf of his plan, "we would be giving couples determined to part every chance to get together again, to try to find some common ground which would prevent a break-up. Good common sense and discretion, rather than law, should guide the court.

The judge's plan would not work in all cases, but it would work in a sufficient proportion to make it worth the effort and investment required. Every seventh marriage in the United States is shattered on the rocks of divorce. Divorce is one of the worst of our social evils. It not only blights the lives of those directly involved, but brings unhappiness and sorrow to countless innocent persons, such as children and other kin or the principals. Any constructive step toward abatement of the evil is welcome.

Let Us Cast Out Fear

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat

The people of the United States seem to be suffering from a sort of mental shell-shock as the tragedy of Europe unrolls swiftly before their eyes. There is greater panic in certain American circles than even in England and France, which lie directly under the guns of the Nazi invader. It is not fear—it is simply shock at seeing the anchors of civilization tossed overboard, one by one. It is horror at seeing an orderly world descend to chaos.

There are signs that this panic has already passed its climax, as it should. Up to now the whole thing has had the aspect of a too-hectic melodrama. Now it is beginning to be real, and already there are signs of that calm that comes with reality.

It is certainly true that the British and French, whose way of life is so much like our own, are fighting a desperate fight for existence. None would dispute the gravity of the situation as it affects the future of the free political and economic life we love. But at least our own course is clarifying, and as our task becomes clearer, we begin to bend to it, and we find relief in action. Our own defenses have lagged. No nation has had to arm itself for fear of us. Now, in a world which has forsaken order and justice and peace, we must prepare to defend by force what we have failed to defend by negotiation.

Very well. Is there any reason why we cannot defend ourselves? These are no supermen who have overrun half of Europe. They are men. They have succeeded up to this point because they have converted all life into a military machine. Have the Germans built tanks? So can we. Have the Japanese built big ships? So can we. American planes and pilots have never feared to take the air with any others.

Hitler himself in "Mein Kampf," wrote: "The gigantic American State Colossus, with its enormous wealth of virgin soil, is more difficult to attack than the wedged-in German Reich." It is true that the Reich is less "wedged-in" than it was when Hitler wrote. It is true that we are badly unprepared in material and training. But we have had our lesson.

Calmly, steadily, wisely, we now prepare such military machinery as will enable us to defend our own.

FDR Fails To Use Anti-War Effort, Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

WASHINGTON, June 17.—This talk about using the navy to convoy shipments of munitions is incredible lunacy.

Munitions are direct contraband. At international law and under invariable American policy, a ship known to be carrying such stuff through an actual blockade is subject not only to search and seizure but to sinking.

What is going to happen when a German submarine or airplane has blatantly advertised to it by the mere presence of an American naval convoy, off a blockaded English coast, that merchant ships are loaded with direct and unconditional contraband?

It is going to exercise a clear immemorial right of the sea and try to sink it. If any non-belligerent naval vessel attempts to intervene, it is committing an act of war. So the German attacks the American—and we are at war—not for vindicating a right but for violating one.

There is no longer any question that Mr. Roosevelt is exercising no effort whatever to keep us out of war. It may not be so fair to say that it is his purpose to exert every effort within his supposedly limited powers to get us into war. But at least this statement is incontestible—every act of his in the past three years is consistent with such a purpose and no act is inconsistent therewith.

Roosevelt's Policies

I hesitate to hand out the kind of "inside" dope which follows, but you can rely on it.

As predicted by this column for two years, Mr. Roosevelt has, at last, "reluctantly decided" to attempt to hurdle the third term barrier. He will be nominated by acclamation. He has asked Mr. Farley to manage his campaign, and the dope is that Mr. Farley has refused.

Mr. Roosevelt knows and long has known that this unprecedented feat of political legerdemain would be impossible without war hysteria. Therefore, we have war hysteria and I would like to have somebody show me an incident in his recent conduct that did not tend to create it.

Apart from emotion, there are three compelling reasons why we should now stay out of war.

1—We not only have nothing to put in but due to criminal neglects, we are defenseless on our own shore.

2—Our great need is time to prepare our defense and, on all the facts and the opinion of all competent experts, we could have from 18 months to three years if we do not invite every danger we fear and rush headlong into a situation we are now totally unable to handle.

3—If we stay out of this thing and become strong, we shall have a voice in the outcome. If we go in, by our present weakness foredoomed to defeat, we shall just be another Hitler trophy—"voe victs"—woe to the vanquished.

"We Must Prepare First"

In the post World war "cordon sanitaire," France incited the little countries to threaten Germany on her promise to help—and then neglected to remain able to help. On the same formula Britain encouraged Poland to resist on England's "guaranty" of assistance and was wholly unable to help. Similarly, for domestic politics, we are holding out false hopes to England and France and have incited them to war.

All those small nations are gone—nine of them. France and England are repsonsible. France also is gone. England is going. We are repeating the same ghastly international immorality and suicide. For God's sake let's keep out—at least long enough to get ready to get in.

Quotable Quotes

By United States Senator Henry F. Ashurst, Democrat, of Arizona

There is about the Senate some talk of adjournment. Those who wish to serve their country in an hour of crisis and of peril will not talk adjournment. * * * That is the language of defeat, of run away, of abandonment of duty. I am a candidate for re-election to the Senate. To me it would be a major calamity to be defeated for re-election [laughter], but I am prepared to remain here all summer, and I shall not vote to adjourn. What a miserable figure I would cut before the country, trying to be re-elected and running away from the very duties to which I have asked to be returned.

The form of government is unimportant—the spirit everything.—GEN. VON SCHMIDT.

With calm confidence and reliance on our own emerging strength, America goes forward unflinching and unafraid to meet whatever the world has in store!

More Help Too Late Now; Defense Imperative

SWIFTLY MOVING TRAGIC EVENTS OVERSEAS prove that what Col. Lindbergh warned about getting into the war now is sheer fact shorn of emotional wishfulness. And President Roosevelt's reply to the pathetic appeal for help from France, based upon the cold facts of our situation, which should have long since been noted by him, has served to clear the air of self-made committments for which he had no authority and to avert false nopes.

The United States could not possibly give aid to the Allies further than it has been giving under law in time to do any good. The plain fact is that even if we should enter the war now it would be at least twenty months before we could send any substantial aid abroad. Meanwhile the paramount question of our own safety comes uppermost. We geared our industrial machine into high to make airplanes, and other munitions, in great quantities for the World war but, despite all our feverish effort, at the end of eighteen months, when the war ended, not a single one of our planes arrived at the front, and other munitions were similarly in the making. War effort is a tremendous undertaking, involving so many changes, that when it comes in a state of unpreparedness it requires time for essential production.

Hence, all we can do now, in the face of the terrible turn of events abroad, which we have no power of averting aside from what help we can now lawfully give, is to proceed with our defense activities, which are made all the more imperative by the Allied reverses in France. By remaining out now, repairing our defenses and stimulating our production of war machinery, we shall, as Gen. Johnson says elsewhere on this page, become all the stronger.

Democracy Must and Will Survive

WHEN and if democracy in Europe appears to be crushed by totalitarian arms, the voices of the wavering here will begin to be heard, about as follows:

That maybe democracy is on the way out, has seen its day in the evolution of society; that it is outworn, and worn out, without the strength or the will to survive against a conception of the state with a single authority, a single force and a single purpose. This is what the Duce has bawled from the balconies; it is implicit in all Hitler has done and plans to do. And there is the evidence of events of the past year to support them both.

Actually, they prove nothing of the sort. The most they can possibly prove is that a nation willing to devote ten years to putting all its enegry into preparation for a war, lavishing all its resources and abundant ingenuity on the construction of the latest in death-dealing devices, sacrificing every value in life that can not be impressed into war use, denying millions any access to world opinion and to the truth as it is seen in the outer world, can presumably overwhelm with arms a society which tries to put any considerable part of its thought and energy into a peaceful order of living.

Well—there are any number of small, tough "football colleges" that can score rings around Chicago. Does it signify that they are better institutions, that they contribute more to any scheme of society that can be called a civilization?

Yet the wavering will have to accept that thesis. And among them may be some of the bigger shots, beguiled by hopes that they will be in command in the new order, as was Thyssen, the angel of the infant Nazi party, who is now a man without a country and—what is worse, no doubt, from his point of view—a capitalist with no capital.

Maintaining a democracy is a difficult art. It must be mastered. It must be taught to its young and its converts, one by one. It is susceptible to abuses, which, however, can usually be cured by more democracy. By its nature, it is often indecisive and looks bad in issues with an authoritarian adversary speaking singly and boldly. And this indecision may well be the destruction of its physical evidences.

But the spirit that informs it will live in the hearts of men. It can move them to miracles of exertion transcending even those of the god-state and its serfs. For the weak and doubting now, and those inclined to ride with what seems to be a tide, a look through history, in which this year will be just another hour, is urged if they are measuring the totalitarian way of life beside the one Americans know.

Enlistments Will Suffice For the Time Being

AMERICANS are so nimble-minded that they can jump in a few weeks from an isolationist policy which frowned on any increase in national defense to contemplation of some form of compulsory military service for young men, in the United States.

If it was a big step to sanctioning sale of old planes and guns to the Allies, and another to authorizing building up the standing army to 400,000 men, the suggestion of requiring every boy to spend a year, more or less, in military training is nothing short of revolutionary.

Americans have looked with disapproval and a certain condescension on nations which have adopted compulsory service. In ordinary times, the whole idea is repellent to a nation that asks only the right to live at peace with itself and with its neighbors.

But now that most Americans think they understand the evil nature of the force that has been let loose in the world, this project appeals to the streak of Yankee common sense in them. This nation is unlikely to become so enamored with its military might that it shall want to use it either aggressively or futilely.

The project is still in the discussion stage, and not too serious discussion; but the fact that it is being discussed at all is significant of the change that has taken place, in American habits of thinking. If the worst fears for Europe are realized, not only a compulsory training period but also universal service under a draft law may become necessary.

For the time being, however, it is generally believed that volunteer enlistments will strengthen the army, navy and air services sufficiently to meet the emergency.

Undue Perterbation, Perhaps, But Check-Up Would Help

MAYBE Premier Mitchell Hepburn, of Ontario, is unduly perturbed about Nazi and Fascist sympathizers in the United States, "who are organized, armed and waiting only for orders from across the Atlantic to invade Canada."

Most Americans do not think totalitarian sympathizers—the rats—could get to first base in an invasion of Canada. In the first place, the police on this side wouldn't let them get started; and, if a few should trickle across the border, Canada certainly would know how to handle them. Indeed, there might be few whole Nazi or Fascist heads on either side of the frontier a few hours after the beginning of the invasion.

But Mr. Hepburn's fears cannot be laughed off too lightly. Many can remember World war days when Von Papen and his fellow-conspirators, German and pseudo-American, were plotting the bombing of the Welland canal—which didn't come off—and similar acts of war against Canada. And recently published revelations of a professed counter-spy contain purported evidence of Von Papen's preparations to arm thousands of German sympathizers in the United States for invasion of Canada.

The Nazis are as impudent and lawless as Von Papen in their anti-Canadian—and anti-American activities on United States soil. So perhaps it would be well for the authorities to do a bit of checking up on this side of the border to make sure that those "invaders" never get started. It isn't easy to start an invasion from a jail.

Protecting Airplanes From Airplanes

REPEATED REFERENCES in Berlin reports to the bombing of Allied airdromes and of enemy aircraft on the ground give an accumulating weight to the case for protected hangars and airplane factories in any air defense system on which the nation is to rely.

It is noted that since the invasion of the west, RAF communiques speak of bombing airdromes in the Low Countries where the Germans have had no opportunity to conceal or disguise their presence. Nothing has been said of raids of this nature on German soil, for planes there are constructed under ground, and when placed in service are housed in subterranean hangars.

The cost of moving airplane construction and parking under ground in the United States would no doubt be large, but the difference between an air establishment thus protected and one as exposed to enemy craft as many a squadron and hangar abroad has been, beginning with Poland, is not to be reckoned in money. The Senate has expressed itself on the dubious wisdom of providing less than full protection to material as indispensable to national safety as aircraft.

The Germans, who appear to have done most of the realistic planning that has gone into the present war, have made no secret of the protection given their factories and planes. Certainly Americans can be as intelligent as the Puddingheads.

Johnny Paychek, quitting the ring after being knocked out by a 19-year-old Negro boy in Chicago, said that since Joe Louis knocked him out with four punches nine weeks ago his coordination has been impaired. Most of the sports writers seem to think his mind was impaired when he signed up to fight Joe.

Why do cartoonists depict war as a skeleton? It's civilization that looks like a skeleton when war gets through with it.

A traffic cop's nightmare: Two 100-ton tanks arriving simultaneously at the same intersection.

That Trojan horse, like many a race nag, sneaks up on the inside.

By EDWIN C. HILL

Professor D. B. Dill, a distinguished research scientist, is in charge of the unique Fatigue Laboratory at Harvard University. After extended research, he suggests negro tank troops and negro submarine crews, as his experiments have convinced him they can endure such hot, humid and quite generally hellish interiors better than white men. This, he thinks, is due to the negro's racial conditioning in the tropics and sub-tropics. Their energies are maintained better than those of white men when there is great physical effort at high temperature.

His navy is pretty good, but no match for British and French sea strength. His aviation service is well spoken of, but the authoritative consensus is that in his position he needs a formidable army to back up his submarines, particularly, and planes.

And an army is precisely what all qualified critics say he hasn't got worth speaking of.

In short, it seems to be widely accepted that he will be little if any more use to Herr Hitler as an active military ally than he has been in recent weeks just as a potential partner.

Injudicious? Extravagant?

As to the Yankee electorate there appears to be less prospect of a howl that we have spent too much as that Uncle Sam may be accused of doing his spending injudiciously and extravagantly.

Not only are experts unable to see how the Fascists can be of much help to the Nazi's; they don't readily see how the Nazis can support the Fascists very effectively.

It's taken for granted that Benito will launch his blitzkrieg simultaneously against the Suez and Gibraltar as a means of breaking out at both ends of the Mediterranean. It doesn't appear that Adolf has the right kind of fighting strength to support such a campaign; presumably the Allies can stand it off indefinitely. It isn't obvious that it will interfere a particle with their warfare against Hitler. It simply will be totally a different, side issue.

A Plan To Cut Down Divorce

From the Huntington, W. Va., Advertiser

Superior Judge Joseph Sabath of Chicago, who probably has heard and passed on more divorce pleas than any other jurist in the United States, which is to say the world, since we are the divorcingest country on earth, believes much of the divorce problem could be solved by the setting up of courts of reconciliation.

Today Judge Sabath celebrates his completion of thirty years on the bench. During that period he has handled upward of 50,000 divorce petitions. His proposal of reconciliation courts is his own contribution to the anniversary celebration.

His plan contemplates a court presided over by a judge who would bend every effort to restoring harmony between entranged couples from the moment their differences came to his official notice. No bill of divorce would be filed by a wife or husband merely to fit statutory requirements. Instead a petition, carefully and truthfully prepared, would be presented after all efforts toward reconciliation on the part of the judicial intermediary had failed.

"Thus," says the Chicago jurist in behalf of his plan, "we would be giving couples determined to part every chance to get together again, to try to find some common ground which would prevent a break-up. Good common sense and discretion, rather than law, should guide the court.

The judge's plan would not work in all cases, but it would work in a sufficient proportion to make it worth the effort and investment required. Every seventh marriage in the United States is shattered on the rocks of divorce. Divorce is one of the worst of our social evils. It not only blights the lives of those directly involved, but brings unhappiness and sorrow to countless innocent persons, such as children and other kin or the principals. Any constructive step toward abatement of the evil is welcome.

At Gilroy, Cal., the city council passed an ordinance establishing a bill of rights for dogs. Under its terms, any dog that is charged with being a nuisance will have the right of trial with its owner present.

Let Us Cast Out Fear

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat

The people of the United States seem to be suffering from a sort of mental shell-shock as the tragedy of Europe unrolls swiftly before their eyes. There is greater panic in certain American circles than even in England and France, which lie directly under the guns of the Nazi invader. It is not fear—it is simply shock at seeing the anchors of civilization tossed overboard, one by one. It is horror at seeing an orderly world descend to chaos.

There are signs that this panic has already passed its climax, as it should. Up to now the whole thing has had the aspect of a too-hectic melodrama. Now it is beginning to be real, and already there are signs of that calm that comes with reality.

It is certainly true that the British and French, whose way of life is so much like our own, are fighting a desperate fight for existence. None would dispute the gravity of the situation as it affects the future of the free political and economic life we love. But at least our own course is clarifying, and as our task becomes clearer, we begin to bend to it, and we find relief in action. Our own defenses have lagged. No nation has had to arm itself for fear of us. Now, in a world which has forsaken order and justice and peace, we must prepare to defend by force what we have failed to defend by negotiation.

Very well. Is there any reason why we cannot defend ourselves? These are no supermen who have overrun half of Europe. They are men. They have succeeded up to this point because they have converted all life into a military machine. Have the Germans built tanks? So can we. Have the Japanese built big ships? So can we. American planes and pilots have never feared to take the air with any others.

Hitler himself in "Mein Kampf," wrote: "The gigantic American State Colossus, with its enormous wealth of virgin soil, is more difficut to attack than the wedged-in German Reich." It is true that the Reich is less "wedged-in" than it was when Hitler wrote. It is true that we are badly unprepared in material and training. But we have had our lesson.

Calmly, steadily, wisely, we now prepare such military machinery as will enable us to defend our own.

FDR Fails To Use Anti-War Effort, Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, June 17.—This talk about using the navy to convoy shipments of munitions is incredible lunacy.

Hugh Johnson

Munitions are direct contraband. At international law and under invariable American policy, a ship known to be carrying such stuff through an actual blockade is subject not only to search and seizure but to sinking.

What is going to happen when a German submarine or airplane has blatantly advertised to it by the mere presence of an American naval convoy, off a blockaded English coast, that merchant ships are loaded with direct and unconditional contraband?

It is going to exercise a clear, immemorial right of the sea and try to sink it. If any non-belligerent naval vessel attempts to intervene, it is committing an act of war. So the German attacks the American—and we are at war—not for vindicating a right but for violating one.

There is no longer any question that Mr. Roosevelt is exercising no effort whatever to keep us out of war. It may not be so fair to say that it is his purpose to exert every effort within his supposedly limited powers to get us into war. But at least this statement is incontestible—every act of his in the past three years is consistent with such a purpose and no act is inconsistent therewith.

Roosevelt's Policies

I hesitate to hand out the kind of "inside" dope which follows, but you can rely on it.

As predicted by this column for two years, Mr. Roosevelt has, at last, "reluctantly decided" to attempt to hurdle the third term barrier. He will be nominated by acclamation. He has asked Mr. Farley to manage his campaign, and the dope is that Mr. Farley has refused.

Mr. Roosevelt knows and long has known that this unprecedented feat of political legerdemain would be impossible without war hysteria. Therefore, we have war hysteria and I would like to have somebody show me an incident in his recent conduct that did not tend to create it.

Apart from emotion, there are three compelling reasons why we should now stay out of war.

1—We not only have nothing to put in but due to criminal neglects, we are defenseless on our own shore.

2—Our great need is time to prepare our defense and, on all the facts and the opinion of all competent experts, we could have from 18 months to three years if we do not invite every danger we fear and rush headlong into a situation we are now totally unable to handle.

3—If we stay out of this thing and become strong, we shall have a voice in the outcome. If we go in, by our present weakness foredoomed to defeat, we shall just be another Hitler trophy—"voe victs"—woe to the vanquished.

"We Must Prepare First"

In the post World war "cordon sanitaire," France incited the little countries to threaten Germany on her promise to help—and then neglected to remain able to help. On the same formula Britain encouraged Poland to resist on England's "guaranty" of assistance and was wholly unable to help. Similarly, for domestic politics, we are holding out false hopes to England and France and have incited them to war.

All those small nations are gone—nine of them. France and England are repsonsible. France also is gone. England is going. We are repeating the same ghastly international immorality and suicide. For God's sake let's keep out—at least long enough to get ready to get in.

Quotable Quotes

By United States Senator Henry F. Ashurst, Democrat, of Arizona

There is about the Senate some talk of adjournment. Those who wish to serve their country in an hour of crisis and of peril will not talk adjournment. * * * That is the language of defeat, of run away, of abandonment of duty. I am a candidate for re-election to the Senate. To me it would be a major calamity to be defeated for re-election [laughter], but I am prepared to remain here all summer, and I shall not vote to adjourn. What a miserable figure I would cut before the country, trying to be re-elected and running away from the very duties to which I have asked to be returned.

Morning Motto

The form of government is unimportant—the spirit everything.—GEN. VON SCHMIDT.

We have no illusions about untrained volunteers. The day of "one good American boy can lick three furriners" is gone. But one good American boy with equal weapons is still as good a boy as lives on this earth.

With calm confidence and reliance on our own emerging strength, America goes forward unflinching and unafraid to meet whatever the world has in store!

THE DAILY STORY

GHOST WRITER

Mr. Trotter Is A Smooth Proposition, Much Too Smooth For A Simple Place Like the Bass County Jail

By FRANK BENNETT

For a week now Dirge, who besides being the fattest man in this part of the state is the sheriff of Bass County, has refused to speak to me in a decent manner. He is mad at me. "Hod," he says to me "you cause me more trouble than my ingrown toenail." And all I did was try to do him a favor. It happened like this.

The other day I went to Weddle's Drug Store and bought myself one of those true detective story magazines on account of I am the deputy sheriff and want to improve myself for my job. While I was standing there, looking at the picture of a young feller what had got shot, a young slim-faced man with slicked-back hair and sad eyes came up to me and looked at what I was doing.

"Ah," he says, "I see you are about to read one of my stories."

"Your stories?" I says.

"Yes," he says and smiled. "I am what you call a ghost writer. I go around to policemen and detectives and get true stories of cases they have handled. Then I write the stories up under their own names."

"Do tell. I am mighty glad to meet you, Mr. —"

"Trotter. Daniel Trotter." He stuck out a thin hand, which I shook warmly.

"Mr. Trotter," I says, "you are the very man I am looking for. It so happens that I am the deputy sheriff. Only the other day, Dirge, the sheriff says to me, 'Hod', says he, 'publicity is the thing that makes people famous. Hod, you and me need to get our names out before the public.' "

"So you are a deputy?" Trotter says, backing away.

"Yes. I will take you up to the jail office where Dirge will tell you about a case and also give you some pictures."

"Sorry," he says, "but I doubt if I have got time."

"Nonsense," says I, taking him by the arm, for I wasn't going to let this chance slip through my fingers. "You have got to come with me."

He did. Dirge opened one eye when we walked in and looked us over.

"What has this man done, Hod?" he asks.

"Dirge," says I, "meet Mr. Trotter. He is a ghost writer. He writes true crime stories like this." And I shoved the magazine under Dirge's red nose. "This is one of his stories. He has come to write us up a story. This magazine is read by a lot of people."

Dirge got both eyes open and shook the man's hand. "You're as welcome as rain in summer," he says. "Hod, give him a chair. Mr. Trotter, I will be glad to co-operate with you on a story."

Mr. Trotter sat down and looked uneasily about the room. "Nice little jail," he murmurs.

"Yes," Dirge dug into a drawer and got out some pictures. "Look these over, Mr. Trotter, and see what you think of 'em."

"Not bad," he says.

Dirge folded his hands across his bay window and smiled happily. "I call this case the Glass Jug Case on account of a glass jug was the motive for the shooting."

"Interesting," Mr. Trotter murmurs, putting the pictures in a pocket and looking about the room.

"It was a very spectacular case, and me I am the one who made the arrest. I will give you my picture so's you can put it in the magazine. And Dirge gave him a snapshot of himself.

"Fine," the man says.

Then Dirge shut his eyes so he could think better and told about the time Grandpa Barge and old man Fink got into a fight on account of them both owning a glass jug apiece. They had gone to Louie Loots' still for a couple of jugs of his stuff. On the way home they sampled some. One of the jugs got busted, and a argument followed over whose jug it was that didn't get busted.

"That," says Dirge, "was the beginning of the Barge-Fink feud." And he went on to tell how they got to taking potshots at each other until old man Fink got it between the eyes.

"He Is A Ghost Writer"

"Very good," Mr. Trotter says. "I will write the story."

"That will be fine," Dirge says. You will let me know when and where to look for it?"

"Yes," this Mr. Trotter says.

He shook hands with both of us and left.

"Hod," Dirge says, "wait until the Rosebloomers see my picture in the magazine and read the story under my name. Talk about publicity—by the by, I believe I will go down to the newspaper office and tell Mr. Horn about it now. Do I have time to do that before dinner, Hod?"

I felt for my watch, but it was not there. "Funny," says I, "but I must of left my watch at home."

Dirge felt for his watch. "Mine is gone! Hod ——" his voice died away, and he stared at me goggle-eyed.

I got a funny feeling in the pit of my stomach right away. I reached into the pocket where I kept my money, but I didn't have no pocketbook left. Neither did Dirge.

Dirge didn't say anything. He just picked up a bunch of crooks' pictures and began to look through 'em. Pretty soon he handed one to me.

"There is your ghost writer," he says. "He's wanted for house breaking and pocket picking." Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

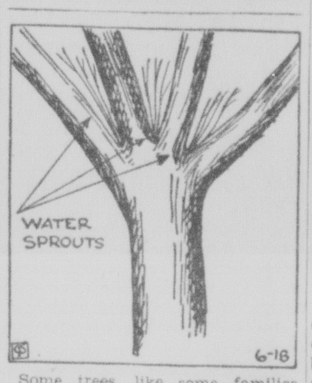
TODAY'S GARDENGRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

(Distributed by Central Press Association)



Some trees, like some families, are plagued by a host of unwanted relatives. In the tree world such unwanted relatives are known as suckers, or water sprouts. They take nourishment from the afflicted tree, and, in addition, give it an untidy or frowzy appearance.

As shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph, water sprouts are succulent shoots which grow out from the base or along the trunk or main branches of a tree. They should be cut out as close to the trunk or limbs as possible.

Water sprouts often are seen on apple trees, frequently as the result of too severe pruning. The topping of a tree, or severe breakage of limbs due to windstorms often causes a crop of suckers or water sprouts to appear. In such cases it is an indication of Nature's attempt to restore proper balance.

HOW do you judge the "deal" you make when you buy a new car—by what you get for your old car, or by the value you receive for the actual money difference paid out?

If you put trade-in allowance first—be careful of what the trade calls a "pack."

A "pack" is an extra amount slipped into the final delivered price quoted you to allow the dealer to "up" his used-car allowances. It makes you think you're driving a better bargain—but you may find you actually pay out even more in the end. The dealer who "packs" may give you more for the old car—but he asks more for the new one!

So the smart way to buy is to judge value by the new-car price, not simply the trade-in allowance.

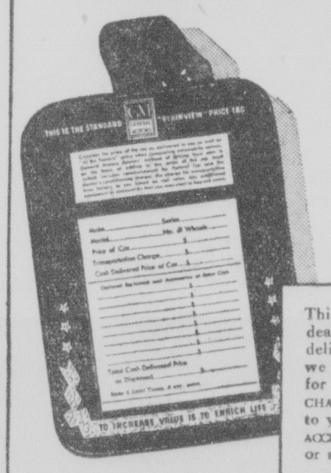
Get itemized delivered prices such as we General Motors dealers give you on our "plainview" price chart and price tag.

They show the charge for the car itself; the charge for transportation, based on rail rates; our charge for any extra equipment or accessories you may elect to buy.

Subtract our trade-in allowance, and you have the money difference the new car costs you. That's the real measure of the "deal" you have made.

Thus our "plainview" pricing helps you protect yourself against "packed" prices. You buy on value instead of trade-in allowances that may be artificially inflated.

Why not drop in and learn more about how it works?



This is the standard price tag used by General Motors dealers to show what makes up the prices of new cars delivered to customers. "PRICE OF CAR" means the price we charge for the car itself, including reimbursement for Federal Tax and conditioning—"TRANSPORTATION CHARGE" means a charge for transportation from factory to you, based on rail rates—"OPTIONAL EQUIPMENT AND ACCESSORIES" means the charge for any extra equipment or accessories you elect to buy.

Look for the wall chart before you buy and
- ✓ Know what you're paying;
- ✓ Know what you're getting;
- ✓ See the value in the car;
- ✓ See all items in the price.

HOW do you judge the "deal" you make when you buy a new car—by what you get for your old car, or by the value you receive for the actual money difference paid out?

If you put trade-in allowance first—be careful of what the trade calls a "pack."

A "pack" is an extra amount slipped into the final delivered price quoted you to allow the dealer to "up" his used-car allowances. It makes you think you're driving a better bargain—but you may find you actually pay out even more in the end. The dealer who "packs" may give you more for the old car—but he asks more for the new one!

So the smart way to buy is to judge value by the new-car price, not simply the trade-in allowance.

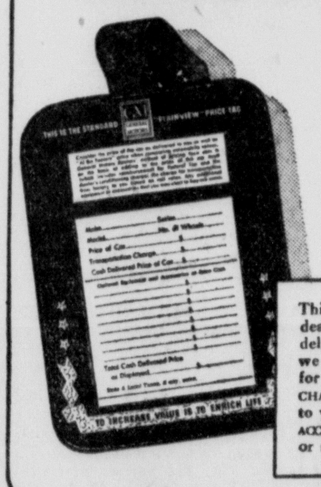
Get itemized delivered prices such as we General Motors dealers give you on our "plainview" price chart and price tag.

They show the charge for the car itself; the charge for transportation, based on rail rates; our charge for any extra equipment or accessories you may elect to buy.

Subtract our trade-in allowance, and you have the money difference the new car costs you. That's the real measure of the "deal" you have made.

Thus our "plainview" pricing helps you protect yourself against "packed" prices. You buy on value instead of trade-in allowances that may be artificially inflated.

Why not drop in and learn more about how it works?



This is the standard price tag used by General Motors dealers to show what makes up the prices of new cars delivered to customers. "PRICE OF CAR" means the price we charge for the car itself, including reimbursement for Federal Tax and conditioning — "TRANSPORTATION CHARGE" means a charge for transportation from factory to you, based on rail rates—"OPTIONAL EQUIPMENT AND ACCESSORIES" means the charge for any extra equipment or accessories you elect to buy.

Visit Home Is Seen As an Aid To Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"When I was 16," a girl writes, "I quit high school and married a boy much against my mother's wishes and hopes for my future. I was living on a farm and his stories of the big city excited me, and I imagined myself in love. I had known him only three weeks.

"For a while I was happy, but when I became homesick and lonesome I complained. I went to shows, but he always grumbled when he had to take me. I had no friends, so I went back to high school. Although the girls are nice, they have their own parties and dates, and I feel more like their mother. I'm only 18 years.

"My husband is only 23, but he never wants to do anything I want to do, he is like an old man. I like to dance; he says nightclubs are cheap, and that we ought not to be talking about pleasures when people in Europe are starving. He says all sorts of mean things, and shouts so that the neighbors can hear him. He has even struck me several times.

Wants To Go Home

"What shall I do, Miss Fairfax? I know I didn't really love him and I feel I'll be happier without him. I want to go home, but I think there could be worse husbands. I've tried to do my part, but going back to school has given me a driving desire to get an education. Did I do wrong? My husband's ideas and mine are as far apart as the poles."

When a boy of 23 acts like a "very old man" it is usually because he is overworked, has lost his high spirits in trying to earn a living for himself and wife. I'm so sorry for youngsters who marry too early and become disillusioned and restless.

Both Too Young

Of course, the answer to this girl's letter summed up in a paragraph is that she and her husband were both too young to marry. But stating the cause for their dissatisfaction with each other doesn't solve their problem.

Youth is life's playtime, the curtain raiser of fun, irresponsibility and supposed happy endings before the real drama of life begins — whether it's going to be tragedy or comedy. Deprived of the jolly curtain-raiser for any reason whatever, youngsters are apt to grow morbid and irritable.

My sympathies are with this boy she married, even though he has been cowardly enough to strike his school-girl wife when his temper has been particularly nasty. If he indulged in these caveman tactics in certain cities of this country, the law would give him a dose of his own medicine. Lashing a wife-beater may be brutal but a brutal act has provoked this legal corrective.

Might Be Patched Up

I don't believe the girl is as completely finished with her marriage as she imagines. "There could be worse husbands", she writes me, and that makes me think their differences might still be patched.

Before definitely breaking up, it might be well for her to go back and pay a visit to her husband. And then she would probably write me: "I never knew 'til we were separated how much I cared.

"At least this simple experiment seems worth trying. What do the readers of my column think about this case?

The Education Money

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 20 years old and very much in love with a boy. He

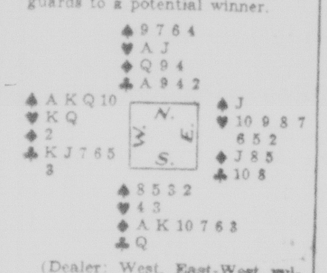
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE "RUFFING SQUEEZE"

THERE ARE no more beautiful plays than the type of squeeze, known to a relatively few expert players, which they usually call the "ruffing squeeze" or "trumping squeeze." Its basic principle is the same as other squeezes in that an opponent is obliged to make a trick-costing discard in one suit or another. It differs in just one main respect. If the hapless opponent picks a particular discard, the declarer then is able to ruff one card in that suit and thereby set up another because the opponent has got rid of one of his guards to a potential winner.



(Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♥	2 ♦
2 ♠	3 ♦

Offhand it appears as if East and West could make game in hearts, whereas actually they can be set at 3-Hearts if South leads his club Q, ruffs the return, cashes his diamond K and makes dummy ruff the next one, thereby giving North two trump winners. So maybe East was crazy like a fox for not bidding again.

West led his spade K against the diamond contract, and ripped off three more tricks in the suit. Had he now switched to his partner's hearts, he would have set the contract one, but to seek bigger game he tried to prevent possible ruffs in hearts by leading his only trump. South was more than pleased. He ran four trumps, then a fifth.

Poor West was now on the spot. If he tossed a heart, the dummy's J would be good, so he threw away a club, of which he had three and of which three had been kept in dummy. The heart J was put on that trick, then declarer went to dummy with the club Q to the K and A. He ruffed the 4 with his last trump, both the 10 and J falling. Now dummy's club 9 was good and the heart A was an entry for it to take the last trick.

Next Fashions Will Follow Straight-and-Narrow Line

By AMY PORTER
(AP) Fashion Writer

The fall silhouette will be straight and narrow, with lowered waistline.

You don't like it. That's too bad. Because, of course, you too will adopt the new silhouette, come fall. "They" have spoken.

Right now, whether you realize it or not, you're probably a living example of a transition silhouette. Notice that print dress you have on. Doesn't the skirt fit a little closer than last year's? And how about your spring suit? Wasn't the jacket rather long, with fullness starting below the hipline? Transition again—a device used by dressmakers to accustom you to gradually changing lines.

Since January, if you've watched fashion pictures, you've seen dinner and evening dresses grow straighter and narrower. You've seen daytime dresses sprout side-saddle drapery, reminiscent of the side-drapery and drooling hemlines of the 1928 to 1930 clothes.

In fashion ads you've seen phrases such as these: "Slimmer hips," "extended thighs," "slim as a reed . . . a column . . . a tall cool drink," "the long-torso look." All straws in the wind.

Early fall collections show dropped waistlines, even in fur coats. Skirt fullness in dresses is confined to the front so that there's a straight panel-like line in back—and new corsets are inches longer.

Everything points to a swing of the pendulum back to the 1928 clothes—sometimes called the ugliest styles women ever wore—with short, narrow skirts and wide belts encircling hips. If "they" take a notion to lengthen skirts, we'll be back to the post-war hobble-skirt styles of 1918, when a girl could get on a street car all right, but couldn't get off unless she jumped into somebody's arms.

"They," by the way, are Parisian designers—Schiaparelli, Balenciaga, and the rest, who still control fashion trends, war or no war.

Some experts think American women won't accept the new silhouette in its severest form. They think women accustomed to the comfort and grace of 1939 fashions, with natural waistlines, flaring skirts, may rebel. For the rebels, there'll still be unregimented fashions. And narrow skirt effects will be achieved painlessly, by means of pressed pleats, inverted pleats, front and back shirring.

Sparkling Eyes Light Beauty

Eyes are hard-working servants. Rest periods, using small compresses, will restore their freshness.

By HELEN FOLLETT

EYES THAT sparkle with fun and good nature are beauty wealth. They make a strong appeal; even old Sober Sides cannot resist them. Let the girl who is given to grey moods think that fact over. We all love the gay darling. She is as delightful as a freshening breeze.

It's no good spending money at the beauty works, getting facials and laying on the complexion batik, if the human lamps take on a cold, sullen or embittered appearance. Many a girl with perfect features misses the beauty grade because her eyes are not sparkling and expressive.

There are calculating eyes, suspicious ones, hard ones, restless ones, that never give you a direct look. There are tender, twinkling optic stars that touch the spring of emotions. We must come to the conclusion then that the beauty of the eyes is pretty much what one's mind and soul put into them.

Be Kind to Eyes

Eyes are hard working servants, on the job every waking hour. Be kind to them. They become dull through loss of sleep. Worry softens the surrounding tissues. Morning and night, bathe them with hot water, then with cold. Before going out for the merry evening, place over them a heavy cloth which has been wrung out of cold water; it will give the eyes freshness.

Sties are small boils. A germ burrows in the pore beside the eyelash, kicks up a fuss and pus forms. No girl can qualify as a good looker when that happens.

To hasten its departure, apply hot compresses. Dip a thick pad of gauze in a hot boric acid solution, dissolve one scant teaspoonful of boric acid in a cup of water, and hold close to the flesh. The yellow point will form in course of time. Do not lance it. Keep on with the compresses; the moist heat will cause the pustule to break; the contents will flow out.

Opening the sty before the point is fully formed may spread the infection to surrounding tissues.

Various Events Planned To Aid Red Cross Fund

For the second successive day, two public card parties will be held for the war relief fund of the American Red Cross.

The American Legion Auxiliary will sponsor a party this evening beginning at 8:30 o'clock at the American Legion home, corner of Harrison stret and the Queen City pavement. Mrs. David Allen, chairman for the affair, announces that bridge, five-hundred and set-back will be played.

Also scheduled for this evening is a card party sponsored by the Pride of Allegany Council, No. 110, Daughters of America. This party will be held at 8:30 p. m. at the Junior Order Hall, Polk street. Refreshments and prizes have been donated.

Tomorrow the final in a series of three card parties sponsored by the American Legion, Post No. 13, will be held at the Legion home at 8 p. m. The proceeds from the three parties will be turned into the war relief fund.

The Daughters of the American Revolution plan to sell lemonade and cookies in the George Washington headquarters, Riverside Park, Saturday afternoon and evening.

Visit Home Is Seen As an Aid To Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"When I was 16," a girl writes, "I quit high school and married a boy much against my mother's wishes and hopes for my future. I was living on a farm and his stories of the big city excited me, and I imagined myself in love. I had known him only three weeks.

"For a while I was happy, but when I became homesick and lonesome I complained. I went to shows, but he always grumbled when he had to take me. I had no friends, so I went back to high school. Although the girls are nice, they have their own parties and dates, and I feel more like their mother. I'm only 18 years.

"My husband is only 23, but he never wants to do anything I want to do, he is like an old man. I like to dance; he says nightclubs are cheap, and that we ought not to be talking about pleasures when people in Europe are starving. He says all sorts of mean things, and shouts so that the neighbors can hear him. He has even struck me several times.

Wants To Go Home

"What shall I do, Miss Fairfax? I know I didn't really love him and I feel I'll be happier without him. I want to go home, but I think there could be worse husbands. I've tried to do my part, but going back to school has given me a driving desire to get an education. Did I do wrong? My husband's ideas and mine are as far apart as the poles."

When a boy of 23 acts like a "very old man" it is usually because he is overworked, has lost his high spirits in trying to earn a living for himself and wife. I'm so sorry for youngsters who marry too early and become disillusioned and restless.

Both Too Young

Of course, the answer to this girl's letter summed up in a paragraph is that she and her husband were both too young to marry. But stating the cause for their dissatisfaction with each other doesn't solve their problem.

Youth is life's playtime, the curtain raiser of fun, irresponsibility and supposed happy endings before the real drama of life begins — whether it's going to be tragedy or comedy. Deprived of the jolly curtain-raiser for any reason whatever, youngsters are apt to grow morbid and irritable.

My sympathies are with this boy she married, even though he has been cowardly enough to strike his school-girl wife when his temper has been particularly nasty. If he indulged in these caveman tactics in certain cities of this country, the law would give him a dose of his own medicine. Lashing a wife-beater may be brutal but a brutal act has provoked this legal corrective.

Might Be Patched Up

I don't believe the girl is as completely finished with her marriage as she imagines. "There could be worse husbands", she writes me, and that makes me think their differences might still be patched.

Before definitely breaking up, it might be well for her to go back and pay a visit to her husband. And then she would probably write me: "I never knew 'til we were separated how much I cared.

"At least this simple experiment seems worth trying. What do the readers of my column think about this case?

Next Fashions Will Follow Straight-and-Narrow Line

By AMY PORTER
(AP) Fashion Writer

The fall silhouette will be straight and narrow, with lowered waistline. You don't like it. That's too bad. Because, of course, you too will adopt the new silhouette, come fall. "They" have spoken.

Right now, whether you realize it or not, you're probably a living example of a transition silhouette. Notice that print dress you have on. Doesn't the skirt fit a little closer than last year's? And how about your spring suit? Wasn't the jacket rather long, with fullness starting below the hipline? Transition again—a device used by dressmakers to accustom you to gradually changing lines.

Since January, if you've watched fashion pictures, you've seen dinner and evening dresses grow straighter and narrower. You've seen daytime dresses sprout side-saddle drapery, reminiscent of the side-drapery and drooling hemlines of the 1928 to 1930 clothes.

In fashion ads you've seen phrases such as these: "Slimmer hips," "extended thighs," "slim as a reed ... a column ... a tall cool drink," "the long-torso look." All straws in the wind.

Early fall collections show dropped waistlines, even in fur coats. Skirt fullness in dresses is confined to the front so that there's a straight panel-like line in back—and new corsets are inches longer.

Everything points to a swing of the pendulum back to the 1928 clothes—sometimes called the ugliest styles women ever wore—with short, narrow skirts and wide belts encircling hips. If "they" take a notion to lengthen skirts, we'll be back to the post-war hobble-skirt styles of 1918, when a girl could get on a street car all right, but couldn't get off unless she jumped into somebody's arms.

"They," by the way, are Parisian designers—Schiaparelli, Balenciaga, and the rest, who still control fashion trends, war or no war.

Some experts think American women won't accept the new silhouette in its severest form. They think women accustomed to the comfort and grace of 1939 fashions, with natural waistlines, flaring skirts, may rebel. For the rebels, there'll still be unregimented fashions. And narrow skirt effects will be achieved painlessly, by means of pressed pleats, inverted pleats, front and back shirring.

Various Events Planned To Aid Red Cross Fund

For the second successive day, two public card parties will be held for the war relief fund of the American Red Cross.

The American Legion Auxiliary will sponsor a party this evening beginning at 8:30 o'clock at the American Legion home, corner of Harrison stret and the Queen City pavement. Mrs. David Allen, chairman for the affair, announces that bridge, five-hundred and set-back will be played.

Also scheduled for this evening is a card party sponsored by the Pride of Allegany Council, No. 110, Daughters of America. This party will be held at 8:30 p. m. at the Junior Order Hall, Polk street. Refreshments and prizes have been donated.

Tomorrow the final in a series of three card parties sponsored by the American Legion, Post No. 13, will be held at the Legion home at 8 p. m. The proceeds from the three parties will be turned into the war relief fund.

The Daughters of the American Revolution plan to sell lemonade and cookies in the George Washington headquarters, Riverside Park, Saturday afternoon and evening.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

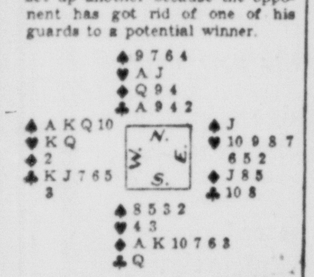
THE "RUFFING SQUEEZE"

THERE ARE no more beautiful plays than the type of squeeze, known to a relatively few expert players, which they usually call the "ruffing squeeze" or "trumping squeeze." Its basic principle is the same as other squeezes in that an opponent is obliged to make a trick-costing discard in one suit or another. It differs in just one main respect. If the hapless opponent picks a particular discard, the declarer then is able to ruff one card in that suit and thereby set up another because the opponent has got rid of one of his guards to a potential winner.



(Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♥	2 ♦
2 ♠	3 ♦

Offhand it appears as if East and West could make game in hearts, whereas actually they can be set at 3-Hearts if South leads his club Q, ruffs the return, cashes his diamond K and makes dummy ruff the next one, thereby giving North two trump winners. So maybe East was crazy like a fox for not bidding again.

West led his spade K against the diamond contract, and ripped off three more tricks in the suit. Had he now switched to his partner's hearts, he would have set the contract one, but to seek bigger game he tried to prevent possible ruffs in hearts by leading his only trump. South was more than pleased. He ran four trumps, then a fifth.

Poor West was now on the spot. If he tossed a heart, the dummy's J would be good, so he threw away a club, of which he had three and of which three had been kept in dummy. The heart J was put on that trick, then declarer went to dummy with the club Q to the K and A. He ruffed the 4 with his last trump, both the 10 and J falling. Now dummy's club 9 was good and the heart A was an entry for it to take the last trick.

Sparkling Eyes Light Beauty

Eyes are hard-working servants. Rest periods, using small compresses, will restore their freshness.

By HELEN FOLLETT

EYES THAT sparkle with fun and good nature are beauty wealth. They make a strong appeal; even old Sober Sides cannot resist them. Let the girl who is given to grey moods think that fact over. We all love the gay darling. She is as delightful as a freshening breeze.

It's no good spending money at the beauty works, getting facials and laying on the complexion batik, if the human lamps take on a cold, sullen or embittered appearance. Many a girl with perfect features misses the beauty grade because her eyes are not sparkling and expressive.

There are calculating eyes, suspicious ones, hard ones, restless ones, that never give you a direct look. There are tender, twinkling optic stars that touch the spring of emotions. We must come to the conclusion then that the beauty of the eyes is pretty much what one's mind and soul put into them.

Be Kind to Eyes

Eyes are hard working servants, on the job every waking hour. Be kind to them. They become dull through loss of sleep. Worry softens the surrounding tissues. Morning and night, bathe them with hot water, then with cold. Before going out for the merry evening, place over them a heavy cloth which has been wrung out of cold water; it will give the eyes freshness.

Sties are small boils. A germ burrows in the pore beside the eyelash, kicks up a fuss and pus forms. No girl can qualify as a good looker when that happens.

To hasten its departure, apply hot compresses. Dip a thick pad of gauze in a hot boric acid solution, dissolve one scant teaspoonful of boric acid in a cup of water, and hold close to the flesh. The yellow point will form in course of time. Do not lance it. Keep on with the compresses; the moist heat will cause the pustule to break; the contents will flow out.

Opening the sty before the point is fully formed may spread the infection to surrounding tissues.

Things Nobody Ever Thought Of Give Women New Businesses

By ADELAIDE KERR
(AP) Feature Service Writer

Theme song of this story is "She thought of it first."

It's the tale of four women who are earning their livings in unusual ways they originated themselves. They do different things, but they all use the same formula for success—imagination and hard work.

Take Nina Wolf. She sells seashells—in the heart of New York. Uses them to make table decorations, to cover boxes, clocks and frames and to form the decorative scheme of entire rooms.

Nina Wolf shapes a centerpiece ont of branch coral.

The business grew out of her need a few years ago for something to put on the piano. She's always been "crazy over shells." Collected them in Europe and everywhere else she went for more than 18 years. One day, after redecorating a room in her home, she decided she had to have something new for the piano. She took two big conches and stuck coral branches in them. It started a business.

She worked years to develop a coating that would make shells stick to things; months more perfecting a way to tint coral branches. (All secrets, she says.) Then she pulled in more shells from all over the world—shells, abilones, conches, nautiluses, clams—and was at her work in earnest.

Then there's socially prominent Mrs. Joseph R. Truesdale. She runs a bureau that handles wedding arrangements for working girls. Furnishes wedding gown, veil, bouquet, cake, photographs, reception at a good New York hotel and refreshments for 20 guests—all for as little as $100.

Says what started her was the sympathy she felt for a young teacher friend who was struggling to handle alone all the arrangements for her wedding and reception in New York. She opened a bureau.

Its idea is to give working girls the nicest weddings possible at the lowest cost and with the least worry. Clients decide how much they can spend. Mrs. Truesdale takes care of the rest. She says the girls love it and she never spent more interesting days in her life.

Easing heartaches for old people is a business for two former social workers—Helen Large and Dorothy Stabler. They both like old people and grew tired of the usual social service treadmill, so they founded "Service for Seniors." It supplies old people with the things they most need. Sometimes they pay for it, sometimes an absent son or daughter does.

If a frail old lady must break up her home, they help her do it and find another suitable place. If a son in China is worried about the health of his mother in the United States, they visit her regularly and send him reports. If a lonely old man wants a pinochle partner they supply him with one. They meet visiting aunts at the station with roses, buy bed jackets for invalid sisters and guide visiting uncles around the Fair.

It's a service that saves wear and tear on relatives and it spashes sunshine.

Irrigation canals in the Salt River Valley of Arizona, if placed end to end, would extend from New York to Chicago.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

"THE TROUBLE with your idea, Gayle," Bill Bailey was saying, "is that we haven't enough room. Not even this big mansion can accommodate a theater that will seat more than 400. And there wouldn't be time to take out all the seats and then have a dance."

The other girls and Jeremy Tucker sat with them in this conference.

"The Orpheum theater man wants us to present the play on his stage," Bill went on. "But that's out."

"What we need is something outdoors," Gayle suggested. "It's spring. Summer, really. We could have a garden party, couldn't we? And then move the people inside to see the play?"

"Grand!" Tempe Hyde put in. Tempe was given to sudden enthusiasms. "Under the oaks."

Jeremy chimed in.

"Oh, I say—see here, a lot of times, in the ancient days, people did have plays outdoors. In ancient Rome and Greece, and I think in Egypt. And even in the prehistoric civilizations of Mexico. Archeology reveals much that—"

"That iss so!" Lola Montesa said, brightly. "In New Mexico, too, those ancients have beeg times out doors always. Everytheeng iss outdoors where I wass born, even now."

"I had no idea you were born outdoors, Lola!" Gayle couldn't resist that, but as the others laughed with her she turned to Bill. "Sorry, author, you'll have to write us an outdoor drama."

"Look, I'll do that!" Bill was suddenly earnest. "I mean, I can make 'The Wit to Woo' an outdoor play as well as indoors. Do you suppose we—could we arrange a stage out here?"

"Al fresco?" Gayle encouraged.

"Right! We could make it go, Gayle. Look! Act one might just as well take place in a bower of trees and shrubbery instead of in a campus cloister as I planned it. Yonder in a nook just off the east path — remember the clearing there? It slopes just right for the seats, and there's a flat spot for the acting. We could string lights, and—say, I can whip up a swell setting around the swimming pool, too, I'll bet!"

The conference was on the shady front porch this morning, and Bill leaned to a small table there and spread his script. Gayle sat near his left, Jeremy to his right. In a moment the six other girls were standing behind and beside them, crowding close, leaning to read the script again and talk about it.

"At the pool is where the secondary climax can be worked in," Bill was saying. "See, the heroine's sister goes there to be alone and sit on a bench and think, because she thinks her heart is broken. In that quiet mood, she begins humming, and finally singing. Sort of like in an opera, see? She sings of her heartbreak—that'll have to be you, Lola; you took the singing honors last time—and—"

One of the other girls interrupted. "But Lola doesn't have anee heartbreak, Beel. She is veree happee."

Everybody laughed a little, and Bill took up the brogue.

"I'll have Jeremee make thee—how you say?—Love—and break her heart before hand. Then she can act convincingly, no es verdad?"

Poor Jeremy turned crimson at the suggestion, and at the mass attention suddenly turned on him. Lola's smile had faded; she looked slightly alarmed at the others, until the conference was resumed.

"Anyhow, the sister sings," Bill went on, "and pours out her heart. Maybe we could have a concealed orchestra to back her up there. Anyway, her guitar. But after she sings she is still restless. The night is warm, the water inviting, see? So she decides to go for a lonely swim.

"Because it is midnight and she is alone, she doesn't bother to go back to her room for her swim suit. She just strips and dives in. The water is refreshing. The audience sees her swim back and forth from the dark night shadows at one end through the moonlit waves at the other end—that'll make a grand sequence, won't it?

"But the hero has heard her singing from afar, and because he is anxious to explain his actions in the earlier scenes he comes seeking her now. He does not know she is in the pool, but he walks through the shrubbery and trees in that direction, softly calling her. When he gets near the pool, she hears. But of course she cannot answer him. Consternation grips her. She dare not even leave the pool to flee. So she just retreats into the dark shadows at the shallow end, with just her nose exposed. She won't even be visible to the audience, but they'll know she is there, see?"

Bill was improvising, gesturing and talking ad lib, staring at all and none of the group around him and writing his play as he talked. He had a definite sense of the dramatic and he even made the telling of it good.

"But the hero," he resumed, "continues to call her. When he comes to the edge of the pool he calls twice more, waits, gets no answer. Then he, too, gripped by the apparent solitude of the place, and in a moody mood of his own, breaks into song—we'll end up making this a light opera if we aren't careful! If I'm to act the hero, I'll get a stand-in; I know some fellows who can really sing, and I'll make one of them do his stuff for me in the bushes, while I open my mouth and go through the motions, see? It'll look real, with just the moonlight on.

"All right, then, the hero sings, too, and maybe he walks out onto the big diving board to do it. Maybe that will be the place for the best effect—we'll have to go see tonight. Then, say, he also gets the urge to go swimming. It can be a slow scene, understand; a lot of pantomime to build up the mood. But the suspense will be growing all the time because the girl is concealed in the other end of the pool, and being a very lovely and moral girl she is in a predicament now, the audience knows. And so what happens? Well, when—"

The sheer story interest of Bill's recitation held them for another quarter hour or so.

Bill had undeniable talent, a flair for comedy and incident and situation which go to make light dramas good. The others in this group were deeply impressed this morning and they showed it by their manner. Enthusiasm for the theater grew rapidly in all of them, and the nine young people felt a happy intimacy they had not experienced before.

On Jeremy Tucker's face, especially, had come a change. He looked owl-eyed with surprise at times, through his heavy-rimmed glasses, but he reflected the group enthusiasm, too.

"I say—see here, Bill! There are some old, ah, bleacher seats stored in one of the stables. I have ordered them removed because I plan to purchase some saddle horses this week. I was told that the old seats had been used when my mother and father lived here, and sponsored important matches on the two tennis courts. I believe these old seats could be used again."

"Swell, Jeremy! We'll use them. May have to—say, we've got to work out act three somewhere. Got to have a place for the climax and the final wash-up of the story. Now, we can't move the scenery, but we can move the audience, say over to the tennis courts. That would be logical for a college story. I had planned for the characters to meet in a sorority house in act three, but they might just as well meet on the sorority house tennis courts. Eh?"

"Why not?" Tempe Hyde nodded, and the others agreed.

And so it went for another hour. Twelve o'clock had come and slipped by before the matter was finally threshed out. There were still details, and the group agreed to meet again after lunch, which Gayle ordered for one o'clock.

At a quarter of one Gayle suddenly missed Lola. Through a window then she saw her at a distance, walking toward the Merrifield swimming pool, and on sudden impulse she followed.

She came onto the dark-haired girl staring at the water. Lola blushed a little in surprise when she turned to face Gayle.

"Iss not any tree over thee little end," she spoke, in a sort of hushed tone of awe. "I am anxious to—do my part. But I—all thoss people will be looking, Gayle! And I will have to—to—!"

She halted, and Gayle laughed and suddenly put an arm around the other girl.

"Lola, you are a darling! And we'll iron that matter out some way, never fear. For instance, you could wear tights and—" feels that before we can be married he should pay back to his mother the money he borrowed to go through college.

She stopped, because Jeremy had suddenly appeared through the bushes, his face also showing grave concern.

We have been engaged two months secretly, and I will get my ring when he can afford it. He lives in another state and I see him about every two weeks. I know he never goes with other girls because he's with me whenever he can get off from work.

We never used to quarrel, but now we have little fusses over the fact that we can't see one another enough.

Do you think we ought to wait until he can pay back the money to his mother, so we can start with a clean slate? S.

As the platitude reminds us, "Circumstances alter cases." If the boy's mother is well-to-do, young and capable of earning her own living, she might excuse the debt, in which case the payment probably will be put off indefinitely, which is the usual experience in such cases. If, however, the mother actually needs the money, I think it's up to the boy's sense of honor to repay.

You'll probably hate me for saying so, but at 20 years of age, you should be able to wait a couple of years until this young man has repaid his mother and is standing on his own feet. To evade debts and responsibility is not good for character-building, and I think you and the boy will be happier if he does the square thing by the obligations he has contracted.

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

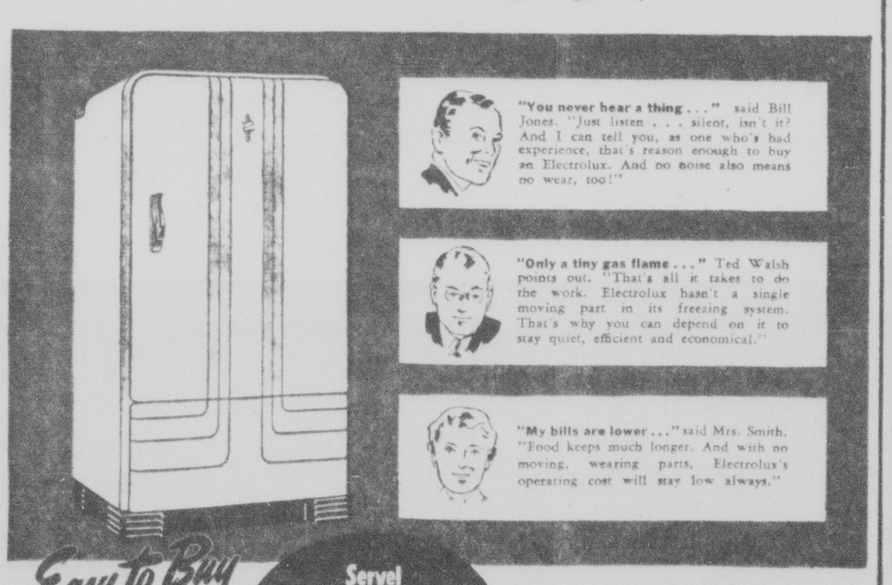
Which refrigerator do people choose who've had Experience?



"You never hear a thing . . ." said Bill Jones. "Just listen . . . silent, isn't it? And I can tell you, as one who's had experience, that's reason enough to buy an Electrolux. And no noise also means no wear, too!"

"Only a tiny gas flame . . ." Ted Walsh points out. "That's all it takes to do the work. Electrolux hasn't a single moving part in its freezing system. That's why you can depend on it to stay quiet, efficient and economical."

"My bills are lower . . ." said Mrs. Smith. "Food keeps much longer. And with no moving, wearing parts, Electrolux's operating cost will stay low always."

Things Nobody Ever Thought Of Give Women New Businesses

By ADELAIDE KERR
(AP) Feature Service Writer

Theme song of this story is "She thought of it first."

It's the tale of four women who are earning their livings in unusual ways they originated themselves. They do different things, but they all use the same formula for success—imagination and hard work.

Take Nina Wolf. She sells seashells—in the heart of New York. Uses them to make table decorations, to cover boxes, clocks and frames and to form the decorative scheme of entire rooms.

The business grew out of her need a few years ago for something to put on the piano. She's always been "crazy over shells." Collected them in Europe and everywhere else she went for more than 18 years. One day, after redecorating a room in her home, she decided she had to have something new for the piano. She took two big conches and stuck coral branches in them. It started a business.

Nina Wolf shapes a centerpiece ont of branch coral.

She worked years to develop a coating that would make shells stick to things; months more perfecting a way to tint coral branches. (All secrets, she says.) Then she pulled in more shells from all over the world—shells, abilones, conches, nautiluses, clams—and was at her work in earnest.

Then there's socially prominent Mrs. Joseph R. Truesdale. She runs a bureau that handles wedding arrangements for working girls. Furnishes wedding gown, veil, bouquet, cake, photographs, reception at a good New York hotel and refreshments for 20 guests—all for as little as $100.

Says what started her was the sympathy she felt for a young teacher friend who was struggling to handle alone all the arrangements for her wedding and reception in New York. She opened a bureau.

Its idea is to give working girls the nicest weddings possible at the lowest cost and with the least worry. Clients decide how much they can spend. Mrs. Truesdale takes care of the rest. She says the girls love it and she never spent more interesting days in her life.

Easing heartaches for old people is a business for two former social workers—Helen Large and Dorothy Stabler. They both like old people and grew tired of the usual social service treadmill, so they founded "Service for Seniors." It supplies old people with the things they most need. Sometimes they pay for it, sometimes an absent son or daughter does.

If a frail old lady must break up her home, they help her do it and find another suitable place. If a son in China is worried about the health of his mother in the United States, they visit her regularly and send him reports. If a lonely old man wants a pinochle partner they supply him with one. They meet visiting aunts at the station with roses, buy bed jackets for invalid sisters and guide visiting uncles around the Fair.

It's a service that saves wear and tear on relatives and it spashes sunshine.

Irrigation canals in the Salt River Valley of Arizona, if placed end to end, would extend from New York to Chicago.

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

"THE TROUBLE with your idea, Gayle," Bill Bailey was saying, "is that we haven't enough room. Not even this big mansion can accommodate a theater that will seat more than 400. And there wouldn't be time to take out all the seats and then have a dance."

The other girls and Jeremy Tucker sat with them in this conference.

"The Orpheum theater man wants us to present the play on his stage," Bill went on. "But that's out."

"What we need is something outdoors," Gayle suggested. "It's spring. Summer, really. We could have a garden party, couldn't we? And then move the people inside to see the play?"

"Grand!" Tempe Hyde put in. Tempe was given to sudden enthusiasms. "Under the oaks."

Jeremy chimed in.

"Oh, I say—see here, a lot of times, in the ancient days, people did have plays outdoors. In ancient Rome and Greece, and I think in Egypt. And even in the prehistoric civilizations of Mexico. Archeology reveals much that—"

"That iss so!" Lola Montesa said, brightly. "In New Mexico, too, those ancients have beeg times out doors always. Everytheeng iss outdoors where I wass born, even now."

"I had no idea you were born outdoors, Lola!" Gayle couldn't resist that, but as the others laughed with her she turned to Bill. "Sorry, author, you'll have to write us an outdoor drama."

"Look, I'll do that!" Bill was suddenly earnest. "I mean, I can make 'The Wit to Woo' an outdoor play as well as indoors. Do you suppose we—could we arrange a stage out here?"

"Al fresco?" Gayle encouraged.

"Right! We could make it go, Gayle. Look! Act one might just as well take place in a bower of trees and shrubbery instead of in a campus cloister as I planned it. Yonder in a nook just off the east path — remember the clearing there? It slopes just right for the seats, and there's a flat spot for the acting. We could string lights, and—say, I can whip up a swell setting around the swimming pool, too, I'll bet!"

The conference was on the shady front porch this morning, and Bill leaned to a small table there and spread his script. Gayle sat near his left, Jeremy to his right. In a moment the six other girls were standing behind and beside them, crowding close, leaning to read the script again and talk about it.

"At the pool is where the secondary climax can be worked in," Bill was saying. "See, the heroine's sister goes there to be alone and sit on a bench and think, because she thinks her heart is broken. In that quiet mood, she begins humming, and finally singing. Sort of like in an opera, see? She sings of her heartbreak—that'll have to be you, Lola; you took the singing honors last time—and—"

One of the other girls interrupted. "But Lola doesn't have anee heartbreak, Beel. She is veree happee."

Everybody laughed a little, and Bill took up the brogue.

"I'll have Jeremee make thee—how you say?—Love—and break her heart before hand. Then she can act convincingly, no es verdad?"

Poor Jeremy turned crimson at the suggestion, and at the mass attention suddenly turned on him. Lola's smile had faded; she looked slightly alarmed at the others, until the conference was resumed.

"Anyhow, the sister sings," Bill went on, "and pours out her heart. Maybe we could have a concealed orchestra to back her up there. Anyway, her guitar. But after she sings she is still restless. The night is warm, the water inviting, see? So she decides to go for a lonely swim.

"Because it is midnight and she is alone, she doesn't bother to go back to her room for her swim suit. She just strips and dives in. The water is refreshing. The audience sees her swim back and forth from the dark night shadows at one end through the moonlit waves at the other end—that'll make a grand sequence, won't it?

"But the hero has heard her singing from afar, and because he is anxious to explain his actions in the earlier scenes he comes seeking her now. He does not know she is in the pool, but he walks through the shrubbery and trees in that direction, softly calling her. When he gets near the pool, she hears. But of course she cannot answer him. Consternation grips her. She dare not even leave the pool to flee. So she just retreats into the dark shadows at the shallow end, with just her nose exposed. She won't even be visible to the audience, but they'll know she is there, see?"

Bill was improvising, gesturing and talking ad lib, staring at all and none of the group around him and writing his play as he talked. He had a definite sense of the dramatic and he even made the telling of it good.

"But the hero," he resumed, "continues to call her. When he comes to the edge of the pool he calls twice more, waits, gets no answer. Then he, too, gripped by the apparent solitude of the place, and in a moody mood of his own, breaks into song—we'll end up making this a light opera if we aren't careful! If I'm to act the hero, I'll get a stand-in; I know some fellows who can really sing, and I'll make one of them do his stuff for me in the bushes, while I open my mouth and go through the motions, see? It'll look real, with just the moonlight on.

"All right, then, the hero sings, too, and maybe he walks out onto the big diving board to do it. Maybe that will be the place for the best effect—we'll have to go see tonight. Then, say, he also gets the urge to go swimming. It can be a slow scene, understand; a lot of pantomime to build up the mood. But the suspense will be growing all the time because the girl is concealed in the other end of the pool, and being a very lovely and moral girl she is in a predicament now, the audience knows. And so what happens? Well, when—"

The sheer story interest of Bill's recitation held them for another quarter hour or so.

Bill had undeniable talent, a flair for comedy and incident and situation which go to make light dramas good. The others in this group were deeply impressed this morning and they showed it by their manner. Enthusiasm for the theater grew rapidly in all of them, and the nine young people felt a happy intimacy they had not experienced before.

On Jeremy Tucker's face, especially, had come a change. He looked owl-eyed with surprise at times, through his heavy-rimmed glasses, but he reflected the group enthusiasm, too.

"I say—see here, Bill! There are some old, ah, bleacher seats stored in one of the stables. I have ordered them removed because I plan to purchase some saddle horses this week. I was told that the old seats had been used when my mother and father lived here, and sponsored important matches on the two tennis courts. I believe these old seats could be used again."

"Swell, Jeremy! We'll use them. May have to—say, we've got to work out act three somewhere. Got to have a place for the climax and the final wash-up of the story. Now, we can't move the scenery, but we can move the audience, say over to the tennis courts. That would be logical for a college story. I had planned for the characters to meet in a sorority house in act three, but they might just as well meet on the sorority house tennis courts. Eh?"

"Why not?" Tempe Hyde nodded, and the others agreed.

And so it went for another hour. Twelve o'clock had come and slipped by before the matter was finally threshed out. There were still details, and the group agreed to meet again after lunch, which Gayle ordered for one o'clock.

At a quarter of one Gayle suddenly missed Lola. Through a window then she saw her at a distance, walking toward the Merrifield swimming pool, and on sudden impulse she followed.

She came onto the dark-haired girl staring at the water. Lola blushed a little in surprise when she turned to face Gayle.

"Iss not any tree over thee little end," she spoke, in a sort of hushed tone of awe. "I am anxious to—do my part. But I—all thoss people will be looking, Gayle! And I will have to—to—!"

She halted, and Gayle laughed and suddenly put an arm around the other girl.

"Lola, you are a darling! And we'll iron that matter out some way, never fear. For instance, you could wear tights and—" feels that before we can be married he should pay back to his mother the money he borrowed to go through college.

She stopped, because Jeremy had suddenly appeared through the bushes, his face also showing grave concern.

We have been engaged two months secretly, and I will get my ring when he can afford it. He lives in another state and I see him about every two weeks. I know he never goes with other girls because he's with me whenever he can get off from work.

We never used to quarrel, but now we have little fusses over the fact that we can't see one another enough.

Do you think we ought to wait until he can pay back the money to his mother, so we can start with a clean slate? S.

As the platitude reminds us, "Circumstances alter cases." If the boy's mother is well-to-do young and capable of earning her own living, she might excuse the debt, in which case the payment probably will be put off indefinitely, which is the usual experience in such cases. If, however, the mother actually needs the money, I think it's up to the boy's sense of honor to repay.

You'll probably hate me for saying so, but at 20 years of age, you should be able to wait a couple of years until this young man has repaid his mother and is standing on his own feet. To evade debts and responsibility is not good for character-building, and I think you and the boy will be happier if he does the square thing by the obligations he has contracted.

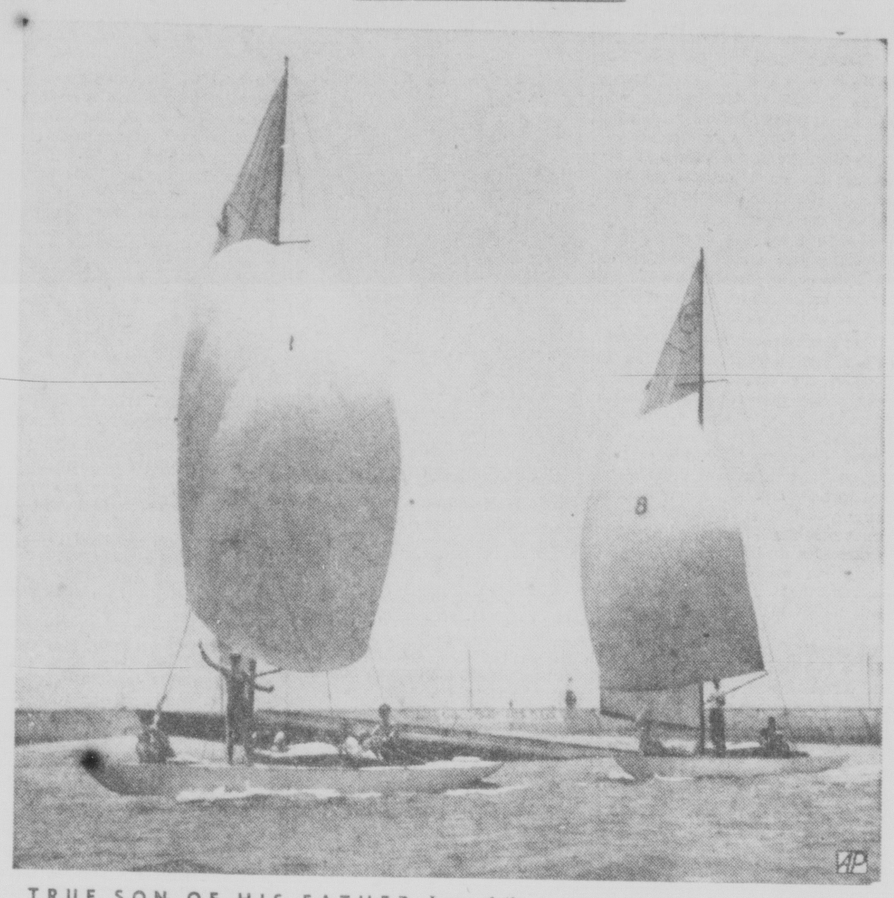
THERE'S WORK AHEAD—Here is a general view of the Brooklyn, N. Y., navy yard showing a cruiser (left), supply dock and destroyers. All of Uncle Sam's navy yards are in for increased activity, as a result of the extraordinary defense appropriations rushed through congress. The force of 11,000 persons employed at this yard is to be greatly augmented.

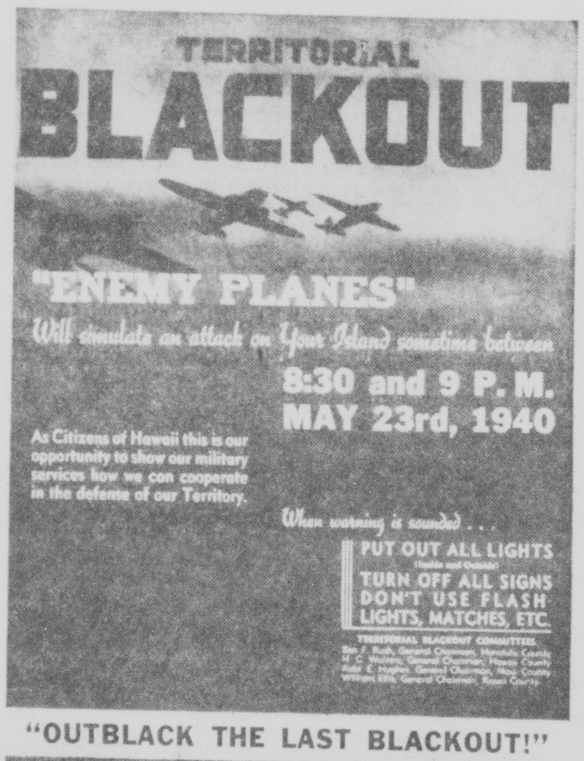
MEXICAN BEAUTY—The nearness of Juanita Olivares, 18, who was chosen the ideal Mexican beauty and queen of the silver fiesta failed to excite the sleeping peon at the right. She lives at the Rancho Telva at Taxco, Mex.



TRUE SON OF HIS FATHER—Love of the sea seems to be as inherent in James Roosevelt as in his father, the President, for here is Jimmy (waving) aboard his new sloop, the Half Moon, which placed second in a race near San Diego. It was first race for the vessel. The Wings, which placed third, is at the right. Note the billowing spinnakers of both sloops.

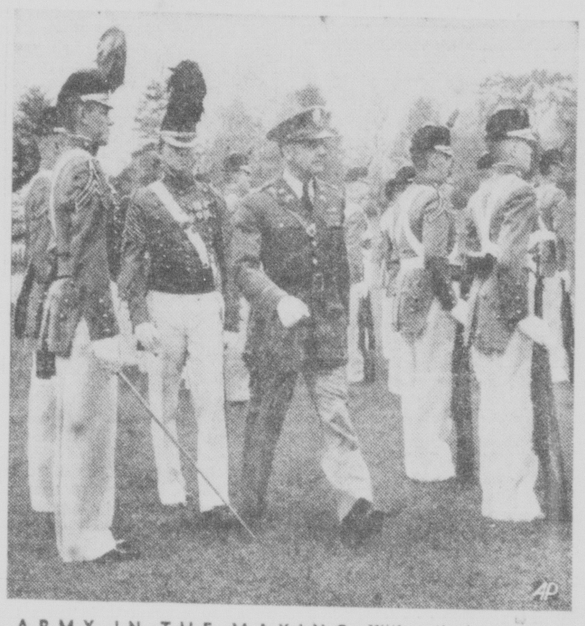
WINNER—Queen of a national air carnival to be staged at Birmingham, Ala., June 1, 2, will be Evelyn Lynne, Alabama-born singer. She'll be enthroned by Stedham Acker, carnival director and manager of the municipal airport.

UPWARD BOUND—At controls of his new 75-horsepower helicopter sits Ivor Sikorsky, 51, Russian-born aeronautical engineer, whose demonstration at Bridgeport, Conn., included vertical takeoff and landing. A variable pitch "windmill" rotor lifted and let down the craft; two tiny rotors in rear of fuselage acted as elevators and a third, as the rudder.



"OUTBLACK THE LAST BLACKOUT!"

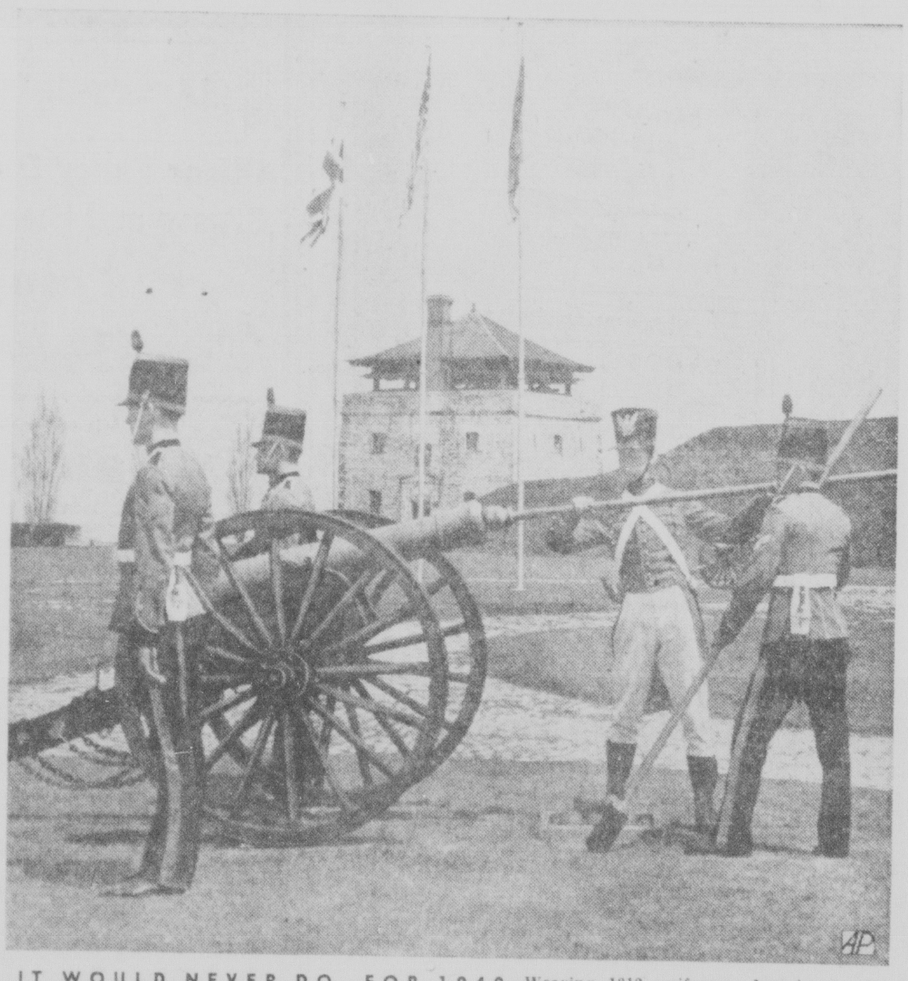
HAWAII TESTS BLACKOUT—Here is one of the posters distributed throughout the Hawaiian Islands, preliminary to a "blackout" planned for May 23 as part of Uncle Sam's rehearsal of defense drills. One portion reads: "As Citizens of Hawaii this is our opportunity to show our military services how we can cooperate in the defense of our Territory."



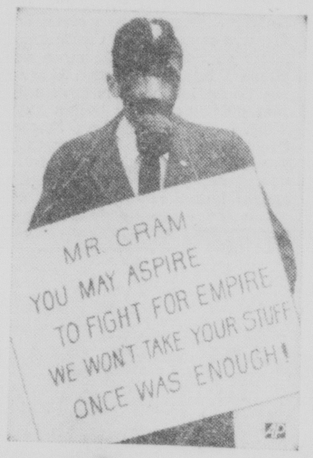
ARMY IN THE MAKING—With nation's new emphasis on a huge defense program, the crack R.O.T.C. unit at Valley Forge military academy in Wayne, Pa., welcomes review by Inspecting Officer Lieut. Col. Gilbert S. Brownell.

DUTCH ENVOY—Flight of The Netherlands' queen, Wilhelmina, to Britain when Nazis invaded her country was defended by Alexander Loudon (above), Netherlands minister to U. S. He explained she was in personal danger.

THE RACE TO ERASE—Even the humble eraser has been mechanized, particularly in the case of above WPA-employed draftsman who's busy at Philadelphia making maps of strategic U. S. areas for defense studies. That's an electric eraser he holds, its value being in the faster production of maps. About 45 expert draftsmen are at work on these defense maps.



IT WOULD NEVER DO, FOR 1940—Wearing 1812 uniforms, American and Canadian soldiers fired an ancient fieldpiece at Fort Niagara, N. Y., marking the 125th anniversary of return of this fort to U. S. after the war of 1812. Fort was held by France, England and U. S., whose flags are at rear. The Canadians were from Fort George, across the Niagara river.



ANTI-ALLIES—Here's how at least one student picketed the classroom of Paul P. Cram, Harvard history instructor who is strongly in favor of American aid to the Allies. The students refused to give their names, wore gas masks.

HISTORY RETOLD—When the Southwest celebrates this year the 400th anniversary of Coronado's search for "seven cities of Cibola paved with gold," scores of cities in New Mexico, Arizona, Oklahoma, Texas will re-enact fragments of Conquistadores history. These little Cochiti dolls (made by Indians) are ready to add to festiveness of occasion.

NAMED TO SEC—Sumner T. Pike (above), Maine Republican nominated by F.D.R. to Securities Exchange Commission, was a World war coast artillery captain.

GRADUATES TO A JOB—Future looks bright for Porter Vaughan, University of Richmond (Va.) senior and southpaw who's agreed to sign with the Athletics for $8,000. At other end of handshake is F. W. Boatwright, university president.

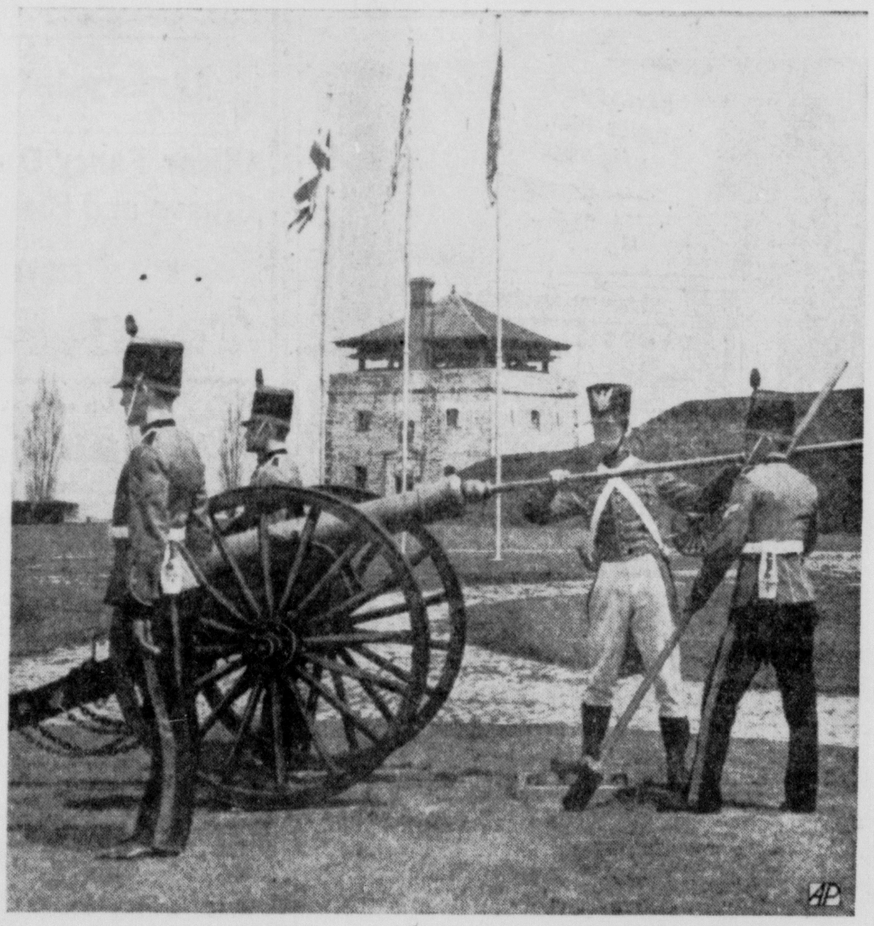
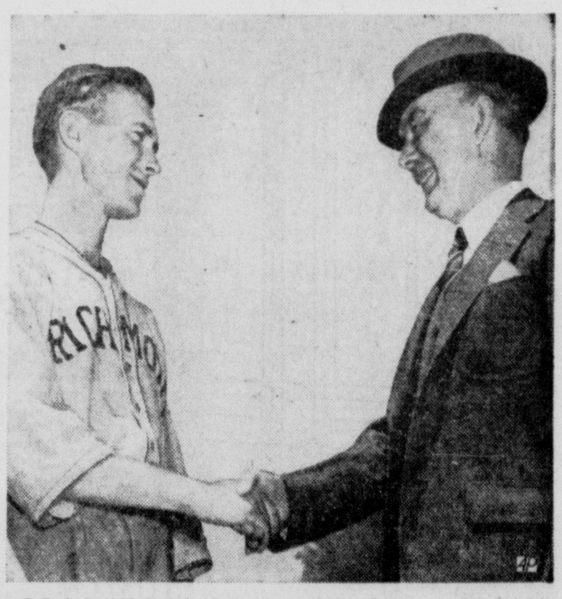
HISTORY RETOLD—When the Southwest celebrates this year the 400th anniversary of Coronado's search for "seven cities of Cibola paved with gold," scores of cities in New Mexico, Arizona, Oklahoma, Texas will re-enact fragments of Conquistadores history. These little Cochiti dolls (made by Indians) are ready to add to festiveness of occasion.

THE RACE TO ERASE—Even the humble eraser has been mechanized, particularly in the case of above WPA-employed draftsman who's busy at Philadelphia making maps of strategic U. S. areas for defense studies. That's an electric eraser he holds, its value being in the faster production of maps. About 45 expert draftsmen are at work on these defense maps.



IT WOULD NEVER DO, FOR 1940—Wearing 1812 uniforms, American and Canadian soldiers fired an ancient fieldpiece at Fort Niagara, N. Y., marking the 125th anniversary of return of this fort to U. S. after the war of 1812. Fort was held by France, England and U. S., whose flags are at rear. The Canadians were from Fort George, across the Niagara river.

NAMED TO SEC—Sumner T. Pike (above), Maine Republican nominated by F.D.R. to Securities Exchange Commission, was a World war coast artillery captain.



GRADUATES TO A JOB—Future looks bright for Porter Vaughan, University of Richmond (Va.) senior and southpaw who's agreed to sign with the Athletics for $8,000. At other end of handshake is F. W. Boatwright, university president.

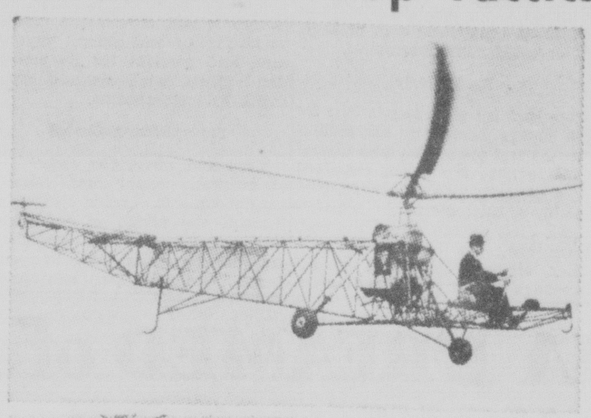
Sikorsky's New Helicopter Designed To Improve on Parachute Troop Tactics



Igor Sikorsky piloting his new helicopter and Charles L. Morris, Connecticut's aviation commissioner, below, presenting Sikorsky with the first U. S. helicopter license.

By Central Press

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., June 17—A helicopter which may be able to replace and improve upon the parachute troop tactics of the German army, in addition to achieving a number of other military purposes, has been flown successfully here by Igor I. Sikorsky, noted airplane designer.

In fact, according to Sikorsky, the helicopter already may have proved its military value. Much mystery has surrounded the surrender of one of the large Belgian forts at Liege to a handful of German airmen with practically no resistance on the part of its defenders, but the designer believes a helicopter was used in the attack in addition to other war appliances controlled by Germany.

Although experiments have been carried on in an effort to built successful helicopters almost since the first flights of airplanes, Sikorsky believes there is no other such machine in the world except the one in Germany.

Differs From Autogyro

Flying without fixed surfaces, it depends for all its lift, stability and control characteristics upon its swiftly rotating main and auxiliary rotors, which allow it to rise and descend in a vertical line without forward motion. In addition, the ship can move forward, backward and sideways.

The outstanding difference between the helicopter and the better-known autogyro is that the former is supported entirely by the motor-driven vanes rotating in a vertical plane, while the autogyro is supported in the same manner as an ordinary airplane. The horizontal vanes on the "gyro" are not motor driven, but are turned by the wind pressure caused by forward motion of the plane and the blast of the propeller.

Sikorsky's experimental ship, powered only with a 75-horsepower Lycoming engine, rose to a maximum height of 50 feet and moved forward several feet, but the designer pointed out that a machine with a higher powered engine and built to carry two passengers would be able to travel at a speed of 125 to 150 miles an hour. Following the flight, Sikorsky, who built his first helicopter in 1910, was presented with helicopter pilot's license No. 1 by Charles L. Morris, Connecticut commissioner of aeronautics.

Has Military Advantage

The designer has great hopes for the value of his ship as a military weapon.

"From the military standpoint," he declared, "there is nothing like the helicopter. It can be used for communications, for fire control and for observations. Most important, it can replace the parachute troops which Germany is using with such great success in this present war. It would require a larger type of this experimental machine so that a number of persons could be carried.

"With this helicopter," Sikorsky explained, " it is possible to drop troops wherever you wish. Should you land the troops at a spot which is undesirable, you just take off and get away. You can come low on the ground at any place at all, make observations and then leave."

Cheaper Than Balloons

In comparison with the captive balloons used by armies for observation, he said the cost of a helicopter is small, largely because no ground equipment is needed and no airport is necessary for operation of the machine.

Being capable of rising straight up without the slightest forward motion, the helicopter can land on a roof just large enough for its landing wheels, and take off again without trouble.

Known as the VS-300 helicopter, the machine was constructed by the Vought-Sikorsky division of the United Aircraft corporation. Sikorsky was assisted in his experimentation by Chief Engineer Michael E. Gluhareff.

The main rotor is 28 feet in diameter and makes 255 revolutions a minute, while each of the auxiliary rotors is six feet, eight inches in diameter and makes 1,700 reolutions a minute.

Carpenter Drowns While Digging Clams

OCEAN CITY, Md., June 17—Edwin B. Cathell, 32, a Bishopville carpenter drowned while digging clams in the Isle of Wight bay west of here.

Dr. S. J. Townsend, acting medical examiner, said the death was accidental and that no inquest was necessary.

Cathell was clamming with two companions, Everett Selby and Lloyd Bunting, also of Bishopville, and stepped from shoal water into the swift channel.

Selby and Bunting said Cathell had a tub tied to his waist with a length of rope and that the tub, weighted with clams, dragged him down in the deep water. Selby said Cathell was a good swimmer and made several attempts to free himself from the tub, but was drawn into deeper water by the swift channel current.

Rats Pick Vitamins Better than Humans

CHICAGO (AP)—Give rats a choice of several diets and they will choose the foods containing the best balanced vitamin content, but give humans the same choice and they will flunk, Dr. Anton J. Carlson of the University of Chicago discovered.

"We do not yet know why the lower animals have retained this sense, while man himself seems completely to have lost it," Dr. Carlson says.

Ghost Stories Are Uncovered At Peterstown

PETERSTOWN, W. Va., June 17 (AP)—Out of the mountains of this isolated county are coming ghost stories—tales of spirits which at one time would spring down to the backs of horses, and of a ghost who always wore a brown suit and a brown derby.

Workers on the federal writers projects uncovered the stories; some were found in early histories, others in old newspapers and still others were classed simply as folklore of the mountaineers.

One of the best known of the tales is that of Patrick Spangler who was riding placidly along late one night on the wooded road between Shues Bluff and Peterstown.

Passing under the limbs of an unusually heavy thicket, he heard a crash of broken branches—and then what Spangler believed to be the horse-riding ghost landed on the horse behind the lone wayfarer.

The story continues as given in the old newspaper accounts:

"The horse failed to keep its composure and, frightened, plunged to its death over a cliff, landing in a gorge at the bottom of Brush creek.

Spangler apparently grabbed a tree limb just before the horse's plunge. The tale goes on: "After Spangler had descended to the ground he made his way over a mile to the home of Thomas Delaney where Spangler related his experience. Delaney secured a lantern and the two returned to the scene of the ghost.

"The ghost had disappeared. The horse was located where it had landed in the gorge. The animal's neck had been broken, evidently as a result of the fall."

A Captain Delaney, father of Thomas Delaney, is credited with the tale of the derby-hatted, brown-suited ghost. He said he had seen the apparition many times, always at the entrance to another thicket. It accompanied him through the woods, he told his neighbors, walking along gravely beside him, and then vanished at the edge of the clearing.

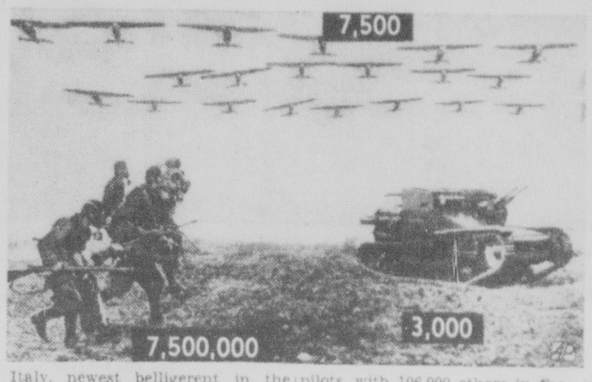
WHAT ITALY'S GOT



Italy, newest belligerent in the European war, has a reported 3,500,000 active men, with 4,000,000 in reserve. The mechanized (tank) division includes about 40,000 men.

Of Italy's planes, 800 are modern bombers, 960 pursuit, 400 reconnaissance, and the rest "obsolete." They are flown by an estimated 8,000 pilots, with 106,000 others in the air service and 102,000 in reserve.

The navy has six capital ships with two more near completion; 22 cruisers, 65 destroyers, 65 torpedo boats, 150 mosquito boats and 118 submarines, possibly the world's largest submarine fleet. About 70,000 men and 35,000 reserves are in this branch.

All Aliens May Be Fingerprinted

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — Rep. Smith (D-Va) said here he would seek quick House approval of Senate changes in the alien control legislation which he sponsored, including a requirement for the fingerprinting of all aliens.

The Senate passed the bill yesterday, after restoring to it several sections struck out when the House passed the measure. These included requirements for the registration and fingerprinting of an estimated 4,000,000 aliens.

During Senate consideration of the measure, Senator Connally (D-Tex) said it contained the "most stringent provision" yet written into law and "timed at Communists and similar organizations."

Intended to bulwark existing federal law for suppression of subversive activities, the bill provides penalties of ten years in prison and a $10,000 fine for those who advocate "overthrow by force" of federal, state or municipal governments and designates as a criminal offense advocacy of insubordination or mutiny in the armed forces of the United States.

So hastily did Ira Ball, baseball pitcher of Summerall, Miss., hurl a ball, that he knocked down a spectator, besides blacking his own eye, fracturing three ribs and breaking his arm.

Has Military Advantage

The designer has great hopes for the value of his ship as a military weapon.

"From the military standpoint," he declared, "there is nothing like the helicopter. It can be used for communications, for fire control and for observations. Most important, it can replace the parachute troops which Germany is using with such great success in this present war. It would require a larger type of this experimental machine so that a number of persons could be carried.

"With this helicopter," Sikorsky explained, " it is possible to drop troops wherever you wish. Should you land the troops at a spot which is undesirable, you just take off and get away. You can come low on the ground at any place at all, make observations and then leave."

Cheaper Than Balloons

In comparison with the captive balloons used by armies for observation, he said the cost of a helicopter is small, largely because no ground equipment is needed and no airport is necessary for operation of the machine.

Being capable of rising straight up without the slightest forward motion, the helicopter can land on a roof just large enough for its landing wheels, and take off again without trouble.

Known as the VS-300 helicopter, the machine was constructed by the Vought-Sikorsky division of the United Aircraft corporation. Sikorsky was assisted in his experimentation by Chief Engineer Michael E. Gluhareff.

The main rotor is 28 feet in diameter and makes 255 revolutions a minute, while each of the auxiliary rotors is six feet, eight inches in diameter and makes 1,700 revolutions a minute.

Carpenter Drowns While Digging Clams

OCEAN CITY, Md., June 17—Edwin B. Cathell, 32, a Bishopville carpenter drowned while digging clams in the Isle of Wight bay west of here.

Dr. S. J. Townsend, acting medical examiner, said the death was accidental and that no inquest was necessary.

Cathell was clamming with two companions, Everett Selby and Lloyd Bunting, also of Bishopville, and stepped from shoal water into the swift channel.

Selby and Bunting said Cathell had a tub tied to his waist with a length of rope and that the tub, weighted with clams, dragged him down in the deep water. Selby said Cathell was a good swimmer and made several attempts to free himself from the tub, but was drawn into deeper water by the swift channel current.

Rats Pick Vitamins Better than Humans

CHICAGO (AP)—Give rats a choice of several diets and they will choose the foods containing the best balanced vitamin content, but give humans the same choice and they will flunk, Dr. Anton J. Carlson of the University of Chicago discovered.

"We do not yet know why the lower animals have retained this sense, while man himself seems completely to have lost it," Dr. Carlson says.

Ghost Stories Are Uncovered At Peterstown

PETERSTOWN, W. Va., June 17 (AP)—Out of the mountains of this isolated county are coming ghost stories—tales of spirits which at one time would spring down to the backs of horses, and of a ghost who always wore a brown suit and a brown derby.

Workers on the federal writers projects uncovered the stories; some were found in early histories, others in old newspapers and still others were classed simply as folklore of the mountaineers.

One of the best known of the tales is that of Patrick Spangler who was riding placidly along late one night on the wooded road between Shues Bluff and Peterstown.

Passing under the limbs of an unusually heavy thicket, he heard a crash of broken branches—and then what Spangler believed to be the horse-riding ghost landed on the horse behind the lone wayfarer.

The story continues as given in the old newspaper accounts:

"The horse failed to keep its composure and, frightened, plunged to its death over a cliff, landing in a gorge at the bottom of Brush creek.

Spangler apparently grabbed a tree limb just before the horse's plunge. The tale goes on: "After Spangler had descended to the ground he made his way over a mile to the home of Thomas Delaney where Spangler related his experience. Delaney secured a lantern and the two returned to the scene of the ghost.

"The ghost had disappeared. The horse was located where it had landed in the gorge. The animal's neck had been broken, evidently as a result of the fall."

A Captain Delaney, father of Thomas Delaney, is credited with the tale of the derby-hatted, brown-suited ghost. He said he had seen the apparition many times, always at the entrance to another thicket. It accompanied him through the woods, he told his neighbors, walking along gravely beside him, and then vanished at the edge of the clearing.

WHAT ITALY'S GOT

Italy, newest belligerent in the European war, has a reported 3,500,000 active men, with 4,000,000 in reserve. The mechanized (tank) division includes about 40,000 men.

Of Italy's planes, 800 are modern bombers, 960 pursuit, 400 reconnaissance, and the rest "obsolete." They are flown by an estimated 8,000 pilots, with 106,000 others in the air service and 102,000 in reserve.

The navy has six capital ships, with two more near completion; 22 cruisers, 65 destroyers, 65 torpedo boats, 150 mosquito boats and 118 submarines, possibly the world's largest submarine fleet. About 70,000 men and 35,000 reserves are in this branch.

All Aliens May Be Fingerprinted

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP) — Rep. Smith (D-Va) said here he would seek quick House approval of Senate changes in the alien control legislation which he sponsored, including a requirement for the fingerprinting of all aliens.

The Senate passed the bill yesterday, after restoring to it several sections struck out when the House passed the measure. These included requirements for the registration and fingerprintnig of an estimated 4,000,000 aliens.

During Senate consideration of the measure, Senator Connally (D-Tex) said it contained the "most stringent provision" yet written into law and "timed at Communists and similar organizations."

Intended to bulwark existing federal law for suppression of subversive activities, the bill provides penalties of ten years in prison and a $10,000 fine for those who advocate "overthrow by force" of federal, state or municipal governments and designates as a criminal offense advocacy of insubordination or mutiny in the armed forces of the United States.

So lustily did Ira Ball, baseball pitcher of Summerall, Miss., hurl a ball, that he knocked down a spectator, besides blacking his own eye, fracturing three ribs and breaking his arm.

Dislocated Disk Of the Vertebre Causes Back Pain

Manipulation Gives Relief In Some Cases, Doctor Says

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A patient writes "I have been told that my sciatica is due to a protruded intervetebral disk. Will you please explain what this means?"

The backbone is composed of a series of superimposed separate bones. Between each one is a cartilaginous disk called the "inter-vertebral disk." Recent studies have indicated that in certain cases low back pain and sciatica may be due to dislocation of this cartilaginous disk. The condition is known as "protruded intervertebral disk."

A considerable difference of opinion has been expressed as to how often it occurs. Probably a very low percentage—not more than two per cent of all cases of low back pain. Such cases of sciatica or low back pain as are caused by this condition are always preceded by injury or accident. Reports say that surgical removal of the disk is followed by relief.

It certainly indicates that whoever made this diagnosis is an alert and up-to-date physician, but it is to be hoped that gossip on this subject will not spread too rapidly among nervous patients. Most cases of low back pain are relieved by manipulations and by rest, warmth, light treatment and diathermy.

What is the best solution to use for the prevention of athlete's foot in shower baths, by the sides of pools, and other such purposes?

A one per cent solution of sodium hypochlorite. Another solution used is calcium hypochlorite in a two per cent solution. This is generally cheaper than sodium hypochlorite but there have been no careful studies on the capacity of calcium hypochlorite to kill ringworm. It is also more irritating to tissues.

Sodium hypochlorite is conveniently purchased in metal chemical carboys in 20 per cent strength. This is diluted twenty to one for placing in footbaths and the solution should be changed every second or third day. The approximate cost per change should be about 10 or 15 cents, depending on the size of the footbath.

A diabetic or a person who is overweight, who uses saccharin regularly asks whether its continued use is accompanied by any harm.

No. This subject has been carefully investigated by a number of workers, and except in extremely large doses, no harmful effect has ever been proved from its use. The average amount of saccharin used is about a half a grain in a cup of coffee, making one and one-half grains a day the average dose. This can be continued for an indefinite period.

There are plenty of diabetic patients who have used saccharin for years and can testify to this fact.

Germans List More Than Million Prisoners

GENEVA, June 17 (AP) — The prisoners' bureau of the International Red Cross was almost swamped here with lists of prisoners coming from both the Allies and the Germans after the fighting for Paris.

Red Cross officials declined to give the total estimate, either of those registered or those still coming in, but informed sources said the Germans alone had reported a total of 1,200,000 prisoners by June 5. (The German high command already has made substantially the same claim.)

These were divided as follows: 500,000 Belgians, 400,000 Dutch, 200,000 French and 100,000 mixed British, Belgian and French as yet unclassified.

Two hundred Swiss volunteers are working in the prisoners' bureau, and 100 more are trying to work through the long official lists from Berlin, Paris and London, and the tens of thousands of letters from individuals, seeking news for their families.

In the first six months the bureau handled 580,000 letters.

Find $60,000 in Kettle Left by Aunt

Council Bluffs, Ia., June 17 (AP)—The Beno brothers—Adolph, Robert and John—didn't expect much from the estate of their aunt, Miss Bertha Leibold who named them principal heirs.

But Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Beno, cleaning up the modest little home in which Miss Liebold had lived, found $60,000 in a dusty metal kettle. About $15,000 was in $25 gold pieces dated from 1860 to 1900, the remainder in currency.

Sen. Harrison Pleads For Strong Defense

WASHINGTON, June 17 (AP)—In a radio address Senator Pat Harrison (D-Miss) asserted here that "we must all tighten our belts" to meet the defense emergency.

"We do not want war. We all despise war. As for myself, I am unalterably opposed to ever again sending the flower of this country's manhood across the seas.

"But we shall be ready to defend that which is ours. If that tragic day should ever come, we shall be prepared."

Child Needs Every Chance, Doctor Says

When Rough and Tumble Play Is Missed Health Is Retarded

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

We read and hear so much about the importance of the child's health that we sometimes grow calloused and indifferent. Let us keep this in mind—when the school child is not strong and healthy, he is likely to miss many days at school and therefore lag in his studies, and he will find it hard to get on happily with other children. You see, he tends not to get into the rough and tumble of the playground.

Lagging in play skills and ability to take his own part in physical combats, he soon is afflicted with many fears. Out of these fears may develop all sorts of behavior problems at home and school, with the child a piteous sufferer.

Of course, when we do the very best possible for the child he may still have physical handicaps. Nevertheless these handicaps, in most instances, could have been prevented or could still be corrected.

Begin Early

We best lay good foundations for the child's health in his earliest months and years. The wise mother aims to have her infant examined by a carefully selected doctor, preferably a baby specialist (pediatrician). Not all can afford the cost. Many can, who think they cannot. They easily could afford to cut elsewhere in the family budget. Anyway, it is better investment in terms of dollars and cents to pay for expert help to keep the child of three months or ten years well than to meet the doctor bills after he is sick—not to say anything about the greater assurance to his health and even his life.

The intelligent community provides free infant welfare stations or "Well-Baby Clinics" for those babies who will not otherwise receive such care. Here, the nurse weighs the baby, the physician examines it and advises the mother on its feeding and general physical care, and provides for its protection against small-pox and diphtheria by immunization.

Supervision Extended

More and more, the same type of medical, dental and nursing supervision is being extended through the period of pre-school life, although the medical clinic and nursing visits grow less frequent. Gradually such service includes advice on the child's behavior guidance.

We are making progress. Year by year babies have a greater chance to keep alive. In 1900, the death rate of infants under one year of age (deaths per 1,000 live births) was about 170. In 1930 it was sixty-five. In 1900 the death rate for children between ten and twenty years of age was slightly less than four per 1,000, in 1930 slightly less than two per 1,000.

Of course, when we do the very best possible for the child he may still have physical handicaps. Nevertheless these handicaps, in most instances, could have been prevented or could still be corrected.

Begin Early

We best lay good foundations for the child's health in his earliest months and years. The wise mother aims to have her infant examined by a carefully selected doctor, preferably a baby specialist (pediatrician). Not all can afford the cost. Many can, who think they cannot. They easily could afford to cut elsewhere in the family budget. Anyway, it is better investment in terms of dollars and cents to pay for expert help to keep the child of three months or ten years well than to meet the doctor bills after he is sick—not to say anything about the greater assurance to his health and even his life.

The intelligent community provides free infant welfare stations or "Well-Baby Clinics" for those babies who will not otherwise receive such care. Here, the nurse weighs the baby, the physician examines it and advises the mother on its feeding and general physical care, and provides for its protection against small-pox and diphtheria by immunization.

Supervision Extended

More and more, the same type of medical, dental and nursing supervision is being extended through the period of pre-school life, although the medical clinic and nursing visits grow less frequent. Gradually such service includes advice on the child's behavior guidance.

We are making progress. Year by year babies have a greater chance to keep alive. In 1900, the death rate of infants under one year of age (deaths per 1,000 live births) was about 170. In 1930 it was sixty-five. In 1900 the death rate for children between ten and twenty years of age was slightly less than four per 1,000, in 1930 slightly less than two per 1,000.

Lowell Yund, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Roy L. Yund, Westville, N. J., and a grandson of Mrs. Conrad Brode, Borden Shaft, was a member of the 1940 class of the Gloucester City high school, N. J.

Due to his unusual background, the young graduate, a son of the former Miss Ruth Brode, was given much publicity in New Jersey newspapers. The Gloucester City News carried a story which is in part as follows:

Lowell Yund was born in Kpolopele, a native town located in the interior of Liberia, Africa, December 6, 1923. At the age of eight months he nearly died when he contracted amoebic dysentery. Shortly afterward his father completed his missionary assignment at the Liberian station and embarked for the United States—crossing the Atlantic Ocean on the now scrapped steamship, Leviathan. The Rev. Mr. Yund learned the Kpele dialect and has taught his son to speak the native language.

High Tribunal Denies Writ to Oscar Wheeler

Communist Candidate for Governor Indicted on Five Counts

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 17. (AP)—Oscar O. Wheeler, Communist candidate for governor in jail at Beckley while awaiting trial on five misdemeanor indictments, was denied today a Supreme court habeas corpus writ of release.

The Raleigh county grand jury indicted the 53-year-old goat farmer on five counts, charging him with deceit and fraud in connection with circulation of a petition to place the Communist party on the November ballot.

Charges were made that the purpose of the petition was misrepresented.

Bond for Wheeler was fixed at $1,000 on each bill, or a total of $5,000. His trial is set for June 26.

Louis Fleischer of New York and Harold W. Houston of Charleston, appearing before the Supreme court, said Wheeler had been unable to obtain real property or surety bond bail but had offered $5,000 in government bonds—refused by Judge Harley M. Kilgore on the ground such security is not acceptable under the law.

"The reason that bail from insurance companies or property owners could not be secured," the petition said, "is due to the fact that Oscar Wheeler is the Communist candidate for governor x x x and that intense local prejudice has been aroused against him. x x x."

The attorneys contended the total of $5,000 bail was excessive for misdemeanor charges, and that in any event the government bonds offered should have been accepted as surety for Wheeler's appearance for trial.

Wheeler was arrested June 11.

The supreme court did not comment upon its refusal of the writ.

Seven Members of Jehovah's Witnesses Are Held in Jail

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., June 17. (AP)—A hearing for seven members of a religious sect (Jehovah's Witnesses) was set today for Tuesday night after six of those arrested declined release on their own recognizance when their leader was required to post bond.

The group, which included three women, was arrested Saturday while offering the society's official publication for sale. Police Chief H. H. Davis said he had warned the week before against sale of the publication.

The warrants issued by Magistrate D. G. Phillips cited a statute which says "it shall be unlawful for any person to have in his possession a device indicating sympathy for ideals hostile to the constitution of the state and United States."

Phillips was directed that W. S. Clayton post bond but offered release of the others without bond pending hearing.

Country Must Be Realistic for the Present Emergency, Johnson Says

FAIRMONT, W. Va., June 17 (AP)—Louis A. Johnson declared tonight the country must be as realistic as the emergency confronting it and that neither recriminations nor lapsing into national hysteria will contribute anything to the needs of the hour.

The assistant secretary of war, speaking at the dedication of Fairmont's new general hospital, said in his prepared address:

"We stand tonight as a people keenly aware of the dangers that confront us, as a people with but a single thought—to keep the legions of aggression and the mailed fist of the conqueror from our shores.

"State lines have vanished overnight; individualism is submerged for the moment in the will of a united people to guard the common welfare and the national security upon which the whole principle of individual rights and progress depend."

Regardless of the factors which find the country ill prepared at this time, Johnson said:

"It contributes nothing to the need of the hour to say: 'I told you so.' It contributes nothing to getting done the job that must be done to indulge ourselves with wishful regrets. It certainly contributes nothing to our future security to go into national hysteria. x x x

"If we are to meet and overcome the problems which are before us we must be as realistic as the emergency itself and unswerving in our faith in America."

National defense, Johnson asserted, is neither as bad as some have pictured it nor as good as it should be.

"I wish I could report that our needs will be met within this year, but in good conscience I cannot do so. At least another year must elapse after this one ends before we can truthfully say that our national defense is adequate, and we will be ready then only if we build intensely, work intensely, accumulate intensely."

On the brighter side, he added, "let it be said that we are not the push-over that recent hysteria has led many of our people to believe."

Grantsville Community Is Ready For Annual Strawberry Season

GRANTSVILLE, June 17—The strawberry season for growers in this community, which was scheduled to begin today, was delayed somewhat by showers which prevailed throughout the day. While a few berries were picked last week most of the growers had planned to make their first picking this morning. The rain interferred with these plans however and most of them decided to wait for more favorable weather.

According to reports the prospects for a good crop this year are splendid. Under favorable conditions pickings are made about three times a week, usually Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The season lasts from three to four weeks and many youngsters and not a few adults of the community are employed as pickers.

Berries grown in this community are large and lucious, of excellent quality and flavor and always seem to find a ready market.

Escape Injury

Two young men from Friendsville narrowly escaped serious injury when the car in which they were riding crashed into the rear of a truck on a hill a few miles east of here about three o'clock this morning. John Suter, owner of the machine, and a companion were the only occupants. They were brought to the office of a local physician for treatment where it was found they had sustained minor cuts and bruises and were suffering from shock, but were not otherwise hurt. They were later able to return to their home.

It is said the truck was carrying no tail light and the driver of the car failed to see it in time to avoid the accident. Damage to the Suter machine was estimated at approximately $75.

Vacation Bible School

Approximately thirty-seven youngsters were on hand when the annual daily Vacation Bible school opened this morning and more are expected to enroll tomorrow. The classes are being held this year in the Sunday school rooms of the Lutheran church, and will meet

High Tribunal Denies Writ to Oscar Wheeler

Communist Candidate for Governor Indicted on Five Counts

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 17 (AP)—Oscar O. Wheeler, Communist candidate for governor in jail at Beckley while awaiting trial on five misdemeanor indictments, was denied today a Supreme court habeas corpus writ of release.

The Raleigh county grand jury indicted the 53-year-old goat farmer on five counts, charging him with deceit and fraud in connection with circulation of a petition to place the Communist party on the November ballot.

Charges were made that the purpose of the petition was misrepresented.

Bond for Wheeler was fixed at $1,000 on each bill, or a total of $5,000. His trial is set for June 26.

Louis Fleischer of New York and Harold W. Houston of Charleston, appearing before the Supreme court, said Wheeler had been unable to obtain real property or surety bond bail but had offered $5,000 in government bonds—refused by Judge Harley M. Kilgore on the ground such security is not acceptable under the law.

"The reason that bail from insurance companies or property owners could not be secured," the petition said, "is due to the fact that Oscar Wheeler is the Communist candidate for governor x x x and that intense local prejudice has been aroused against him. x x x."

The attorneys contended the total of $5,000 bail was excessive for misdemeanor charges, and that in any event the government bonds offered should have been accepted as surety for Wheeler's appearance for trial.

Wheeler was arrested June 11.

The supreme court did not comment upon its refusal of the writ.

Seven Members of Jehovah's Witnesses Are Held in Jail

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., June 17. (AP)—A hearing for seven members of a religious sect (Jehovah's Witnesses) was set today for Tuesday night after six of those arrested declined release on their own recognizance when their leader was required to post bond.

The group, which included three women, was arrested Saturday while offering the society's official publication for sale. Police Chief H. H. Davis said he had warned the week before against sale of the publication.

The warrants issued by Magistrate D. G. Phillips cited a statute which says "it shall be unlawful for any person to have in his possession a device indicating sympathy for ideals hostile to the constitution of the state and United States."

Phillips was directed that W. S. Clayton post bond but offered release of the others without bond pending hearing.

Grantsville Community Is Ready For Annual Strawberry Season

GRANTSVILLE, June 17—The strawberry season for growers in this community, which was scheduled to begin today, was delayed somewhat by showers which prevailed throughout the day. While a few berries were picked last week most of the growers had planned to make their first picking this morning. The rain interferred with these plans however and most of them decided to wait for more favorable weather.

According to reports the prospects for a good crop this year are splendid. Under favorabl conditions pickings are made about three times a week, usually Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The season lasts from three to four weeks and many youngsters and not a few adults of the community are employed as pickers.

Berries grown in this community are large and lucious, of excellent quality and flavor and always seem to find a ready market.

Acid Contents Of Pennsylvania Streams Is Sought

Group of Sportsmen from Pittsburgh Visit Meyersdale and Vicinity

MEYERSDALE, Pa., June 17—A party of ten members of the Yough Valley Anglers Club from near Pittsburgh, representing 500 members, were in Meyersdale and vicinity the past several days securing specimens of water from the Casselman river and several of its tributaries with the view of ascertaining the acid content of the water in a proposed movement to clean the Youghiogheny river and its tributaries. The party also made motion pictures in technicolor of the sulphur red streams that carry mine drainage into the Casselman river.

Considerable time and money was spent on a mine sealing project in the Meyersdale coal region, but this did not seem to improve matters to any great extent. Members of the visiting committee suggested that the "planking" system of purifying the streams be tried, by which means the mine drainage is through long troughs filled with sand and gravel, thus filtering the water before it reaches the streams.

J. P. Judy Will Be Principal At Keyser

A. G. Springer Transferred from Keyser High to Elk Garden

KEYSER, W. Va., June 17 — County Superintendent of Schools Paul C. Rouzer today announced a reorganization of Mineral county school system.

The Junior and Senior high schools here — including grades seven to twelve — will be combined, Rouzer said. Heretofore the Junior high school has been made up of grades seven, eight and nine, and the Senior high school has included the sophomore, junior and senior classes. Rouzer said that in the opinion of the board of education the change makes for efficiency and economy.

J. P. Judy, who has been Junior high school principal, will occupy the post of principal of the combined higher public school class group. A. G. Springer, principal of the high school here for the past fifteen years, will be principal and vocational agriculture instructor at the Elk Garden high school. Have L. Idleman, Elk Garden principal, has been appointed assistant county superintendent, succeeding J. C. Sanders, who has been named at Keyser elementary school principal and supervisor of county WPA and NYA school projects.

Rouzer said the educational administrators in this county were "following a pattern set up in some of the larger cities." Merging the schools brings about an improvement impossible to achieve "with a gap between the ninth and tenth grades," he stated.

Acid Contents Of Pennsylvania Streams Is Sought

Group of Sportsmen from Pittsburgh Visit Meyersdale and Vicinity

MEYERSDALE, Pa., June 17—A party of ten members of the Yough Valley Anglers Club from near Pittsburgh, representing 500 members, were in Meyersdale and vicinity the past several days securing specimens of water from the Casselman river and several of its tributaries with the view of ascertaining the acid content of the water in a proposed movement to clean the Youghiogheny river and its tributaries. The party also made motion pictures in technicolor of the sulphur red streams that carry mine drainage into the Casselman river.

Considerable time and money was spent on a mine sealing project in the Meyersdale coal region, but this did not seem to improve matters to any great extent. Members of the visiting committee suggested that the "planking" system of purifying the streams be tried, by which means the mine drainage is through long troughs filled with sand and gravel, thus filtering the water before it reaches the streams.

J. P. Judy Will Be Principal At Keyser

A. G. Springer Transferred from Keyser High to Elk Garden

KEYSER, W. Va., June 17 — County Superintendent of Schools Paul C. Rouzer today announced a reorganization of Mineral county school system.

The Junior and Senior high schools here — including grades seven to twelve — will be combined, Rouzer said. Heretofore the Junior high school has been made up of grades seven, eight and nine, and the Senior high school has included the sophomore, junior and senior classes. Rouzer said that in the opinion of the board of education the change makes for efficiency and economy.

J. P. Judy, who has been Junior high school principal, will occupy the post of principal of the combined higher public school class group. A. G. Springer, principal of the high school here for the past fifteen years, will be principal and vocational agriculture instructor at the Elk Garden high school. Haven L. Idleman, Elk Garden principal, has been appointed assistant county superintendent, succeeding J. C. Sanders, who has been named at Keyser elementary school principal and supervisor of county WPA and NYA school projects.

Rouzer said the educational administrators in this county were "following a pattern set up in some of the larger cities." Merging the schools brings about an improvement impossible to achieve "with a gap between the ninth and tenth grades," he stated.

Project Approved

Word was received here today of presidential approval of a Works Progress Administration grant of $46,426 for municipal improvements, matching the city's $16,329 sponsor's share.

Teacher To Retire After Long Service

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., June 17 (AP) — After forty-seven years as a first grade teacher, instructing more than 2,000 students, Mrs. Clara Conrad regarded it as time to retire.

She never taught in any other grade, and didn't think she would like the idea.

"When they first start to school," she said, "they are so eager and honest that you can really work with them and see the results from day to day."

Mrs. Conrad, a native of Pocahontas county, never missed a day from school because of illness until just before Christmas last year. She went to New York state to live with her daughter.

Huntington Girl Has Many Dolls

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 17 (AP) — When 13-year-old Betty Graves Mann plays with dolls she has thirty-six foreign mannequins and three "Americans" to choose from.

The natives are two Sioux Indian dolls, seventy-five years old, and one made entirely from cornhusks which Betty says is a centenarian.

It seems that Betty's friends and relatives always remember her when they go abroad.

Her grandmother brought back from England a tiny king, queen and princess (dolls of course) dressed in robes trimmed in real ermine, and from Holland a tricky doll whose arms fly up when its feet are pressed.

Others are Swiss, Italian, French (two bought from a convent and dressed as nuns), Russian — and so across Europe.

Betty now is collecting Mexican and Indian dolls, and has one made from woven banana leaves.

Man and Wife Die After Eating Garbage

Memphis, Tenn., June 17 (AP)—An unemployed painter and his wife, who died in agony within five minutes of each other here, told Detective Don Owens they had been getting their food from a city garbage dump, the officer said today.

The victims were listed as Robert Hadwick and his wife, Lettie.

"The tentative diagnosis is that they died of food poisoning," said Owens.

The detective said Hardwick had been promised a job after being out of work for some time.

Theaters Today

Morgan Has Troubles Galore in Picture

"The Ghost Comes Home" has Frank Morgan, minus his stutter but plus plenty of troubles, dodging from tribulation to complication in hilarious strides at the Maryland theater, where Morgan's latest appearance as a laughmaker is now showing.

The story deals with a timid small town storekeeper who suddenly finds himself appointed to spend a million on his home town. Between night clubs and sirens, crooked bankers and his daughter's love affairs, he's the busiest dodger of trouble on record. Reported shipwrecked, he returns supposedly dead to find his family spending his insurance money. Finally, by exposing the crooked banker, he becomes the man of the hour.

Players include Billie Burke as the domineering wife, Ann Rutherford as the pretty daughter, John Shelton, Reginald Owen, Donald Meek, Nat Pendleton and Frank Albertson.

Double Feature Bill Is Booked by the Embassy

Two features are scheduled to open a run tomorrow at the Embassy theater.

One is a return showing of "South of the Border," with Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette.

The other will be "Nick Carter, Master Detective," with Walter Pidgeon and Rita Johnson.

The first chapter of a new serial, "Drums of Fu Manchu," starring Henry Brandon, William Royle and Gloria Franklin, will also be shown.

The offering today comprises the comedy, "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," featuring W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen and Charley McCarthy; and "Babies for Sale," featuring Rochelle Hudson and Glenn Ford.

Double Feature Bill Is Offered at Garden

W. C. Fields and George Moran were doing a scene for Universal's "My Little Chickadee," now at the Garden theater, in which Fields had to do all the talking. Moran, in the role of an Indian, only uttered a solitary "ugh." At the conclusion of the scene Fields gave Moran a shove and cracked: "Get away from here, you're stealing the scene." Mae West and Fields are starred in this film.

Before he went to work in motion pictures in 1922, John Miljan worked before the footlights for fourteen years, appearing in every branch of stage work — road, stock and repertoire. Miljan is seen as the Assistant D. A. in "Women Without Names," Paramount drama which is also at the Garden, featuring Ellen Drew, Robert Paige and Judith Barrett. Miljan has appeared in such productions as "Mississippi," "Sutter's Gold" and "The Plainsman."

War Picture Carries No Battle Scenes

The present version of "Four Sons," Twentieth Century-Fox picture at the Strand, has been modernized and brought up to date. It opens in pre-Munich Czecho-Slovakia where Eugenie Leontovich and her four grown boys are a happy, prosperous and contended family.

Then Robert Lowery, an artist goes to America. Internal dissension threatens to tear the family apart when Alan Curtis joins an undercover Nazi organization and becomes a Fifth Columnist. Don Ameche, his brother, is a stanch Czech patriot. With brother against brother comes the Munich betrayal and the occupation of the country by the Germans.

In the disorder which follows Ameche kills his brother and he himself is liquidated by the stormtroopers. Then a year later comes the war with Poland and the impressment of Fritz, the youngest brother, who is killed on the battlefield. With her family gone, her homeland in ruins, the mother goes on to America with Mary Beth Hughes, Curtis's widow, and their infant son.

Although the public mind is not presently receptive to war pictures "Four Sons" said to be an exception, as while devoid of battle scenes, it tells a tragic, pathetic story without hokum or theatricalism.

Teacher To Retire After Long Service

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., June 17 (AP) — After forty-seven years as a first grade teacher, instructing more than 2,000 students, Mrs. Clara Conrad regarded it as time to retire.

She never taught in any other grade, and didn't think she would like the idea.

"When they first start to school," she said, "they are so eager and honest that you can really work with them and see the results from day to day."

Mrs. Conrad, a native of Pocahontas county, never missed a day from school because of illness until just before Christmas last year. She went to New York state to live with her daughter.

Huntington Girl Has Many Dolls

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 17 (AP) — When 13-year-old Betty Graves Mann plays with dolls she has thirty-six foreign mannequins and three "Americans" to choose from.

The natives are two Sioux Indian dolls, seventy-five years old, and one made entirely from cornhusks which Betty says is a centenarian.

It seems that Betty's friends and relatives always remember her when they go abroad.

Her grandmother brought back from England a tiny king, queen and princess (dolls of course) dressed in robes trimmed in real ermine, and from Holland a tricky doll whose arms fly up when its feet are pressed.

Others are Swiss, Italian, French (two bought from a convent and dressed as nuns), Russian — and so across Europe.

Betty now is collecting Mexican and Indian dolls, and has one made from woven banana leaves.

Man and Wife Die After Eating Garbage

Memphis, Tenn., June 17 (AP)—An unemployed painter and his wife, who died in agony within five minutes of each other here, told Detective Don Owens they had been getting their food from a city garbage dump, the officer said today.

The victims were listed as Robert Hadwick and his wife, Lettie.

"The tentative diagnosis is that they died of food poisoning," said Owens.

The detective said Hardwick had been promised a job after being out of work for some time.

Theaters Today

Morgan Has Troubles Galore in Picture

"The Ghost Comes Home" has Frank Morgan, minus his stutter but plus plenty of troubles, dodging from tribulation to complication in hilarious strides at the Maryland theater, where Morgan's latest appearance as a laughmaker is now showing.

The story deals with a timid small town storekeeper who suddenly finds himself appointed to spend a million on his home town. Between night clubs and sirens, crooked bankers and his daughter's love affairs, he's the busiest dodger of trouble on record. Reported shipwrecked, he returns supposedly dead to find his family spending his insurance money. Finally, by exposing the crooked banker, he becomes the man of the hour.

Players include Billie Burke as the domineering wife, Ann Rutherford as the pretty daughter, John Shelton, Reginald Owen, Donald Meek, Nat Pendleton and Frank Albertson.

Double Feature Bill Is Booked by the Embassy

Two features are scheduled to open a run tomorrow at the Embassy theater.

One is a return showing of "South of the Border," with Gene Autry and Smiley Burnette.

The other will be "Nick Carter, Master Detective," with Walter Pidgeon and Rita Johnson.

The first chapter of a new serial, 'Drums of Fu Manchu," starring Henry Brandon, William Royle and Gloria Franklin, will also be shown.

The offering today comprises the comedy, "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," featuring W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen and Charley McCarthy; and "Babies for Sale," featuring Rochelle Hudson and Glenn Ford.

Double Feature Bill Is Offered at Garden

W. C. Fields and George Moran were doing a scene for Universal's "My Little Chickadee," now at the Garden theater, in which Fields had to do all the talking. Moran, in the role of an Indian, only uttered a solitary "ugh." At the conclusion of the scene Fields gave Moran a shove and cracked: "Get away from here, you're stealing the scene." Mae West and Fields are starred in this film.

Before he went to work in motion pictures in 1922, John Miljan worked before the footlights for fourteen years, appearing in every branch of stage work — road, stock and repertoire. Miljan is seen as the Assistant D. A. in "Women Without Names," Paramount drama which is also at the Garden, featuring Ellen Drew, Robert Paige and Judith Barrett. Miljan has appeared in such productions as "Mississippi," "Sutter's Gold" and "The Plainsman."

War Picture Carries No Battle Scenes

The present version of "Four Sons," Twentieth Century-Fox picture at the Strand, has been modernized and brought up to date. It opens in pre-Munich Czecho-Slovakia where Eugenie Leontovich and her four grown boys are a happy, prosperous and contended family.

Then Robert Lowery, an artist goes to America. Internal dissension threatens to tear the family apart when Alan Curtis joins an undercover Nazi organization and becomes a Fifth Columnist. Don Ameche, his brother, is a stanch Czech patriot. With brother against brother comes the Munich betrayal and the occupation of the country by the Germans.

In the disorder which follows Ameche kills his brother and he himself is liquidated by the storm-troopers. Then a year later comes the war with Poland and the impressment of Fritz, the youngest brother, who is killed on the battlefield. With her family gone, her homeland in ruins, the mother goes on to America with Mary Beth Hughes Curtis's widow, and their infant son.

Although the public mind is not presently receptive to war pictures "Four Sons" said to be an exception, as while devoid of battle scenes, it tells a tragic, pathetic story without hokum or theatricalism.

Cincinnati Reds Take over Lead in National

Reds Beat Phils 6 to 2 as Moore Plays Hero Role

Replaces Vander Meer in Second and Stops Phil Rally

Joost's Three Run Homer In Third Decides Issue

PHILADELPHIA, June 17, (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds jumped back into first place in the National League today by beating the Phillies 6 to 2 while Brooklyn bowed to St. Louis 3 to 1.

The Dodgers and Reds were virtually tied in games standing before today's play but Brooklyn had a lead in percentage because they have played fewer games.

First rate pitching by Lloyd Moore and a home run by Eddie Joost with two on in the second inning enabled the Reds to hand the Phils their sixth straight defeat.

Moore replaced Johnny Vander Meer on the mound in the second after the first two men up walked, and allowed only two hits in the full eight innings he pitched. It was his second victory of the season—both against the Phils.

Walter Beck went all the way for the Phils. The two Cincinnati pitchers gave up eight bases on balls, six of them in the first three innings, but the Phils got only three hits.

Morrie Arnovich made one of his two hits productive of a Cincinnati run in the first and Joost's homer accounted for three more in the second. The other runs came in the eighth and ninth.

Kovacs Gives Up His Clowning and Improves Net Play

Lanky California Lad Forgets About Being Second Baer

BERKELEY, Calif., June 17.—A lanky tennis player who suggests Big Bill Tilden in appearance and suggests him even more in his tactics, is after the big prize of American tennis—the national amateur championship to be decided at Forest Hills.

The name is Frank Kovacs and it's fairly familiar on the Eastern courts already. But its bearer is a good deal more serious in his thinking and capable in his playing than the teenage youngster who has been clowning about the courts in previous seasons.

Kovacs apparently has given up the idea of becoming a Max Baer of the tennis courts. His clowning has given him some bad setbacks.

Professionals gathered here for the recent State championships—which Kovacs won without greatly extending himself—were virtually unanimous in saying that he'd be a worthy opponent for Bobby Riggs.

Riggs No Slouch

George Hudson, who has been coaching Kovacs since the lad was 13, won't predict a victory for his protege. That's no slap at Kovacs. Hudson merely believes that the bulk of tennis fans gravely underrate Riggs' game.

"Kovacs has one of the toughest serves I've ever been up against in thirty-four years of tennis," says Hudson.

"All his shots are sound and if he's in top condition I believe he has a chance to bring home the championship.

Strategist A La Tilden

His mind functions more like Bill Tilden's than any player I've seen. Tilden figures a man's strength and weakness in the first few games and Frankie does much the same thing. He's a boy who makes quick decisions."

The California youngster is 20 years old, stands 6 feet 3 inches and weighs about 175 pounds. He was troubled last year by bursitis, or tennis elbow, but appears to have fully recovered.

Kovacs expects some defeats in the string of tournaments he'll play before the Forest Hills event, but is eager and confident regarding the "big chance."

"I've played most of the ranking players in the country, he says, "and I'll say this much—I'm not afraid of them."

Washington Crew Favored To Win

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 17 (AP)—The University of Washington varsity crew maintained the Hudson river status quo tonight by continuing as betting choice on the eve of the forty-third regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association.

The Huskies or the University of California, have dominated the betting in this four-mile classic on an average of four times out of five through the last fifteen years. Rarely have they left their supporters down.

When Washington ties up to its stake boat some time around 4 p. m. (EST) tomorrow afternoon, its sophomore-stroked boatload is expected to be the 7-5 favorite. Lined up next to the Huskies in the outside, or far eastern lane, will be California, record-breaking winner a year ago and this time joint second choice with Cornell at 2 to 1.

Columbia will be 4 to 1, Syracuse 5 to 1, Navy, last winner for the east in 1938, 8 to 1, and Wisconsin and Princeton fellow underdogs at 20 to 1.

W.Va. Net Tourney Results

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 17 (AP)—Charley Schoew of Huntington and Paul Lingo of Charleston, winning first and second round matches, advanced to the semi-finals in the junior division of the junior and boys' tennis tournament today as favorites.

In the girls junior division of the state event, Jean Wetherall, Huntington, advanced to the semi-finals by defeating Nellie Brooks of Charleston 6-0, 6-1.

Patty Radford of Huntington also went up, on a bye.

Richard Garrett of Morgantown emerged as a strong contender for the title in the boys' tournament by trouncing Newton Thomas, Charleston, 6-0, 6-4 in the second round after a first round bye.

Card-Dodger Deal Upsets Pre-Season Dope in National

But Shake-Up of St. Louis May Bring Harmony and New Drive

By GRANTLAND RICE

Eight weeks of campaigning in the National League have riddled the pre-season dope, based on what the teams had done last year, plus the showing they made at their training camps. In early April this looked like a two-club race—a toss-up between the Reds and the Cardinals, with the Reds fighting back from last October's debacle and the Cardinals renewing the surge that almost carried them past the Reds to the pennant in the closing weeks of the 1939 struggle.

Now, as the teams move past mid-June, it's a three-cornered tussle—and it looks as though it will be all the way to the finish. The Cardinals are nowhere and have but scant hope of getting anywhere this year—but the Dodgers and the Giants have closed in on the Reds.

The Dodgers are no surprise—or, at any rate, not a complete surprise. They finished third last year and the dope was that they would finish third or thereabouts again this year but the pennant seemed quite beyond them.

The Giants are startling. They sagged through 1939 and seemed destined to sag even worse this year. Only a few hardy souls, suspected of being motivated more by sentiment than by cold reasoning, picked them to finish in the first division.

Old Heroes Return

There were too many uncertain spots on the team—too many places in which it might crack at the first application of pressure. Two of the old reliables, Carl Hubbell and Joe Moore, semed to be through. Mel Ott didn't look too good. And with Hubbell and Moore gone and Ott going, and other posts held by doubtful competitors, it looked pretty bad for the Giants.

But Hubbell, Moore and Ott came rushing back. Harry Danning has exceeded th eexpectations of even those who were saying he was the best catcher in the league. Babe Young has held up strongly at first base, Burgess Whitehead has recaptured his old form—and the Giants are right up there, fighting for the lead and with better than an outside chance of going all the way through.

The Reds, battling steadily to hold the title they won a year ago, have been in and out of first place—and never very far out of it. Bucky Walters, Paul Derringer and Gene Thompson are winning pitchers again. Bill Werber continues to give the Red infield the balance and tightness it lacked before he went to Cincinnati. Mike McCormick hasn't hit very well but he has strengthened the outfield defensively. Winning the pennant last year and then blowing the World Series to the Yankees took nothing away from the team's spirit.

The Medwick Deal

The Dodgers already strong, took on added strength with the acquisition of Joe Medwick and Curt Davis. When the final answer is in on the season's play, it may be seen that the deal for Medwick and Davis nailed the pennant to the flag pole at Ebbets Field.

I recall meeting Leo Durocher on an off day last year and hearing him say, "This is such a screwy race that if I had a hitter who could drive in runs for me every day—just one hitter that I could count on day in and day out, mind you—I might win. If you think I am kidding, think back over the games I have lost just because I got a pop-up instead of an extra-base hit in a pinch. The Reds should win. They're out there and I don't know of anybody who can head them off. But give me the kind of hitter I have in mind and I might do it."

He Has Him Now

Leo has that kind of hitter now. Ducky Medwick fits the description perfectly. Medwick had a bad time of it these last three years in St. Louis. He plainly was disgruntled there, wanted to get to Brooklyn and couldn't generate his old steam at the plate, in the field or on the base paths.

The switch to Brooklyn should make him once more the solid man he was from 1935 through 1937, when he hit .353, .351 and .374. That—not the growling, dissatisfied athlete of the last three years—was the real Medwick. And don't forget to add to those batting averages a great performance in the field every day.

With Medwick to supply the daily smash and Davis to step in and help out with the pitching, the Dodgers now carry a terrific pennant threat.

What of the Cardinals?

Incidentally, it will be interesting to see what effect, if any, the passing of Medwick from St. Louis will have on the fortunes of the Cardinals.

One of the last of the Gas House Gang—gone, now, with Frank Frisch, the Deans, Ripper Collins and the rest—Medwick had lost his old popularity with his team mates and the fans. He contributed nothing to the Cardinals' drive last year until it was too late and nothing at all to their efforts to stay in the first division this year. His passing completed a shake-up begun with the release of Manager Ray Blades.

It looks, from here, as though the shake-up was too long delayed. But baseball is a strange and uncertain game and it may be that a new manager, plus the restoration of harmony in the ranks, will revive the Cardinals. Still, right now I would say that they haven't much chance to crash the three-way struggle among the Dodgers, the Reds and the Giants.—Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.

Notre Dame Returns To Irish Footballers

NOTRE DAME, Ind., June 17—There'll be plenty of Fighting Irish at the end positions on the Notre Dame fotball team next fall.

Four young men named O'Brien are out for the jobs.

And just to add to the picture a pair of Kellys are candidates for the same positions.

Challedon's Form Pleases Schaefer

DELAWARE PARK, June 17.—The only sounds here today was the drone of the tractors as they worked the track into condition for the resumption of the sport tomorrow. It is the last of two dark Mondays of the 30-day meeting which reached the halfway mark on Saturday.

With horses munching hay in deeply bedded stalls, it is an opportune time to rediscover Maryland's "lost horse."

Only eight months ago Challedon was the name on the tip of every horse-follower's tongue, for he was proclaimed the outstanding thoroughbred of 1939.

Schaefer Pleased With Recent Form

However, it would appear that followers of the sport of kings are very fickle. When Challedon failed to return to the wars last spring they seemed to forget about the bay colt which tied Kayak II in a knot in the Pimlico Special.

Today, Challedon is a fit horse and almost ready to return to action and again thrill racegoers with his sparkling stretch runs.

Trainer Louis Schaefer, former rider and only horseman ever to handle Challedon, came to Delaware Oaks and said, "Challedon is coming back to the races just as well as we had hoped he would."

When Schaefer said "we," he referred to himself and William L. Brann, owner of Challedon. Brann bred and raised the son of Challenger II and Laura Gal at his Glade Valley farm near Walkersville, Md.

Before coming here to race Yarnith, Schaefer gave Challedon a mile - and - an - eighth workout over the Belmont Park training track and the 4-year-old took a minute and 57 seconds to cover the distance. This is not sensational time, but it was enough to prompt the clockers to send word to home offices that the veteran will soon be back in the battle.

Seen Certain Starter At Suffolk

Challedon has been nominated for the $50,000-added Massachusets Handicap on July 17 at Suffolk Downs and for the Hollywood Gold Cup, which carries the same value as the New England test, only ten days later.

It will, of course, be virtually impossible for him to start in both stakes, and Schaefer probably would not ask him to do so. It is almost a sure thing that Challedon will run in New England.

The Massachusetts Handicap, incidentally, marked his first start against older horses as a 3-year-old last season. He was fourth behind Fighting Fox, Pompoon and Burning Star.

Barring unforseen mishaps there is little doubt but that Challedon will be knocking them dead again when the sport returns to Maryland's major tracks in the fall.

Betting Odds On Title Bout Shaved

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP)—Some of our boxing minds looked into the crystal ball over their ham and eggs today and predicted, in apparent seriousness, that Arturo Godoy would take the heavyweight championship away from Joe Louis in Yankee Stadium Thursday night.

Immediately, for no better reason, the betting odds were shaved somewhat by Broadway bookmakers to 1 to 5, which is plenty short.

Even a set of hungry bloodhounds couldn't ferret out the reason. Admittedly Godoy is as strong as he was when he dropped a split decision to Louis last February, and he's trained so fine he will do no more boxing.

But Louis, when last heard from, was still the same dusky dynamiter, and there's nothing in the deck which would figure to give Godoy more than an outside chance.

This observer, while rating Godoy as better than a million-to-one shot, can't help climbing on the champ's bandwagon for this ride, picking Louis to put the South American crouch and all, to sleep in seven rounds or less. However, the longer the fight goes after that, the rosier will be Arturo's chances of grabbing the brass ring.

Promoter Mike Jacobs said the advance sale had nearly reached $50,000 and predicted the fight was a cinch to go over the $150,000 mark.

Boston Bees Beat Bucs in Both Ends Of Double-Header

Boost Selves from Last To Sixth Place in Standings

BOSTON, June 17, (AP)—The combination of effective pitching and timely hitting boosted the Boston Bees from last to sixth place in the National League standing today when they swept their doubleheader from the Pirates, 5-3, and 5-1, before a skimpy crowd of 5,224.

While posting his fifth win in the opener, Sailor Bill Posedel fanned eleven of the Pirates and limited them to six hits as his teammates slugged their old friend Deacon Danny MacFayden and two relief pitchers for 13 safeties.

Al Piechota settled down in the pinches and, despite his nine passes, the Pirates were held to one run, a homer by Bob Elliott in the first inning. Vince DiMaggio got a four-bagger off Posedel in the opener.

Hoblitzell-Blanton Win W. Va. Tourney

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 17 (AP)—Jack Hoblitzell and Jules Blanton, both of Parkersburg, captured the pro-amateur event played here today as a prelude to the State Open Golf Championship tomorrow.

The Parkersburg pair defeated Clem Weichman and Bob Parker, both of Logan, on the 19th hole.

The four were tied at 69's—three under par for the Guyan Club course—at the end of the regular route. Then Blanton dumped a 25-foot approach shot into the cup to end the battle with a birdie three. It was the first time in the history of the pro-amateur that a play-off has been necessary.

In reality the playoff was uncalled for because the tournament committee previously had disqualified Weichman and Barker for failure to carry scoring cards. Both said they believed their caddies were keeping their scores.

Giles Thinks Arnovich Will Give Reds Punch

CINCINNATI, June 17, (AP)—Acquisition of Outfielder Morrie Arnovich from the Phils in exchange for Johnny Rizzo will strengthen the Reds both in batting and fielding, General Manager Warren Giles asserted yesterday.

"Arnovich had a good batting record last year and ended the season with a .324 average," he said. "I know he hasn't been doing so good this season, but we feel that he is due to do better and the change might be just what he needs."

The Cincinnati oficials said one purpose of the trade was to improve the Reds' weak left-field position, observing: "Arnovich has played left-field all his life."

THE CASE FOR GODOY

The mood that grips Joe Louis on Thursday night will be, I still think, the main factor in his fight with Arturo Godoy. A savage, vengeful Louis, still hearing the boos of the crowd that rolled up at him when he failed to knock Godoy out last winter, might make short work of the Chilean. An overconfident or lackadaisical Louis, bewildered again by the curious style of his opponent, could blow the title — and don't think he couldn't.

Meanwhile, let's look at Godoy for a moment. On his showing in February, regardless of the manner in which he contrived to stay fifteen rounds with the champion, he rates serious consideration. It wasn't a great fight that he made or even an exciting one but it was well planned and, though you may not have liked it, cleverly executed.

Again Godoy has been carefully drilled by the cagey Al Weill in a way to confound the champion. This time the object, naturally, is not for Godoy to stay fifteen rounds but to win the title. The details of it have been well guarded. But I know this: Godoy has worked hard at it and he is in shape to go fifteen rounds — or twenty-five or fifty — provided, of course, Louis doesn't tag him with some of those pulverizing pokes to the head that flattened Galento, Pastor, Schmeling, Braddock, Baer and Carnera.

A Real Throwback

In his way of training, Godoy is a throwback to the old school. He has to be, because there is nothing fancy about him. He is big and rugged and not too fast and he can't hit. His main points are his stamina and durability. He must be fit to take a pounding, or, seeking to avoid one as he did in his first engagement with Louis, bob, weave, circle, back-track, move in, move out again — and this takes wind and legs. If you don't think so, try it sometime off by yourself, with no one in there to throw punches at you or make you tense with apprehension.

To get in shape — the condition that he has to have in this campaign of his for the heavyweight title, Godoy goes through a routine that horrifies some of his contemporaries, who have streamlined their training, with the emphasis on speed and not stamina. He does eight or ten miles early every morning over the rolling hills that encircle his camp at Carmel. Not content with that, he goes for hikes after every meal. In the afternoons he has a strenuous workout in the ring—boxing, punching the bag, skipping the rope, doing his calisthentics.

He Likes To Work

He has been at Carmel for eight weeks and has had but few off days. A fellow who doesn't dissipate or get out of condition between fights, he means to be in better condition this time than he ever was in his life.

It isn't easy for him. He is twenty-seven years old and has been fighting for eight years. But nothing he ever has had came to him the easy way, and he would be perfectly willing to work twice as hard as he does if he thought it would mean the title to him. As a matter of fact, he would, anyway, if it wasn't for Weill and his trainer, Whitey Bimstein, who have to slow him down and call him off every day.

An added asset that he will take into the ring with him against Louis is the incentive to win and thus reap the profits that Louis has been reaping for three years. In the literal sense, Arturo is neither cold nor hungry — cold and hungry fighters, they say, are best because they are desperate. But he wants the things that Louis has and that, so far, he has not.

I don't know yet what kind of fight it will be and can only hope —along with everybody else—that it will be a better fight than the one in the Garden last February.

I know how it could be a great fight, although it would not last long and almost certainly would end with Godoy on the floor or tottering, helpless, in the arms of the referee.

That would be for Godoy to abandon the guile that bewildered Louis last winter and fight in his old-stand-up, plunging, headlong style. We're not likely to see anything like that because he can't match the power that lies in Louis's punches — but it would be a thrill to see Godoy fighting Louis as he fought Tony Galento and all his other goes until he encountered the champion.

Those Galento Fights

His two fights with Galento, one here and the other in Chicago the night Louis took the championship from Jim Braddock, were hairraising. No punches and no holds were barred. Galento was as rough with Godoy as he was with Lou Nova that night last summer in Philadelphia — and Godoy was even rougher than he was. He took Galento's hardest smashes, fair or foul and smashed right back — fair or foul.

Against Louis he wouldn't have to worry about foul punches for there never was a fighter of any weight more scrupulously fair than Louis. But I doubt if he could stand off Louis's best shots — and so does Al Weill and that's the reason why, whatever plan it is that they have fashioned at Carmel, it isn't likely to call for a headlong attack by the Chilean. Such tactics would be magnificent but they would pay no dividends—and Godoy isn't going into this thing just to give you and me a thrill.

Report Carnegie Tech Dropping Major Foes

PITTSBURGH, June 17 (AP)—Carnegie Tech will drop Holy Cross and possibly Duquesne from its 1941 grid schedule, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph predicted, saying the change marked Tech's "descent from the pinnacle of major football supremacy."

Tech which took Eastern honors and a share of the national football honors in 1938, will include only two major foes, the University of Pittsburgh and Notre Dame, on its 1941 schedule, the paper stated.

Buddy Overrend, Tech's athletic director, refused to comment on the status of either the Notre Dame or Duquesne contracts, which expire next year.

Langhorne Record Bettered by Nalon

LANGHORNE, Pa., June 17 (AP)—A new 100-mile auto racing mark was listed today for Langhorne Speedway following Chicago Duke Nalon's winning performance in one hour, four minutes, 47.4 seconds.

Nalon drove to victory yesterday before 37,800 fans, averaging 97.07 miles per hour to better the former standard by almost six miles an hour. Ted Horn, Los Angeles, was second and Otis Stine, York, finished third in the feature.

Tony Willman, Milwaukee, set a new world record for one mile on a circular track when he won his qualifying heat in 34.8 seconds, an average of 103.44 miles per hour. He was forced out of the main race with clutch trouble.

Boston Bees Send Veteran To Giants

BOSTON, June 17.—The Boston Bees announced today that Infielder Tony Cuccinello would be sent immediately to the New York Giants in exchange for Infielder Al Glossop and Righthander Manuel Salvo, now at Jersey City.

Secretary John Quinn said the deal was completed in New York tonight by his father, Owner Bob Quinn, and Manager Bill Terry of the Giants.

He said Glossop and Salvo are about 25 years old, whereas Cuccinello is 32 and a 10-year man in major league baseball.

Salvo has won and lost three with Jersey City, Quinn said, after a successful season last year in the Pacific Coast League.

Paul Dean Again Wins for Giants Over Chicago 2-1

Yields Only Six Hits in Registering Second Comeback Win

NEW YORK, June 17, (AP)—Paul Dean mastered the Chicago Cubs today for the second time in a week to give the New York Giants a 2 to 1 victory and move them within a game of second place in the National League.

Dean, who had permitted the Cubs only four hits in his first start of the season in Chicago last Tuesday, yielded just six today and none at all until the fifth inning. He was deprived of a shutout when Stan Hack hit a home run in the eighth.

The Giants also were rationed on six hits by Charley Root and Ken Raffensberger, but they got a run in the third on a single by Bill Jurges and a double by Burgess Whitehead and another tally in the seventh on Jurges' second homer of the year.

PHILADELPHIA, June 17. (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds jumped back into first place in the National League today by beating the Phillies 6 to 2 while Brooklyn bowed to St. Louis 3 to 1.

The Dodgers and Reds were virtually tied in games standing before today's play but Brooklyn had a lead in percentage because they have played fewer games.

First rate pitching by Lloyd Moore and a home run by Eddie Joost with two on in the second inning enabled the Reds to hand the Phils their sixth straight defeat.

Moore replaced Johnny Vander Meer on the mound in the second after the first two men up walked, and allowed only two hits in the full eight innings he pitched. It was his second victory of the season—both against the Phils.

Walter Beck went all the way for the Phils. The two Cincinnati pitchers gave up eight bases on balls, six of them in the first three innings, but the Phils got only three hits.

Morrie Arnovich made one of his two hits productive of a Cincinnati run in the first and Joost's homer accounted for three more in the second. The other runs came in the eighth and ninth.

Lacy's and Liberty Win in Booster Loop

The Lacy's Delicatets and the Liberty Dairy won their Booster League games yesterday, the former defeating the Sam's 4 to 3 on a seventh inning rally, while the Milkmen curdled the King's 13 to 1.

Campbell, on the hill for the Sam's, went along at a shut-out pace until the seventh when the Lacy's got to him for three hits and with two errors counted the four runs that meant victory. Abe and M. Rankin led the Lacy attack with two hits each.

Dyer hurled one-hit ball for the Liberty Dairy, Bowman nicking him for the safety in the second. Jake Shirk led the Milkmen's attack with three hits, while Wilson and White had two apiece.

Today the Liberty and Lacy teams clash with Post and Davis meeting in the other scheduled loop tussle.

Lanky California Lad Forgets About Being Second Baer

BERKELEY, Calif., June 17.—A lanky tennis player who suggests Big Bill Tilden in appearance and suggests him even more in his tactics, is after the big prize of American tennis—the national amateur championship to be decided at Forest Hills.

The name is Frank Kovacs and it's fairly familiar on the Eastern courts already. But its bearer is a good deal more serious in his thinking and capable in his playing than the teenage youngster who has been clowning about the courts in previous seasons.

Kovacs apparently has given up the idea of becoming a Max Baer of the tennis courts. His clowning has given him some bad setbacks.

Professionals gathered here for the recent State championships—which Kovacs won without greatly extending himself—were virtually unanimous in saying that he'd be a worthy opponent for Bobby Riggs.

Riggs No Slouch

George Hudson, who has been coaching Kovacs since the lad was 13, won't predict a victory for his protege. That's no slap at Kovacs. Hudson merely believes that the bulk of tennis fans gravely underrate Riggs' game.

"Kovacs has one of the toughest serves I've ever been up against in thirty-four years of tennis," says Hudson.

"All his shots are sound and if he's in top condition I believe he has a chance to bring home the championship.

Strategist A La Tilden

His mind functions more like Bill Tilden's than any player I've seen. Tilden figures a man's strength and weakness in the first few games and Frankie does much the same thing. He's a boy who makes quick decisions."

The California youngster is 20 years old, stands 6 feet 3 inches and weighs about 175 pounds. He was troubled last year by bursitis, or tennis elbow, but appears to have fully recovered.

Kovacs expects some defeats in the string of tournaments he'll play before the Forest Hills event, but is eager and confident regarding the "big chance."

"I've played most of the ranking players in the country, he says, "and I'll say this much—I'm not afraid of them."

Washington Crew Favored To Win

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 17 (AP)—The University of Washington varsity crew maintained the Hudson river status quo tonight by continuing as betting choice on the eve of the forty-third regatta of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association.

The Huskies or the University of California, have dominated the betting in this four-mile classic on an average of four times out of five through the last fifteen years. Rarely have they left their supporters down.

When Washington ties up to its stake boat some time around 4 p. m. (EST) tomorrow afternoon, its sophomore-stroked boatload is expected to be the 7-5 favorite. Lined up next to the Huskies in the outside, or far eastern lane, will be California, record-breaking winner a year ago and this time joint second choice with Cornell at 2 to 1.

Columbia will be 4 to 1, Syracuse 5 to 1, Navy, last winner for the east in 1938, 8 to 1, and Wisconsin and Princeton fellow underdogs at 20 to 1.

W.Va. Net Tourney Results

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 17 (AP)—Charley Schoew of Huntington and Paul Lingo of Charleston, winning first and second round matches, advanced to the semi-finals in the junior division of the junior and boys' tennis tournament today as favorites.

In the girls junior division of the state event, Jean Wetherall, Huntington, advanced to the semi-finals by defeating Nellie Brooks of Charleston 6-0, 6-1.

Patty Radford of Huntington also went up, on a bye.

Richard Garrett of Morgantown emerged as a strong contender for the title in the boys' tournament by trouncing Newton Thomas, Charleston, 6-0, 6-4 in the second round after a first round bye.

Card-Dodger Deal Upsets Pre-Season Dope in National

But Shake-Up of St. Louis May Bring Harmony and New Drive

By GRANTLAND RICE

Eight weeks of campaigning in the National League have riddled the pre-season dope, based on what the teams had done last year, plus the showing they made at their training camps. In early April this looked like a two-club race—a toss-up between the Reds and the Cardinals, with the Reds fighting back from last October's debacle and the Cardinals renewing the surge that almost carried them past the Reds to the pennant in the closing weeks of the 1939 struggle.

Now, as the teams move past mid-June, it's a three-cornered tussle—and it looks as though it will be all the way to the finish. The Cardinals are nowhere and have but scant hope of getting anywhere this year—but the Dodgers and the Giants have closed in on the Reds.

The Dodgers are no surprise—or, at any rate, not a complete surprise. They finished third last year and the dope was that they would finish third or thereabouts again this year but the pennant seemed quite beyond them.

The Giants are startling. They sagged through 1939 and seemed destined to sag even worse this year. Only a few hardy souls, suspected of being motivated more by sentiment than by cold reasoning, picked them to finish in the first division.

Old Heroes Return

There were too many uncertain spots on the team—too many places in which it might crack at the first application of pressure. Two of the old reliables, Carl Hubbell and Joe Moore, semed to be through. Mel Ott didn't look too good. And with Hubbell and Moore gone and Ott going, and other posts held by doubtful competitors, it looked pretty bad for the Giants.

But Hubbell, Moore and Ott came rushing back. Harry Danning has exceeded th eexpectations of even those who were saying he was the best catcher in the league. Babe Young has held up strongly at first base, Burgess Whitehead has recaptured his old form—and the Giants are right up there, fighting for the lead and with better than an outside chance of going all the way through.

The Reds, battling steadily to hold the title they won a year ago, have been in and out of first place—and never very far out of it. Bucky Walters, Paul Derringer and Gene Thompson are winning pitchers again. Bill Werber continues to give the Red infield the balance and tightness it lacked before he went to Cincinnati. Mike McCormick hasn't hit very well but he has strengthened the outfield defensively. Winning the pennant last year and then blowing the World Series to the Yankees took nothing away from the team's spirit.

The Medwick Deal

The Dodgers already strong, took on added strength with the acquisition of Joe Medwick and Curt Davis. When the final answer is in on the season's play, it may be seen that the deal for Medwick and Davis nailed the pennant to the flag pole at Ebbets Field.

I recall meeting Leo Durocher on an off day last year and hearing him say, "This is such a screwy race that if I had a hitter who could drive in runs for me every day—just one hitter that I could count on day in and day out, mind you—I might win. If you think I am kidding, think back over the games I have lost just because I got a pop-up instead of an extra-base hit in a pinch. The Reds should win. They're out there and I don't know of anybody who can head them off. But give me the kind of hitter I have in mind and I might do it."

He Has Him Now

Leo has that kind of hitter now. Ducky Medwick fits the description perfectly. Medwick had a bad time of it these last three years in St. Louis. He plainly was disgruntled there, wanted to get to Brooklyn and couldn't generate his old steam at the plate, in the field or on the base paths.

The switch to Brooklyn should make him once more the solid man he was from 1935 through 1937, when he hit .353, .351 and .374. That—not the growling, dissatisfied athlete of the last three years—was the real Medwick. And don't forget to add to those batting averages a great performance in the field every day.

With Medwick to supply the daily smash and Davis to step in and help out with the pitching, the Dodgers now carry a terrific pennant threat.

What of the Cardinals?

Incidentally, it will be interesting to see what effect, if any, the passing of Medwick from St. Louis will have on the fortunes of the Cardinals.

One of the last of the Gas House Gang—gone, now, with Frank Frisch, the Deans, Ripper Collins and the rest—Medwick had lost his old popularity with his team mates and the fans. He contributed nothing to the Cardinals' drive last year until it was too late and nothing at all to their efforts to stay in the first division this year. His passing completed a shake-up begun with the release of Manager Ray Blades.

It looks, from here, as though the shake-up was too long delayed. But baseball is a strange and uncertain game and it may be that a new manager, plus the restoration of harmony in the ranks, will revive the Cardinals. Still, right now I would say that they haven't much chance to crash the three-way struggle among the Dodgers, the Reds and the Giants.—Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.

Notre Dame Returns To Irish Footballers

NOTRE DAME, Ind., June 17—There'll be plenty of Fighting Irish at the end positions on the Notre Dame fotball team next fall.

Four young men named O'Brien are out for the jobs.

And just to add to the picture a pair of Kellys are candidates for the same positions.

Challedon's Form Pleases Schaefer

DELAWARE PARK, June 17.—The only sounds here today was the drone of the tractors as they worked the track into condition for the resumption of the sport tomorrow. It is the last of two dark Mondays of the 30-day meeting which reached the halfway mark on Saturday.

With horses munching hay in deeply bedded stalls, it is an opportune time to rediscover Maryland's "lost horse."

Only eight months ago Challedon was the name on the tip of every horse-follower's tongue, for he was proclaimed the outstanding thoroughbred of 1939.

Schaefer Pleased With Recent Form

However, it would appear that followers of the sport of kings are very fickle. When Challedon failed to return to the wars last spring they seemed to forget about the bay colt which tied Kayak II in a knot in the Pimlico Special.

Today, Challedon is a fit horse and almost ready to return to action and again thrill racegoers with his sparkling stretch runs.

Trainer Louis Schaefer, former rider and only horseman ever to handle Challedon, came to Delaware Oaks and said, "Challedon is coming back to the races just as well as we had hoped he would."

When Schaefer said "we," he referred to himself and William L. Brann, owner of Challedon. Brann bred and raised the son of Challenger II and Laura Gal at his Glade Valley farm near Walkersville, Md.

Before coming here to race Yarnith, Schaefer gave Challedon a mile - and - an - eighth workout over the Belmont Park training track and the 4-year-old took a minute and 57 seconds to cover the distance. This is not sensational time, but it was enough to prompt the clockers to send word to home offices that the veteran will soon be back in the battle.

Seen Certain Starter At Suffolk

Challedon has been nominated for the $50,000-added Massachusets Handicap on July 17 at Suffolk Downs and for the Hollywood Gold Cup, which carries the same value as the New England test, only ten days later.

It will, of course, be virtually impossible for him to start in both stakes, and Schaefer probably would not ask him to do so. It is almost a sure thing that Challedon will run in New England.

The Massachusetts Handicap, incidentally, marked his first start against older horses as a 3-year-old last season. He was fourth behind Fighting Fox, Pompoon and Burning Star.

Barring unforseen mishaps there is little doubt but that Challedon will be knocking them dead again when the sport returns to Maryland's major tracks in the fall.

Betting Odds On Title Bout Shaved

NEW YORK, June 17 (AP)—Some of our boxing minds looked into the crystal ball over their ham and eggs today and predicted, in apparent seriousness, that Arturo Godoy would take the heavyweight championship away from Joe Louis in Yankee Stadium Thursday night.

Immediately, for no better reason, the betting odds were shaved somewhat by Broadway bookmakers to 1 to 5 which is plenty short.

Even a set of hungry bloodhounds couldn't ferret out the reason. Admittedly Godoy is as strong as he was when he dropped a split decision to Louis last February, and he's trained so fine he will do no more boxing.

But Louis, when last heard from, was still the same dusky dynamiter, and there's nothing in the deck which would figure to give Godoy more than an outside chance.

This observer, while rating Godoy as better than a million-to-one shot, can't help climbing on the champ's bandwagon for this ride, picking Louis to put the South American, crouch and all, to sleep in seven rounds or less. However, the longer the fight goes after that, the rosier will be Arturo's chances of grabbing the brass ring.

Promoter Mike Jacobs said the advance sale had nearly reached $50,000 and predicted the fight was a cinch to go over the $150,000 mark.

Safety for Climbers

SAN FRANCISCO, June 17 (AP)—In an effort to reduce the peril of mountain climbing the National Park Service is encouraging climbers to register with park officials before starting their trips. Advice also will be given them on choice of routes, with the object of discouraging foolhardy attempts.

Boston Bees Beat Bucs in Both Ends Of Double-Header

Boost Selves from Last To Sixth Place in Standings

BOSTON, June 17. (AP)—The combination of effective pitching and timely hitting boosted the Boston Bees from last to sixth place in the National League standing today when they swept their doubleheader from the Pirates, 5-3, and 5-1, before a skimpy crowd of 5,224.

While posting his fifth win in the opener, Sailor Bill Posedel fanned eleven of the Pirates and limited them to six hits as his teammates slugged their old friend Deacon Danny MacFayden and two relief pitchers for 13 safeties.

Al Piechota settled down in the pinches and, despite his nine passes, the Pirates were held to one run, a homer by Bob Elliott in the first inning. Vince DiMaggio got a four-bagger off Posedel in the opener.

Hoblitzell-Blanton Win W. Va. Tourney

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 17. (AP)—Jack Hoblitzell and Jules Blanton, both of Parkersburg, captured the pro-amateur event played here today as a prelude to the State Open Golf Championship tomorrow.

The Parkersburg pair defeated Clem Weichman and Bob Parker, both of Logan, on the 19th hole.

The four were tied at 69's—three under par for the Guyan Club course—at the end of the regular route. Then Blanton dumped a 25-foot approach shot into the cup to end the battle with a birdie three. It was the first time in the history of the pro-amateur that a play-off has been necessary.

In reality the playoff was uncalled for because the tournament committee previously had disqualified Weichman and Barker for failure to carry scoring cards. Both said they believed their caddies were keeping their scores.

Giles Thinks Arnovich Will Give Reds Punch

CINCINNATI, June 17. (AP)—Acquisition of Outfielder Morrie Arnovich from the Phils in exchange for Johnny Rizzo will strengthen the Reds both in batting and fielding, General Manager Warren Giles asserted yesterday.

"Arnovich had a good batting record last year and ended the season with a .324 average," he said. "I know he hasn't been doing so good this season, but we feel that he is due to do better and the change might be just what he needs."

The Cincinnati oficials said one purpose of the trade was to improve the Reds' weak left-field position, observing: "Arnovich has played left-field all his life."

THE CASE FOR GODOY

The mood that grips Joe Louis on Thursday night will be, I still think, the main factor in his fight with Arturo Godoy. A savage, vengeful Louis, still hearing the boos of the crowd that rolled up at him when he failed to knock Godoy out last winter, might make short work of the Chilean. An overconfident or lackadaisical Louis, bewildered again by the curious style of his opponent, could blow the title — and don't think he couldn't.

Meanwhile, let's look at Godoy for a moment. On his showing in February, regardless of the manner in which he contrived to stay fifteen rounds with the champion, he rates serious consideration. It wasn't a great fight that he made or even an exciting one but it was well planned and, though you may not have liked it, cleverly executed.

Again Godoy has been carefully drilled by the cagey Al Weill in a way to confound the champion. This time the object, naturally, is not for Godoy to stay fifteen rounds but to win the title. The details of it have been well guarded. But I know this: Godoy has worked hard at it and he is in shape to go fifteen rounds — or twenty-five or fifty — provided, of course, Louis doesn't tag him with some of those pulverizing pokes to the head that flattened Galento, Pastor, Schmeling, Braddock, Baer and Carnera.

A Real Throwback

In his way of training, Godoy is a throwback to the old school. He has to be, because there is nothing fancy about him. He is big and rugged and not too fast and he can't hit. His main points are his stamina and durability. He must be fit to take a pounding, or, seeking to avoid one as he did in his first engagement with Louis, bob, weave, circle, back-track, move in, move out again — and this takes wind and legs. If you don't think so, try it sometime off by yourself, with no one in there to throw punches at you or make you tense with apprehension.

To get in shape — the condition that he has to have in this campaign of his for the heavyweight title, Godoy goes through a routine that horrifies some of his contemporaries, who have streamlined their training, with the emphasis on speed and not stamina. He does eight or ten miles early every morning over the rolling hills that encircle his camp at Carmel. Not content with that, he goes for hikes after every meal. In the afternoons he has a strenuous workout in the ring—boxing, punching the bag, skipping the rope, doing his calisthentics.

He Likes To Work

He has been at Carmel for eight weeks and has had but few off days. A fellow who doesn't dissipate or get out of condition between fights, he means to be in better condition this time than he ever was in his life.

It isn't easy for him. He is twenty-seven years old and has been fighting for eight years. But nothing he ever has had came to him the easy way, and he would be perfectly willing to work twice as hard as he does if he thought it would mean the title to him. As a matter of fact, he would, anyway, if it wasn't for Weill and his trainer, Whitey Bimstein, who have to slow him down and call him off every day.

An added asset that he will take into the ring with him against Louis is the incentive to win and thus reap the profits that Louis has been reaping for three years. In the literal sense, Arturo is neither cold nor hungry — cold and hungry fighters, they say, are best because they are desperate. But he wants the things that Louis has and that, so far, he has not.

I don't know yet what kind of fight it will be and can only hope—along with everybody else—that it will be a better fight than the one in the Garden last February.

I know how it could be a great fight, although it would not last long and almost certainly would end with Godoy on the floor or tottering, helpless, in the arms of the referee.

That would be for Godoy to abandon the guile that bewildered Louis last winter and fight in his old-stand-up, plunging, headlong style. We're not likely to see anything like that because he can't match the power that lies in Louis's punches — but it would be a thrill to see Godoy fighting Louis as he fought Tony Galento and all his other goes until he encountered the champion.

Those Galento Fights

His two fights with Galento, one here and the other in Chicago the night Louis took the championship from Jim Braddock, were hairraising. No punches and no holds were barred. Galento was as rough with Godoy as he was with Lou Nova that night last summer in Philadelphia — and Godoy was even rougher than he was. He took Galento's hardest smashes, fair or foul and smashed right back — fair or foul.

Against Louis he wouldn't have to worry about foul punches for there never was a fighter of any weight more scrupulously fair than Louis. But I doubt if he could stand off Louis's best shots — and so does Al Weill and that's the reason why, whatever plan it is that they have fashioned at Carmel, it isn't likely to call for a headlong attack by the Chilean. Such tactics would be magnificent but they would pay no dividends—and Godoy isn't going into this thing just to give you and me a thrill.

Report Carnegie Tech Dropping Major Foes

PITTSBURGH, June 17 (AP)—Carnegie Tech will drop Holy Cross and possibly Duquesne from its 1941 grid schedule, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph predicted, saying the change marked Tech's "descent from the pinnacle of major football supremacy."

Tech which took Eastern honors and a share of the national football honors in 1938, will include only two major foes, the University of Pittsburgh and Notre Dame, on its 1941 schedule, the paper stated.

Buddy Overrend, Tech's athletic director, refused to comment on the status of either the Notre Dame or Duquesne contracts, which expire next year.

Langhorne Record Bettered by Nalon

LANGHORNE, Pa., June 17 (AP)—A new 100-mile auto racing mark was listed today for Langhorne Speedway following Chicago Duke Nalon's winning performance in one hour, four minutes, 47.4 seconds.

Nalon drove to victory yesterday before 37,800 fans, averaging 97.07 miles per hour to better the former standard by almost six miles an hour. Ted Horn, Los Angeles, was second and Otis Stine, York, finished third in the feature.

Tony Willman, Milwaukee, set a new world record for one mile on a circular track when he won his qualifying heat in 34.8 seconds, an average of 103.44 miles per hour. He was forced out of the main race with clutch trouble.

Boston Bees Send Veteran To Giants

BOSTON, June 17.—The Boston Bees announced today that Infielder Tony Cuccinello would be sent immediately to the New York Giants in exchange for Infielder Al Glossop and Righthander Manuel Salvo, now at Jersey City.

Secretary John Quinn said the deal was completed in New York tonight by his father, Owner Bob Quinn, and Manager Bill Terry of the Giants.

He said Glossop and Salvo are about 25 years old, whereas Cuccinello is 32 and a 10-year man in major league baseball.

Salvo has won and lost three with Jersey City, Quinn said, after a successful season last year in the Pacific Coast League.

Paul Dean Again Wins for Giants Over Chicago 2-1

Yields Only Six Hits in Registering Second Comeback Win

NEW YORK, June 17, (AP)—Paul Dean mastered the Chicago Cubs today for the second time in a week to give the New York Giants a 2 to 1 victory and move them within a game of second place in the National League.

Dean, who had permitted the Cubs only four hits in his first start of the season in Chicago last Tuesday, yielded just six today and none at all until the fifth inning. He was deprived of a shutout when Stan Hack hit a home run in the eighth.

The Giants also were rationed on six hits by Charley Root and Ken Raffensberger, but they got a run in the third on a single by Bill Jurges and a double by Burgess Whitehead and another tally in the seventh on Jurges' second homer of the year.

Starts Football Team Before Schoolhouse

SOUTH BEND, Ind., June 17 (AP)—Ben Sheridan, tricky Notre Dame back last year, is a forward-looking young man.

Just because the school hadn't been built yet didn't keep him from starting his coaching duties at John Adams High School in South Bend. He was named coach and had almost concluded spring drills before construction started on the school itself.

Brooklyn Boots Ball Game Away With Four Errors

Dodgers Shell-Shocked From Double-Defeat On Sunday

Shoun of Cards Allows Only Four Hits To Win 3 to 1

BROOKLYN, June 17 (AP)—Still shell-shocked from the going over given them Sunday by the Cincinnati Reds, the Brooklyn Dodgers made four costly errors today and dropped a 3 to 1 decision to the St. Louis Cardinals that also meant the loss of first place in the National League.

It was the fifth straight triumph for the Cards, who haven't been beaten since Billy Southworth assumed the managership last week. Clyde Shoun, the former workhorse relief pitcher, started the game and went the full distance for the first time since 1938, allowing just four singles.

Two of these and a double play gave the Dodgers their only run in the first inning.

Tamulis Hurls Well

Vito Tamulis and Newt Kimball, who worked the ninth inning after Tamulis was removed for a pinch-hitter, hurled good ball and allowed seven hits, all of them singles except a harmless two-bagger by Mickey Owen.

But they were sold out by their teammates, whose errors made every one of the Cardinal runs unearned.

In the first inning Stu Martin singled and continued to second when Dixie Walker fumbled the ball. Johnny Hopp sacrificed and was safe when Dolph Camilli dropped the throw. Ernie Koy struck out but Martin scored on an infield out.

St. Louis got its other two runs in a weird fourth inning which Koy opened by reaching first on Cookie Lavagetto's error and stealing second. He went to third on a fly by Pepper Martin. Terry Moore popped up, but Joe Orengo singled Koy home. Then he stole second and went on to third when Babe Phelps threw into centerfield, and raced home on a single by Martin Marion.

Misses No-Hit Game

AUGUSTA, Ga., June 17 (AP) — Witt Guise, the Columbia Reds' 30-year-old pitcher, marched right to the threshold of baseball's Hall of Fame only to have Eddie Rose, Savannah's veteran outfielder, slam the door in his face.

Guise hurled the Reds to a ten-inning 1-to-0 victory over Savannah yesterday. For eight innings he held the Indians hitless. Then, after he had two men out in the ninth, Rose sigled, wrecking Guise's chance for a no-hit, no-run stint. In the tenth, after two safeties had brought Al Lekeman home for Columbia's only score, Guise set the Indians down without a hit.

Washington Even Money To Win at Poughkeepsie

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 17—Not since the Half Moon, a dark horse, sailed up the Hudson River with Hendrik Hudson at the tiller, in the hope of finding China somewhere in the neighborhood of Albany, have the underdog boats looked so dangerous as this year in the Poughkeepsie regatta, the world's greatest rowing race.

Local Indians held the stop-watch on the Half Moon, but refused to reveal the time. In fact, they refused to reveal anything whatever. They might have mentioned that China and Cathay and the gold of the Indies were nowhere to be found up that particular creek. They might have tipped the coxswain off that he was headed straight for Rhinebeck, Kingston, Catskill, Hudson, Albany, and Troy, with Cohoes and Schenectady just around the corner.

Go Downtown, Young Man

Still and all, Hudson did discover the river, and he proved that the best way to go is downstream, if gold is what you want. Thanks to him, eight good college shells will shoot downstream for four miles on Tuesday, in what looks like one of the best of all Poughkeepsie races.

Varsity boats are entered from Washington, California, Cornell, Cornell, Syracuse, Columbia, Navy, Wisconsin, and Princeton. Princeton is a newcomer to these waters. The rest are veteran Hudson River crews, and all but one of them—Wisconsin—are conceded a chance of winning the race. Wisconsin has the best-looking coaching launch, but her galley-power is a trifle ragged.

As usual, the big lean crews from the far west—Washington and California—are favored to run one-two. Washington licked California in coastal waters last April. The tidal bookmakers in this elbow of the river empower me to report the betting odds as follows:

Washington—even money.
California—2 to 1.
Cornell—6 to 1.
Columbia—8 to 1.
Syracuse—10 to 1.
Navy—12 to 1
Princeton—20 to 1.
Wisconsin—50 to 1.

Columbia, Syracuse, and Navy are dark horses. Princeton and Wisconsin are rank outsiders. The other three boatloads, the favorites, have shown true class, and Washington and Cornell are undefeated, the latter being the king shell of the east, with victories over Yale and Harvard at sprint distances this season.

Problem In a Shell

That, of course, is the great trouble about doping this ancient acquacade, they are all sprinters, as far as anyone knows, when they come to the post. One or two crews have rowed as far as three miles in competition during the season—Wisconsin was beaten by Syracuse recently at that distance—but there is as much difference between the average spring race of two miles and the Poughkeepsie route of four miles as there is between six furlongs and a mile and a quarter in horse-racing. Which are sprinters and which are stayers? That's the problem.

The Pacific Coast crews, like the crews at Harvard, Cornell, and other schools were the Washington system is taught by Washington rowers, are generally versatile. They can sprint and they can go a route. The record of Washington and California since they began rowing on the Hudson overshadows everything the eastern crews have produced.

But Ol' Man Hudson (second cousin on his mother's side to Ol' Man River) is nobody's steady friend—and since all the boats come up to the race with sprint records, there is no telling which may be a secret stayer, a route crew.

California won as advertised last year, but two years ago, with California and Washington strongly favored, a very dark horse Navy crew, with a mediocre sprint record, plowed straight past the big boats from the west at the finish and won by a length on a smooth, thick river.

There is just as much chance of an upset now as there was then. Navy might do it again. Cornell is powerful. Columbia, which was just astern of the leaders in 1938, has a more promising varsity shell this year than it had then.

And also there is Syracuse. For myself—the bookmakers call me long-shot Lardner, or just plain "hello, sucker"—I am going to tie a small prediction to the keel of that Syracuse boat.

Browns Extend Night Schedule by 7 Games

ST. LOUIS, June 17 (AP)—Encouraged by the success of their first night game, the St. Louis Browns announced they would play 14 games under the lights this year, instead of the seven originally scheduled.

President Donald L. Barnes said he asked William Harridge, American League president to seek permission from the other clubs for the change. Harridge polled the clubs and each agreed to waive on the rule. The league rule allows each club only seven night games at home a year.

The rearrangement means the Browns will play each club twice under the lights here. Scheduling of the additional seven games will be completed in the next few days. St. Louis officials now are contacting other clubs for satisfactory dates.

"We are doing this," Barnes said, "because we believe that St. Louis fans want more night games. Ever since we announced our schedule of seven games, we have been urged to enlarge upon it."

The Browns drew a crowd of 24,827 in their first night game here against Cleveland, May 24.

Keegan's Gassers Win Over West Side 9 to 5

Bill Keegan's Gassers defeated the West Side at Community Ball Park yesterday, 9 to 5, by scoring five runs in the fifth inning without the semblance of a safety.

Two errors and three walks put the runners on base and each counted with what proved the winning markers. The Keegan's were limited to five hits by Reedy, but three of them, including a triple by Miller, came in the sixth session when another West Side error aided in netting three more tallies.

Twigg limited the West Side to four hits, one a triple by C. Beal and another a homer by C. Fisher in the third.

Score by innings:

KEEGAN'S	000 053 1—9 5 1
WEST SIDE	111 010 1—5 4 4

Batteries—Twigg and C. Lapp; Reedy and Speir.

Brooklyn Boots Ball Game Away With Four Errors

Shoun of Cards Allows Only Four Hits To Win 3 to 1

BROOKLYN, June 17 (AP)—Still shell-shocked from the going over given them Sunday by the Cincinnati Reds, the Brooklyn Dodgers made four costly errors today and dropped a 3 to 1 decision to the St. Louis Cardinals that also meant the loss of first place in the National League.

It was the fifth straight triumph for the Cards, who haven't been beaten since Billy Southworth assumed the managership last week. Clyde Shoun, the former workhorse relief pitcher, started the game and went the full distance for the first time since 1938, allowing just four singles.

Two of these and a double play gave the Dodgers their only run in the first inning.

Tamulis Hurls Well

Vito Tamulis and Newt Kimball, who worked the ninth inning after Tamulis was removed for a pinch-hitter, hurled good ball and allowed seven hits, all of them singles except a harmless two-bagger by Mickey Owen.

But they were sold out by their teammates, whose errors made every one of the Cardinal runs unearned.

In the first inning Stu Martin singled and continued to second when Dixie Walker fumbled the ball. Johnny Hopp sacrificed and was safe when Dolph Camilli dropped the throw. Ernie Koy struck out but Martin scored on an infield out.

St. Louis got its other two runs in a weird fourth inning which Koy opened by reaching first on Cookie Lavagetto's error and stealing second. He went to third on a fly by Pepper Martin. Terry Moore popped up, but Joe Orengo singled Koy home. Then he stole second and went on to third when Babe Phelps threw into centerfield, and raced home on a single by Martin Marion.

Misses No-Hit Game

AUGUSTA, Ga., June 17 (AP) — Pitt Guise, the Columbia Reds' 30-year-old pitcher, marched right to the threshold of baseball's Hall of Fame only to have Eddie Rose, Savannah's veteran outfielder, slam the door in his face.

Guise hurled the Reds to a tenning 1-to-0 victory over Savannah yesterday. For eight innings he held the Indians hitless. Then, after he had two men out in the ninth, Rose walled, wrecking Guise's chance for a no-hit, no-run stint. In the tenth, after two safeties had brought Al Lakeman home for Columbia's only score, Guise set the Indians down without a hit.

Washington Even Money To Win at Poughkeepsie

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 17—Not since the Half Moon, a dark horse, sailed up the Hudson River with Hendrik Hudson at the tiller, in the hope of finding China somewhere in the neighborhood of Albany, have the underdog boats looked so dangerous as this year in the Poughkeepsie regatta, the world's greatest rowing race.

Local Indians held the stop-watch on the Half Moon, but refused to reveal the time. In fact, they refused to reveal anything whatever. They might have mentioned that China and Cathay and the gold of the Indies were nowhere to be found up that particular creek. They might have tipped the coxswain off that he was headed straight for Rhinebeck, Kingston, Catskill, Hudson, Albany, and Troy, with Cohoes and Schenectady just around the corner.

Go Downtown, Young Man

Still and all, Hudson did discover the river, and he proved that the best way to go is downstream, if gold is what you want. Thanks to him, eight good college shells will shoot downstream for four miles on Tuesday, in what looks like one of the best of all Poughkeepsie races.

Varsity boats are entered from Washington, California, Cornell, Cornell, Syracuse, Columbia, Navy, Wisconsin, and Princeton. Princeton is a newcomer to these waters. The rest are veteran Hudson River crews, and all but one of them—Wisconsin—are conceded a chance of winning the race. Wisconsin has the best-looking coaching launch, but her galley-power is a trifle ragged.

As usual, the big lean crews from the far west—Washington and California—are favored to run one-two. Washington licked California in coastal waters last April. The tidal bookmakers in this elbow of the river empower me to report the betting odds as follows:

Washington—even money.
California—2 to 1.
Cornell—6 to 1.
Columbia—8 to 1.
Syracuse—10 to 1.
Navy—12 to 1
Princeton—20 to 1.
Wisconsin—50 to 1.

Columbia, Syracuse, and Navy are dark horses. Princeton and Wisconsin are rank outsiders. The other three boatloads, the favorites, have shown true class, and Washington and Cornell are undefeated, the latter being the king shell of the east, with victories over Yale and Harvard at sprint distances this season.

Problem In a Shell

That, of course, is the great trouble about doping this ancient acquacade—they are all sprinters, as far as anyone knows, when they come to the post. One or two crews have rowed as far as three miles in competition during the season—Wisconsin was beaten by Syracuse recently at that distance—but there is as much difference between the average spring race of two miles and the Poughkeepsie route of four miles as there is between six furlongs and a mile and a quarter in horse-racing. Which are sprinters and which are stayers? That's the problem.

The Pacific Coast crews, like the crews at Harvard, Cornell, and other schools were the Washington system is taught by Washington rowers, are generally versatile. They can sprint and they can go a route. The record of Washington and California since they began rowing on the Hudson overshadows everything the eastern crews have produced.

But Ol' Man Hudson (second cousin on his mother's side to Ol' Man River) is nobody's steady friend—and since all the boats come up to the race with sprint records, there is no telling which may be a secret stayer, a route crew.

California won as advertised last year, but two years ago, with California and Washington strongly favored, a very dark horse Navy crew, with a mediocre sprint record, plowed straight past the big boats from the west at the finish and won by a length on a smooth, thick river.

There is just as much chance of an upset now as there was then. Navy might do it again. Cornell is powerful. Columbia, which was just astern of the leaders in 1938, has a more promising varsity shell this year than it had then.

And also there is Syracuse. For myself—the bookmakers call me long-shot Lardner, or just plain "hello, sucker"—I am going to tie a small prediction to the keel of that Syracuse boat.

Browns Extend Night Schedule by 7 Games

ST. LOUIS, June 17 (AP)—Encouraged by the success of their first night game, the St. Louis Browns announced they would play 14 games under the lights this year, instead of the seven originally scheduled.

President Donald L. Barnes said he asked William Harridge, American League president to seek permission from the other clubs for the change. Harridge polled the clubs and each agreed to waive on the rule. The league rule allows each club only seven night games at home a year.

The rearrangement means the Browns will play each club twice under the lights here. Scheduling of the additional seven games will be completed in the next few days. St. Louis officials now are contacting other clubs for satisfactory dates.

"We are doing this," Barnes said, "because we believe that St. Louis fans want more night games. Ever since we announced our schedule of seven games, we have been urged to enlarge upon it."

The Browns drew a crowd of 24,827 in their first night game here against Cleveland, May 24.

Keegan's Gassers Win Over West Side 9 to 5

Bill Keegan's Gassers defeated the West Side at Community Ball Park yesterday, 9 to 5, by scoring five runs in the fifth inning without the semblance of a safety.

Two errors and three walks put the runners on base and each counted with what proved the winning markers. The Keegan's were limited to five hits by Reedy, but three of them, including a triple by Miller, came in the sixth session when another West Side error aided in netting three more tallies.

Twigg limited the West Side to four hits, one a triple by C. Beal and another a homer by C. Fisher in the third.

Score by innings:

KEEGAN'S	000	053	1	9	5	1
WEST SIDE	111	010	1	5	4	4

Batteries—Twigg and C. Lapp; Reedy and Speir.

Mrs. McKaig Leaves $5,000 To Hospital

Will Made in 1936 Bequeaths Family Most of Property

A bequest of $5,000 was made to the Allegany hospital in the will of the late Lalitte Nash McKaig, wife of W. Wallace McKaig, it was revealed yesterday.

The bequest is to be given only after the hospital designates a use or purpose for the fund, which is to be approved by Mr. McKaig, who was named executor.

The bequest, when finally paid, is to be known as the "Lalitte Nash McKaig Memorial."

The first eleven provisions in the will are as follows:

"FIRST: To my husband, William Wallace McKaig, I give and bequeath the three-stone diamond ring, which was the property of his mother, Florence McKaig, and also my pearl dog-collar and string of pearls, all shares of stock in The Cumberland Steel Company and all of my silverware, plate, furniture and household effects of every description.

"SECOND: I give and bequeath the ring which was the engagement ring of my mother to her namesake, my niece, Isabelle Tracy Perry.

"THIRD: I give the bequeath my diamond and sapphire bracelet to my niece, Cecil Papin Perry.

"FOURTH: I give and bequeath my diamond lavaliere to my niece, Grace Costigan.

"FIFTH: I give and bequeath my diamond and ruby ring to my niece, Katherine Costigan.

"SIXTH: I give and bequeath my diamond bar pin to my niece, Virginia Costigan.

"SEVENTH: I direct that my said Executor have the engagement ring received from my husband, William Wallace McKaig, enclosed in a solid gold chalice, and have engraved thereon 'In Memoriam, Lalitte Nash McKaig,' and send the same to the Convent of the Holy Child Jesus, at Sharon Hill, Pennsylvania, to which convent I hereby give and bequeath the same.

"EIGHTH: I give and bequeath to whoever may be the Pastor of SS. Peter and Paul's Catholic Church, Cumberland, Maryland, at the time of my death, the sum of Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000.00) and request that said sum be used by said Pastor and his successors for the purpose of saying Masses, in perpetuity, for the repose of my soul.

"NINTH: I give and bequeath to my Executor hereinafter named the sum of Thirty Dollars ($30.00), and request that he send this amount in full to the 'Fathers of the Blessed Sacrament,' 185 E. 76th Street, New York City, for the purpose of having the Gregorian Masses said for the repose of my soul.

"TENTH: I give and bequeath all my wearing apparel to my sister, Minnie Nash Perry, absolutely.

"ELEVENTH: I give and bequeath all of my jewelry (except such as has been hereinbefore mentioned) to my sister, Minnie Nash Perry, and to the daughters of my deceased sister, Elise Nash Costigan, directing that my sister, Minnie Nash Perry, and my Executor hereinafter named shall designate the particular pieces to be given to each, so that my sister, Minnie Nash Perry, shall receive, as nearly as possible, one-half of the intrinsic value of said jewelry, and the daughters of my deceased sister, Elise Nash Costigan, shall receive, in the aggregate, as nearly as possible, the remaining one-half of the intrinsic value of said jewelry." If my said sister, Minnie Nash Perry and the daughters of my deceased sister, Elise Nash Costigan, shall agree as to said division, my said Executor shall be bound thereby, and if and in the event that the daughters of my deceased sister, Elise Nash Costigan, shall be unable to agree among themselves as to the division of the remaining one-half of the jewelry hereinbefore mentioned, then and in that event my sister, Minnie Nash Perry, and my Executor hereinafter named shall be and are hereby authorized and directed to divide the same among them.

The twelfth provision sets up a trust fund of $50,000, the entire income of which is to be paid semi-annually to Mrs. McKaig's mother, Mrs. Isabelle Tracy Nash, during her lifetime.

Upon the death of Mrs. Nash, the trust is to be terminated, and half of the principal and any accumulations are to be given to Mrs. McKaig's sister, Minnie Nash Perry, and the other half to the daughters of a deceased sister, Elsie Nash Costigan, share and share alike.

The thirteenth provision makes the hospital bequest.

The fourteenth and last provision is: "All the rest and residue of my estate, both real, personal, and mixed, of whatsoever kind and wheresoever situated, I give, devise, and bequeath to my beloved husband, William Wallace McKaig, absolutely."

The will was signed on Jan. 11, 1936. Witnesses were Zebulon M. Hewitt, Guy J. Spear, and George R. Hughes.

Ridgeley Holding Special Election On WPA Project

Approval Is Sought For Extra Tax Levy For New Streets

A special election will be held in Ridgeley next Tuesday, June 25, for the purpose of making an addition to the municipal levy for the building, maintaining, and black-topping of the streets and alleys of the town.

Ridgeley has been granted a $62,000 WPA project and the election will decide whether or not the citizens of the town across the Potomac river are willing to accept an extra tax levy t raise $7,400, which has been fixed as to the town's share toward the project.

Town officials, anxious to take advantage of Federal funds while they are now available, point out that under the new levy the average property owner will be required to pay only $2.13 annually for a period of three years. The average property in Ridgeley is valued at $1,700. The extra tax is to be levied in the place of floating a bond issue.

Under the $62,000 project, the new streets to be laid in Ridgeley are River View avenue, Leo, Martin, Middle, Walnut, Mertens and John streets, and a portion of Carpenter avenue. Streets scheduled for resurfacing are Knobley from Central avenue to the junction at the state road, William, Jones, Pecan and Terry streets.

The city fathers stress the fact that Ridgeley never has laid any extra assessments or passed any bond issues and are hopeful that the citizens of the town will cast their vote in favor of the extra tax levy at next Tuesday's special election.

Polls at the Knobley Street school house will be open from 6:30 a. m., to 6:30 p. m.

Beaten Worker May Lose Arm

CIO Carpenter Enters Hospital

Injuries received by Robert G. Nazelrod on April 4 when four members of a rival union assaulted him may result in his losing his right arm, the 48-year-old carpenter reported yesterday.

At the suggestion of his physician, Nazelrod was scheduled to leave for Baltimore last night where he will be admitted to Johns Hopkins hospital.

Nazelrod said that an injured right arm and shoulder had failed to respond to treatment since he was beaten. The carpenter said he reported for work at a construction job in Ridgeley last week, but had to give it up.

Nazelrod, a charter member of the CIO construction workers union, was injured when assaulted by members of the AF of L. Four men were arrested and tried in Trial Magistrate's Court.

The carpenter received head and body injuries but a blow on the right shoulder was responsible for his most serious injury, he said yesterday.

Jr. Association Wants To Discuss Four-Year Plan

To Hear Speakers On Proposed Change In City Elections

The Four Year Plan, a proposal to change the term of city officials to four years instead of two, and to use funds saved in the eliminated election to increase salaries of the mayor and council, was presented to members of the Junior Association of Commerce last night at a meeting in Golden Gate Dining Room.

The Board of Directors unanimously adopted the plan two weeks ago, and presented it to members for their acceptance or rejection. After some discussion, during which it was evidenced that most of the members favor the idea, the project was tabled until the next meeting.

Pro and Con Speakers

Some members explained they favor the action of the board of directors and approve their interest in a plan to promote better civic government, but believe the matter should be discussed and studied further. It was requested by some members that expert opinion be presented to the Assocaition. The president Fred Z. Hetzel asked for a motion to consider the proposal at the next meeting and stated an effort will be made to have several representative citizens discuss the plan before the Association. It was suggested that if it is possible, at least one or two speakers should be heard who favor the plan as well as one or two who oppose the idea.

Introduce Entertainment

As a novelty feature of the meeting, W. Wallace Ashley, one of the association's new members, presented a group of the more talented members in several vocal selections. The vocalizers included Kenneth Beck, guest, John McAlpine, Randolph Millholland, William Cramer and George Werkmeister. "Ashley's Aggravating Aggregation", as they were dubed by one member, will make another appearance at the next meeting, at which time a contest will be held among the membership to determine an appropriate name for the group.

Make Presentation

As an expression of appreciation for his unselfish service, Leslie L. Helmer, past president was presented with a framed certificate from the organization. The presentation was made by Hetzel, his successor, and was signed by national and local association officers.

The Board of Directors will meet Monday at 7:30 p. m.

Peskin To Build One-Story Store

Replaces Building Destroyed by Fire

Morton W. Peskin, proprietor of Peskin's Shoe Store, 145 Baltimore street, yesterday was granted a permit to build a firesafe one-story building at 131-133 Baltimore street, on the site of the three-story structure destroyed by fire last January.

The new building is to have a 26-foot front on Baltimore street and will extend 125 feet back to Dexter place. The foundation will be of concrete and present stone with a thickness of twenty inches while the brick walls will have a thickness of thirteen inches at each side.

George F. Hazelwood Company is contractor for the new structure with plans furnished by Hymen Rosenberg, of Pittsburgh.

Cost of the building has been fixed at $15,000.

Permit Turned Down For Fuel Oil Tank

Application for a permit by J. L. Messick, manager of the Co-Operative Ice and Fuel Company, to install a 550 gallon fuel oil tank under the sidewalk along the Linden street side of the Poole garage building was repected yesterday by the city council.

Mr. Mesick was informed that a permit could be issued provided the tank was installed inside the building.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

It may have been because France has fallen, it may have been because of the rain, and it may have been merely because it was Monday, but Cumberland certainly was gloomy yesterday

Usually, when things seem bluest, something unexpected happens to cheer you up.

Somebody comes along with a good joke; somebody says or does some little thing to show you he's a true friend; a bedraggled little bird sings such a cheerful melody that he makes you ashamed; at worst, some tourist will be caught going the wrong way on a one-way street, which is enough to make you forget your own troubles for at least ten minutes.

Nothing like that happened yesterday. There wasn't a human smile the length of Baltimore street, the song birds must have been home nursing sore throats, and all the tourists were paying strict attention to business.

Only encouraging sight was a lean little newsboy with about twice as many papers as he could carry.

He was making progress down the street, however, and said he didn't need any help. He was asked what the news was and he said laconically, "Unconditional Surrender."

The writer surrendered and went to the movies.

The picture was "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

It was a picture that belongs to a rainy Monday afternoon, a picture that belongs to dark times when men's hearts are heavy.

It is also a picture that belongs to all America at all times—a picture that deserves to live in the hearts of men and women as long as freedom and right prevail.

The picture was great because Robert E. Sherwood's stage play was great. It was great for Raymond Massey's acting. No character in American history, either in his own lifetime or afterward, has ever been revealed more intimately, honestly, and forcefully than Abe Lincoln, the backwoods wit and the moody, stoop-shouldered politician from Illinois.

It was like Old Abe come back to talk with his people, a kind of fireside chat, but more full of homespun honesty than press agentry.

There was no flag waving in it, no straining for a patriotic point. But there was as much Americanism in Abe Lincoln's homely face as there is in the sight of Old Glory waving in the breeze—and this from a Southerner who has always before been just a little bit grudging Abe Lincoln his due.

Americans will feel a whole lot better about the present crisis we are facing if they see this picture.

Don't think, however, that this is one of those pictures into which patriotism and history are dragged to prop up a weak story. You know that kind of picture—which almost says, "This is the great Lincoln. Remember what you read about him in your school books and say Heil." The patriotism and historic significance of this picture not are mixed in with the acting—they pour out of it.

It is a good story—a very human drama. The movie crowds may like it and again they may not. There was only a handful of people at the mid-afternoon show yesterday. American movie crowds are used to having their drama made so darned obvious.

No one was laughing at Abe's droll jokes. It was delightful, the humor itself and the way Massey put it across. Maybe people prefer wisecracks, maybe they were laughing to themselves, and maybe there just wasn't enough of a crowd to make any noise. It was heart-warming stuff, worth a million wisecracks.

Abraham Lincoln has appeared in hundreds of movies. This picture is the real thing.

Six Girls Escape Serious Injury As Car Plunges Over Embankment

Six lively girls miraculously escaped serious injury yesterday when their driverless car bolted down the steep Magruder street hill, plunged over a fifteen-foot embankment and turned upside-down.

Two of the six youngsters were admitted to Allegany hospital for observation after their wild ride which started when the children in front released the emergency brake of the car parked near Wallace street.

Had Attended Church

The six, all who live in the Ellerslie vicinity, had just attended a class for children at the Assembly of God church on Walnut street. They were brought to their class in the car owned by Mrs. Stanley T. Daniels.

The minute the class was dismissed the children dashed to the car to wait for Mrs. Daniels who was talking with friends inside the church.

In front were Nancy and Mary Printy, ages 8 and 11, daughters of Mrs. Catherine Printy. Somehow, the emergency brake was released and the car started on its wild trip.

The Printy girls jumped clear of the car before it gained speed. The other four children went all the way as the car dashed down the Magruder hill, crossed Lee street, and rolled over the embankment to turn turtle on the railroad tracks near the Union Tanning company.

Girl Fractures Wrist

Most seriously injured were Pauline and June Emerick, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Emerick. Pauline, 11, suffered face injuries and a fractured left wrist. June, 12, received head injuries. Both children were admitted to the hospital for observation

A sister, Fay Emerick, 9, was treated for abrasions. Marjorie Daniels, 9, was treated for fact cuts and dismissed.

Extra Police Cruisers Aid Safety Campaign

In an effort to reduce traffic accidents to a minimum, the Cumberland Police Department yesterday inaugurated a campaign to rid the city streets of reckless drivers and those who insist on speeding by placing in service two cruiser cars instead of one on the 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., and the 1 a. m. to 9 a. m. shifts.

The suggestion was made by James Orr, commissioner of police and fire, and the order went into effect yesterday morning at 9 o'clock.

Heretofore two cruiser cars were in operation on the 5 p. m. to 1 a. m. shift, and only one machine was used on the other two shifts.

Under the new schedule now in effect the cars will be assigned as follows:

9 a. m. to 5 p. m., Officers Youngblood and Meister.

9 a. m. to 5 p. m., Officers Cassen and Daniels.

5 p. m. to 1 a. m., Officers Kelley and Condon.

5 p. m. to 1 a. m., Officers Crabtree and Stouffer.

1 a. m. to 9 a. m., Officers Daum and Hotchkiss.

1 a. m. to 9 a. m., Officers Manges and Deffenbaugh.

Chief of Police Oscar A. Eyerman, Assistant Chief John J. Treiber and Lieutenant James J. Van have charge of arranging the territory each cruiser car is to cover, and officers will be required to call headquarters every half hour and come to headquarters every hour.

Lunch period for all officers has been increased from twenty to thirty minutes with the chief officer having charge of regulations.

Traffic Case Heard Two Others Put Off

Pleading guilty to the charge of failing to give the right-of-way while operating a machine on Route 40, Thomas L. Smith, of Long, Md., yesterday paid $5 and costs in Trial Magistrates Court. The arrest was made last Friday by State Trooper B. C. Mason.

The hearing scheduled yesterday for Eugene R. Kelley, of 102 Humbird street, charged with reckless driving, operating a car without a license and leaving the scene of an accident, and Glenn C. Westfall, of 43 Humbird street, owner of the car operated by Kelley, who was charged with allowing an unlicensed person to drive, will be continued this morning at 9:30 o'clock in Trial Magistrates Court. The case was postponed because Harold Naughton, attorney, was unable to be present to represent his client.

Kelley and Westfall were released Sunday morning under bonds of $300 and $200 after a head-on collision with another car on River avenue near the canal bridge.

City police, who investigated, said Kelley was traveling toward Wiley Ford and the car operated by Clyde Walters, of Clearfield, Pa., was headed toward Cumberland when the crash occurred. Kelley abondoned the car he was driving and fled, police said. No charges were preferred against Walters.

Registrations Open For Bible School

The Salvation Army is conducting two Daily Vacation Bible Schools again this year, and both started yesterday morning. The sessions run from 9:00 to 11:45 a. m., from Monday through Friday for two weeks.

Brigadier Brice L. Philipson has charge of the one at the Citadel on North Mechanic street, and Captain Emma Myers is in charge at the Army hall on Virginia avenue.

In addition to the staff of Army workers at both places, there are three instructors at the Citadel and two at the South Cumberland hall, supplied by the WPA Youth Recreational Project, who have charge of the handicraft and also the recreational period.

The Brigadier announces that children who did not register yesterday may do so today or Wednesday.

Bookies Forfeit Bond, City Collects $400

The city made a good haul in Police Court yesterday morning when four men charged with "maintaining gambling tables" forfeited bonds of $100 each, as was expected.

The four men who failed to appear for hearings were:

Raymond Goss, of 63 Baltimore street; Harry Little, of 133 North Mechanic street; Elmer Craddock, of 157 Baltimore street; and George Hetzel, of 19 North Mechanic street.

Calls made by Detective Sergeant B. Frank Gaffney Saturday afternoon resulted in the four arrests.

Bridge Traffic Checked, Razing Plans Dropped

In view of the fact that a recent check-up showed that eighty-seven persons had traversed the iron foot bridge spanning the B&O railroad tracks between Piedmont avenue and Route 40 in thirty-eight hours spaced over a four-day period, the mayor and city council yesterday decided to repair the structure at a cost not exceeding $350.

At a meeting a month ago the council had contemplated abandoning the bridge but a recent petition signed by approximately one hundred residents of the North End urged the city to continue its upkeep.

Officials To Attend Water Conference

William J. Edwards, commissioner of water and light, Andrew Bender, water superintendent, Simon K. Carroll, city plumber, and Charles J. Bruce, superintendent of the dam, will attend the thirteenth annual convention of the Pennsylvania Water Works Operators Association, June 24, 25, and 26, at State College, Pa. The sessions will be held at Penn State College.

Mr. Bruce is retiring president of the association.

Two New Firms Given Permits

Permits were granted yesterday by the mayor and city council that will enable two new firms to start operations in Cumberland.

The application of Lillian M. Sickels, trading as the Cumberland Valley Leather company, to conduct a leather and shoe findings business at 36 North George street, was approved, as was one from Mrs. Helen Heacox, trading as Webb's Shoe store, to operate a retail men's and women's shoe business at 83 North Centre street.

City Votes To Pay Driscoll $50

After the order had been juggled like a hot potato for more than a month, the city fathers yesterday decided to pay Fred B. Driscoll, former clerk to the Board of Election Supervisors, the sum of $50 for special services in the recent city election.

In spite of Mayor Irvine's objections to the payment on the ground that the fee was exorbitant, the other members of the council, Commissioners Orr, Conlon, and Reynolds, voted to reimburse Mr Driscoll for his services. Commissioner William J. Edwards was absent.

Chamber Secretary On Vacation

Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Smith, daughter Catherine, and sons Edmund and William, are spending a three weeks vacation in the state of Maine. Mr. Smith is secretary of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce.

Florida Divorce Ruled No Good, Mauk Tries Again

Suit Is Brought Under Five-Year Separation Law

A Cumberland man whose efforts to procure a divorce led him into a legal labyrinth has decided to try it again.

Presley Wayne Mauk filed a petition in Circuit court asking for a divorce from his wife, Ida Marie Mauk. He already has one divorce, but it isn't any good in Maryland.

Mauk was granted a divorce last year by the Circuit court of Duvall county, Fla. However, Mrs. Mauk asked for a checkup on the validity of the Florida decree. The checkup resulted in a ruling from the Circuit court of Allegany county on May 22 to the effect that the decree wasn't worth the paper it's written on—not in Maryland, at least.

Consequently, Mauk, at the moment, is legally divorced in forty-seven states of the union, but not in the forty-eighth, which happens to be the one he lives in.

The petition filed yesterday stresses the point that according to the act of the Legislature passed in 1937, a petitioner is eligible for a decree in the event he and his wife have been voluntarily separated for five years.

James Alfred Avirett, counsel for the petition, drew attention to the fact that Mauk and his wife entered into a written separation agreement in 1935.

Mr. and Mrs. Mauk were married in Pittsburgh in 1929.

Kitchen Flooded, Damages Asked

Trouble Develops On Cumberland St.

Mrs. Ruth C. Molinari, of 32 Cumberland street, yesterday presented the city with a bill for $237.94, for damages to her furniture which she claims was caused by water flowing into her basement which serves as a kitchen and sitting room.

She said that the basement of her home has been flooded five times since the street in front was paved.

"Although I have lived here nine years water never before has entered my basement," wrote Mrs. Molinari, "and in view of this I believe repair work that was done by the street department, is responsible for the damage caused by the water.

Water entered the basement May 27 and 31 and June 7, 8 and 11, according to Mrs. Molinari.

The bill presented was for the furniture which is now in the garage and can be inspected at any time.

Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, expressed the opinion that a sewer pipe in the vicinity, believed to have been installed in 1870, broke and became clogged, causing the water from heavy rains to back up and flow into the basement. He added that an attempt was being made to locate the trouble and make repairs.

The matter was referred to the city attorney and engineer with instructions to make the best settlement possible.

Girl Scout Committee To Leave for Camp

The regular monthly meeting of the Girl Scout council will be held this afternoon at two o'clock at Scout headquarters.

Tomorrow morning at ten o'clock, Mrs. Weygand F. Doerner, the Juliette Low representative, and Mrs. A. L. Rogers will meet with the members of the Juliette Low committee at Scout headquarters.

Mayor Opposes Project On West Side

A petition containing twenty-four names of property owners of the 700 block on Greene street and Gephart Drive, yesterday asked the mayor and city council to provide a means of egress and ingress from an alley in the rear of their homes to Thompson avenue.

After Mayor Irine had characterized such a project as a waste of time and money, the matter was referred to the city engineer and street commissioner. The mayor stated that the cost would run the city approximately $8,000.

An ordinance providing for the sewering of Reservoir avenue from an alley north of Park View avenue to Constitution Park road was passed.

Divorce Is Granted

Associate Judge William A. Huster yesterday awarded a divorce to Mrs. Edna I. McIlwee from her husband, Benjamin C. McIlwee. The court awarded the plaintiff the right to assume her maiden name of Edna Peters.

Ridgeley Holding Special Election On WPA Project

Approval Is Sought For Extra Tax Levy For New Streets

A special election will be held in Ridgeley next Tuesday, June 25, for the purpose of making an addition to the municipal levy for the building, maintaining, and black-topping of the streets and alleys of the town.

Ridgeley has been granted a $62,000 WPA project and the election will decide whether or not the citizens of the town across the Potomac river are willing to accept an extra tax levy to raise $7,400, which has been fixed as to the town's share toward the project.

Town officials, anxious to take advantage of Federal funds while they are now available, point out that under the new levy the average property owner will be required to pay only $2.13 annually for a period of three years. The average property in Ridgeley is valued at $1,700. The extra tax is to be levied in the place of floating a bond issue.

Under the $62,000 project, the new streets to be laid in Ridgeley are River View avenue, Leo, Martin, Middle, Walnut, Mertens and John streets, and a portion of Carpenter avenue. Streets scheduled for resurfacing are Knobley from Central avenue to the junction at the state road, William, Jones, Pecan and Terry streets.

The city fathers stress the fact that Ridgeley never has laid any extra assessments or passed any bond issues and are hopeful that the citizens of the town will cast their vote in favor of the extra tax levy at next Tuesday's special election.

Polls at the Knobley Street school house will be open from 6:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m.

Beaten Worker May Lose Arm

CIO Carpenter Enters Hospital

Injuries received by Robert G. Nazelrod on April 4 when four members of a rival union assaulted him may result in his losing his right arm, the 48-year-old carpenter reported yesterday.

At the suggestion of his physician, Nazelrod was scheduled to leave for Baltimore last night where he will be admitted to Johns Hopkins hospital.

Nazelrod said that an injured right arm and shoulder had failed to respond to treatment since he was beaten. The carpenter said he reported for work at a construction job in Ridgeley last week, but had to give it up.

Nazelrod, a charter member of the CIO construction workers union, was injured when assaulted by members of the AF of L. Four men were arrested and tried in Trial Magistrate's Court.

Jr. Association Wants To Discuss Four-Year Plan

To Hear Speakers On Proposed Change In City Elections

The Four Year Plan, a proposal to change the term of city officials to four years instead of two, and to use funds saved in the eliminated election to increase salaries of the mayor and council, was presented to members of the Junior Association of Commerce last night at a meeting in Golden Gate Dining Room.

The Board of Directors unanimously adopted the plan two weeks ago, and presented it to members for their acceptance or rejection. After some discussion, during which it was evidenced that most of the members favor the idea, the project was tabled until the next meeting.

Pro and Con Speakers

Some members explained they favor the action of the board of directors and approve their interest in a plan to promote better civic government, but believe the matter should be discussed and studied further. It was requested by some members that expert opinion be presented to the Assocaition. The president Fred Z. Hetzel asked for a motion to consider the proposal at the next meeting and stated an effort will be made to have several representative citizens discuss the plan before the Association. It was suggested that if it is possible, at least one or two speakers should be heard who favor the plan as well as one or two who oppose the idea.

Introduce Entertainment

As a novelty feature of the meeting, W. Wallace Ashley, one of the association's new members, presented a group of the more talented members in several vocal selections. The vocalizers included Kenneth Beck, guest, John McAlpine, Randolph Millholland, William Cramer and George Werkmeister. "Ashley's Aggravating Aggregation", as they were dubed by one member, will make another appearance at the next meeting, at which time a contest will be held among the membership to determine an appropriate name for the group.

Make Presentation

As an expression of appreciation for his unselfish service, Leslie L. Helmer, past president was presented with a framed certificate from the organization. The presentation was made by Hetzel, his successor, and was signed by national and local association officers.

The Board of Directors will meet Monday at 7:30 p. m.

Peskin To Build One-Story Store

Replaces Building Destroyed by Fire

Morton W. Peskin, proprietor of Peskin's Shoe Store, 145 Baltimore street, yesterday was granted a permit to build a firesafe one-story building at 131-133 Baltimore street, on the site of the three-story structure destroyed by fire last January.

The new building is to have a 26-foot front on Baltimore street and will extend 125 feet back to Dexter place. The foundation will be of concrete and present stone with a thickness of twenty inches while the brick walls will have a thickness of thirteen inches at each side.

George F. Hazelwood Company is contractor for the new structure with plans furnished by Hymen Rosenberg, of Pittsburgh.

Cost of the building has been fixed at $15,000.

Application for a permit by J. L. Messick, manager of the Co-Operative Ice and Fuel Company, to install a 550 gallon fuel oil tank under the sidewalk along the Linden street side of the Poole garage building was repected yesterday by the city council.

Mr. Mesick was informed that a permit could be issued provided the tank was installed inside the building.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

It may have been because France has fallen, it may have been because of the rain, and it may have been merely because it was Monday, but Cumberland certainly was gloomy yesterday

Usually, when things seem bluest, something unexpected happens to cheer you up.

Somebody comes along with a good joke; somebody says or does some little thing to show you he's a true friend; a bedraggled little bird sings such a cheerful melody that he makes you ashamed; at worst, some tourist will be caught going the wrong way on a one-way street, which is enough to make you forget your own troubles for at least ten minutes.

Nothing like that happened yesterday. There wasn't a human smile the length of Baltimore street, the song birds must have been home nursing sore throats, and all the tourists were paying strict attention to business.

Only encouraging sight was a lean little newsboy with about twice as many papers as he could carry.

He was making progress down the street, however, and said he didn't need any help. He was asked what the news was and he said laconically, "Unconditional Surrender."

The writer surrendered and went to the movies.

The picture was "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

It was a picture that belongs to a rainy Monday afternoon, a picture that belongs to dark times when men's hearts are heavy.

It is also a picture that belongs to all America at all times—a picture that deserves to live in the hearts of men and women as long as freedom and right prevail.

The picture was great because Robert E. Sherwood's stage play was great. It was great for Raymond Massey's acting. No character in American history, either in his own lifetime or afterward, has ever been revealed more intimately, honestly, and forcefully than Abe Lincoln, the backwoods wit and the moody, stoop-shouldered politician from Illinois.

It was like Old Abe come back to talk with his people, a kind of fireside chat, but more full of homespun honesty than press agentry.

There was no flag waving in it, no straining for a patriotic point. But there was as much Americanism in Abe Lincoln's homely face as there is in the sight of Old Glory waving in the breeze—and this from a Southerner who has always before been just a little bit grudging Abe Lincoln his due.

Americans will feel a whole lot better about the present crisis we are facing if they see this picture.

Don't think, however, that this is one of those pictures into which patriotism and history are dragged to prop up a weak story. You know that kind of picture—which almost says, "This is the great Lincoln. Remember what you read about him in your school books and say Heil." The patriotism and historic significance of this picture not are mixed in with the acting—they pour out of it.

It is a good story—a very human drama. The movie crowds may like it and again they may not. There was only a handful of people at the mid-afternoon show yesterday. American movie crowds are used to having their drama made so darned obvious.

No one was laughing at Abe's droll jokes. It was delightful, the humor itself and the way Massey put it across. Maybe people prefer wisecracks, maybe they were laughing to themselves, and maybe there just wasn't enough of a crowd to make any noise. It was heart-warming stuff, worth a million wisecracks.

Abraham Lincoln has appeared in hundreds of movies. This picture is the real thing.

Six Girls Escape Serious Injury As Car Plunges Over Embankment

Six lively girls miraculously escaped serious injury yesterday when their driverless car bolted down the steep Magruder street hill, plunged over a fifteen-foot embankment and turned upside-down.

Two of the six youngsters were admitted to Allegany hospital for observation after their wild ride which started when the children in front released the emergency brake of the car parked near Wallace street.

Had Attended Church

The six, all who live in the Ellerslie vicinity, had just attended a class for children at the Assembly of God church on Walnut street. They were brought to their class in the car owned by Mrs. Stanley T. Daniels.

The minute the class was dismissed the children dashed to the car to wait for Mrs. Daniels who was talking with friends inside the church.

In front were Nancy and Mary Printy, ages 8 and 11, daughters of Mrs. Catherine Printy. Somehow, the emergency brake was released and the car started on its wild trip.

The Printy girls jumped clear of the car before it gained speed. The other four children went all the way as the car dashed down the Magruder hill, crossed Lee street, and rolled over the embankment to turn turtle on the railroad tracks near the Union Tanning company.

Girl Fractures Wrist

Most seriously injured were Pauline and June Emerick, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Emerick. Pauline, 11, suffered face injuries and a fractured left wrist. June, 12, received head injuries. Both children were admitted to the hospital for observation

A sister, Fay Emerick, 9, was treated for abrasions. Marjorie Daniels, 9, was treated for fact cuts and dismissed.

Teribly frightened, people inside the church hurried down the hill to the children in the badly damaged car.

Extra Police Cruisers Aid Safety Campaign

In an effort to reduce traffic accidents to a minimum, the Cumberland Police Department yesterday inaugurated a campaign to rid the city streets of reckless drivers and those who insist on speeding by placing in service two cruiser cars instead of one on the 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., and the 1 a. m. to 9 a. m. shifts.

The suggestion was made by James Orr, commissioner of police and fire, and the order went into effect yesterday morning at 9 o'clock.

Heretofore two cruiser cars were in operation on the 5 p. m. to 1 a. m. shift, and only one machine was used on the other two shifts.

Under the new schedule now in effect the cars will be assigned as follows:

9 a. m. to 5 p. m., Officers Youngblood and Meister.

9 a. m. to 5 p. m., Officers Cassen and Daniels.

5 p. m. to 1 a. m., Officers Kelley and Condon.

5 p. m. to 1 a. m., Officers Crabtree and Stouffer.

1 a. m. to 9 a. m., Officers Daum and Hotchkiss.

1 a. m. to 9 a. m., Officers Manges and Deffenbaugh.

Chief of Police Oscar A. Eyerman, Assistant Chief John J. Treiber and Lieutenant James J. Van have charge of arranging the territory each cruiser car is to cover, and officers will be required to call headquarters every half hour and come to headquarters every hour.

Lunch period for all officers has been increased from twenty to thirty minutes with the chief officer having charge of regulations.

Traffic Case Heard Two Others Put Off

Pleading guilty to the charge of failing to give the right-of-way while operating a machine on Route 40, Thomas L. Smith, of Long, Md., yesterday paid $5 and costs in Trial Magistrates Court. The arrest was made last Friday by State Trooper B. C. Mason.

The hearing scheduled yesterday for Eugene R. Kelley, of 102 Humbird street, charged with reckless driving, operating a car without a license and leaving the scene of an accident, and Glenn C. Westfall, of 43 Humbird street, owner of the car operated by Kelley, who was charged with allowing an unlicensed person to drive, will be continued this morning at 9:30 o'clock in Trial Magistrates Court. The case was postponed because Harold Naughton, attorney, was unable to be present to represent his client.

Kelley and Westfall were released Sunday morning under bonds of $300 and $200 after a head-on collision with another car on River avenue near the canal bridge.

City police, who investigated, said Kelley was traveling toward Wiley Ford and the car operated by Clyde Walters, of Clearfield, Pa., was headed toward Cumberland when the crash occurred. Kelley abondoned the car he was driving and fled, police said. No charges were preferred against Walters.

In addition to the staff of Army workers at both places, there are three instructors at the Citadel and two at the South Cumberland hall, supplied by the WPA Youth Recreational Project, who have charge of the handicraft and also the recreational period.

The Brigadier announces that children who did not register yesterday may do so today or Wednesday.

Bookies Forfeit Bond, City Collects $400

The city made a good haul in Police Court yesterday morning when four men charged with "maintaining gambling tables" forfeited bonds of $100 each, as was expected.

The four men who failed to appear for hearings were:

Raymond Goss, of 63 Baltimore street; Harry Little, of 133 North Mechanic street; Elmer Craddock, of 157 Baltimore street; and George Hetzel, of 19 North Mechanic street.

Calls made by Detective Sergeant B. Frank Gaffney Saturday afternoon resulted in the four arrests.

Bridge Traffic Checked, Razing Plans Dropped

In view of the fact that a recent check-up showed that eighty-seven persons had traversed the iron foot bridge spanning the B&O railroad tracks between Piedmont avenue and Route 40 in thirty-eight hours spaced over a four-day period, the mayor and city council yesterday decided to repair the structure at a cost not exceeding $350.

At a meeting a month ago the council had contemplated abandoning the bridge but a recent petition signed by approximately one hundred residents of the North End urged the city to continue its upkeep.

The sessions will be held at Penn State College.

Two New Firms Given Permits

Permits were granted yesterday by the mayor and city council that will enable two new firms to start operations in Cumberland.

The application of Lillian M. Sickels, trading as the Cumberland Valley Leather company, to conduct a leather and shoe findings business at 36 North George street, was approved, as was one from Mrs. Helen Heacox, trading as Webb's Shoe store, to operate a retail men's and women's shoe business at 83 North Centre street.

City Votes To Pay Driscoll $50

After the order had been juggled like a hot potato for more than a month, the city fathers yesterday decided to pay Fred B. Driscoll, former clerk to the Board of Election Supervisors, the sum of $50 for special services in the recent city election.

In spite of Mayor Irvine's objections to the payment on the ground that the fee was exorbitant, the other members of the council, Commissioners Orr, Conlon, and Reynolds, voted to reimburse Mr. Driscoll for his services. Commissioner William J. Edwards was absent.

Florida Divorce Ruled No Good, Mauk Tries Again

Suit Is Brought Under Five-Year Separation Law

A Cumberland man whose efforts to procure a divorce led him into a legal labyrinth has decided to try it again.

Presley Wayne Mauk filed a petition in Circuit court asking for a divorce from his wife, Ida Marie Mauk. He already has one divorce, but it isn't any good in Maryland.

Mauk was granted a divorce last year by the Circuit court of Duvall county, Fla. However, Mrs. Mauk asked for a checkup on the validity of the Florida decree. The checkup resulted in a ruling from the Circuit court of Allegany county on May 22 to the effect that the decree wasn't worth the paper it's written on—not in Maryland, at least.

Consequently, Mauk, at the moment, is legally divorced in forty-seven states of the union, but not in the forty-eighth, which happens to be the one he lives in.

The petition filed yesterday stresses the point that according to the act of the Legislature passed in 1937, a petitioner is eligible for a decree in the event he and his wife have been voluntarily separated for five years.

James Alfred Avirett, counsel for the petition, drew attention to the fact that Mauk and his wife entered into a written separation agreement in 1935.

Mr. and Mrs. Mauk were married in Pittsburgh in 1929.

Kitchen Flooded, Damages Asked

Trouble Develops On Cumberland St.

Mrs. Ruth C. Molinari, of 32 Cumberland street, yesterday presented the city with a bill for $237.94, for damages to her furniture which she claims was caused by water flowing into her basement which serves as a kitchen and sitting room.

She said that the basement of her home has been flooded five times since the street in front was paved.

"Although I have lived here nine years water never before has entered my basement," wrote Mrs. Molinari, "and in view of this I believe repair work that was done by the street department, is responsible for the damage caused by the water.

Water entered the basement May 27 and 31 and June 7, 8 and 11, according to Mrs. Molinari.

The bill presented was for the furniture which is now in the garage and can be inspected at any time.

Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, expressed the opinion that a sewer pipe in the vicinity, believed to have been installed in 1870, broke and became clogged, causing the water from heavy rains to back up and flow into the basement. He added that an attempt was being made to locate the trouble and make repairs.

The matter was referred to the city attorney and engineer with instructions to make the best settlement possible.

Tomorrow morning at ten o'clock, Mrs. Weygand F. Doerner, the Juliette Low representative, and Mrs. A. L. Rogers will meet with the members of the Juliette Low committee at Scout headquarters.

Mayor Opposes Project On West Side

A petition containing twenty-four names of property owners of the 700 block on Greene street and Gephart Drive, yesterday asked the mayor and city council to provide a means of egress and ingress from an alley in the rear of their homes to Thompson avenue.

After Mayor Irine had characterized such a project as a waste of time and money, the matter was referred to the city engineer and street commissioner. The mayor stated that the cost would run the city approximately $8,000.

An ordinance providing for the sewering of Reservoir avenue from an alley north of Park View avenue to Constitution Park road was passed.

Divorce Is Granted

Associate Judge William A. Huster yesterday awarded a divorce to Mrs. Edna I. McIlwee from her husband, Benjamin C. McIlwee. The court awarded the plaintiff the right to assume her maiden name of Edna Peters.
